Soviet Offers Half Billion In Trade for Recognition

Immediate Purchases to Hinge on Credits in Event of Accord.

Litvinoff to Sail Late This Month

Russian Super-Salesman to Visit London and Paris on Trip.

Moscow, Oct. 21 (U.P.).—Maxim Litvinoff, Russia's most famous negotiator in the field of international bargaining, will leave for the United States late this month, armed with $500,000,000 worth of orders for American products as bait for American recognition of the Soviet Government.

For Litvinoff, super-salesman of Soviet agreements, the voyage will be a selling trip in more than one capital. He plans, it was understood tonight, to stop in Paris and London, where important trade negotiations are pending, spending a day or two in each city to spur Soviet agents.

Arriving in the United States, either from France or England, he stands ready to hold out at once the allure of an immediate, brisk Soviet trade, "if reasonable credits are offered."

Billion Dollars in Orders.

It was recalled that during the world economic conference, Litvinoff announced his government was prepared to purchase abroad $1,000,000,000 worth of commodities, over and above products provided by the Russian five-year plan.

A prominent Soviet leader informed the United Press that at least half of this amount would go to the United States.

There are strings to [illegible]fer, of course. Such tremendous obligations could not be financed with ready cash. A system of long term credits would have to be arranged.

The flotation of such a credit in itself would make diplomatic relations between the two Nations imperative. The United States Government, it was pointed out, already has sanctioned one credit of $4,000,000, even without the resumption of such relations. But, as the Soviet spokesman said, "it could hardly lend anybody $100,000,000 without being in a position to speak to the borrower once in a while."

Triumph for Litvinoff.

The success of the preliminary negotiations, which finally reached the definite proposals for a conference contained in President Roosevelt's note of invitation, were considered another triumph for the spectacular Litvinoff, who today was mentioned here as a possible recipient of the Nobel Prize for his efforts at peace.

The 57-year-old diplomat has emerged triumphantly from almost

Deputies Snub Daladier Plea

Premier, Facing Defeat, Plans Last-Minute Budget Appeal.

Paris, Oct. 21 (AP).—Premier Edouard Daladier, his back to the wall and fighting for a budget-balancing and anti-inflation program, against almost certain defeat, will make a desperate last-minute appeal tomorrow to the Chamber of Deputies.

Apparent indifference was accorded his warnings today that inflation loomed if the budget remained unbalanced, and despite the continued weakness of the French franc, government parties wrangled all day with a solution more remote than ever.

The Left Radicals, whose 55 votes are normally needed by the cabinet, decided definitely against Daladier's measures and urged the formation of a concentration government.

The government demands 5,424,000,000 francs in new taxes and economies—including reductions in the pay of civil servants and in veterans' pensions—but the committee accepted only 4,777,000,000 francs (more than $260,700,000).

384-Mile Speed Wins Plane Race

Ancona, Italy, Oct. 21 (AP).—Capt. Pietro Scapinelli today won the Bleriot Cup for airplane racers, completing a flight of 328 kilometers (203.688 miles) in 31 minutes 44 1-5 seconds, at an average speed of 619.3 kilometers (384.5853 miles) per hour.

Scapinelli used the Macchi seaplane, powered with 2,400-horsepower engine, which was used when Lieut. Col. Guglielmo Cassinelli established a world record of 393.33 miles an hour over a 100-kilometer course here October 8.

Soviet Sends Turks Gift.

Istanbul, Turkey, Oct. 21 (AP).—Soviet Russia has sent five military airplanes as a gift to Turkey on the occasion of the republic's tenth anniversary.

U. S. Marshals Half Billion Soviet Claims

Litvinoff Is Expected to Reach Here in About Two Weeks.

(Associated Press.)

The Government, it was disclosed last night, has marshaled a bulging sheaf of Russo-American facts and figures, including claims running past the $500,000,000 mark, in expectation of opening recognition discussion with Soviet Russia during the first week in November.

Although definite word from Moscow was lacking at the State Department, there was an official expectation that Maxim Litvinoff, foreign affairs commissar, would reach Washington in about two weeks.

The prospect of early recognition of the 16-year-old Communist state, opening wide new trade possibilities and already nudging some market prices upward, stirred activity at the State, Commerce and Agriculture Departments in rounding up data previously prepared for presentation to President Roosevelt.

Trade to Be Issue.

There were indications that the Roosevelt-Litvinoff conversations would bear more heavily upon trade matters than upon the claims and counter claims that have rested dormant between the two countries for around a score of years.

Export possibilities of more than $100,000,000 in cotton and heavy machinery, including rail equipment, already have been brought to the fore. Since the buying power of the Soviet rests solely with its government, Mr. Roosevelt was expected in some quarters to come down to dollars and cents in this regard.

William C. Bullitt, special assistant to Secretary Hull, was regarded by some as likely to emerge as a right-hand man of the President during the Litvinoff conversations. Bullitt first went into Russia on a special investigative mission for President Wilson in 1919.

Data Gathered in Russia.

He went into the Soviet state again in May, 1932, and gathered some Russian data for Mr. Roosevelt during more recent trips

Mt. Rainier Erases Ancient Blue Laws

Votes 412 to 154 to Allow Sunday Amusements.

By a vote of 412 to 154, Mount Rainier yesterday wiped out its ancient blue laws. The vote was taken to determine sentiment on Sunday moving picture shows.

Among the events allowed on Sunday under the new law are concerts, lectures, musical entertainments, and sports.

The vote by wards was as follows: First, 127 for, 54 against; second, 66 for, 28 against; third, 139 for, 58 against, and fourth, 80 for, 14 against.

Experts Rule District Dry After Repeal

Some Leniency, However, in Prosecutions Held Probable.

Department of Justice experts, after weeks of wrestling with the problem of the status of the District of Columbia after repeal of the eighteenth amendment, have agreed the Volstead act shall remain in force here and that liquor prosecutions shall go on as usual.

It is anticipated the amendment will be repealed December 5. Congress meets January 3, but there is no assurance of immediate District legislation.

It is confidently believed, however, that the Justice Department will exercise a certain amount of leniency with District liquor violators, in conformity with its expected policy of leniency with all pre-repeal offenders.

Policy to Be Announced.

Announcement of policy for the District of Columbia will be made by Attorney General Cummings when the President receives the exhaustive report from Treasury, Justice, State, and Commerce Department experts, expected to be forwarded to the White House next week.

The Supreme Court has handed down two decisions which proponents of both a wet and a dry District have cited as authority for whichever view they hold. One would lend weight to the opinion that repeal does not affect existing legislation for the District. The other supports the theory that the District should be included in any national legislation.

While the alcoholic fate of the Capital was being decided, Representative Sam B. Hill (Democrat), Washington, chairman of the Ways and Means Subcommittee, which will start considering tax measures Monday, predicted liquor probably will be taxed $2.60 a gallon.

$500,000,000 Needed.

He pointed out that revenue from domestic distilled spirits must bring the Government $500,000,000 annually if the "nuisance taxes" on bank checks and gasoline are to be lifted.

The $2.60 figure is considered in the subcommittee, he said, "as the rate which will bring in the greatest amount of revenue and not open the gates to bootleggers by mak-

Second Cuban Train Wrecked by Derailing

Havana, Oct. 21 (U.P.).—A second passenger train running from Santiago to Havana was derailed today at Jovellanos, in Matanzas Province, by unidentified persons who opened a switch.

The engine and a baggage car left the rails, but no one was injured.

Austria Jails Nazi Prince As Plotter; Wife Guarded

Vienna, Oct. 21 (AP).—Austria's fighting 5-foot chancellor, Engelbert Dollfuss, locked a Nazi princess in her romantic Carinthian castle tonight "for an indefinite period" and threw princely husband into jail for six weeks.

Both of them—Prince von Sachsen-Meiningen and his wife, Princess Margot—were declared guilty of a Nazi conspiracy against Austria.

Police who arrested the prince in Carinthia because his automobile carried a Hitlerite flag in the streets of Klagenfurt, revealed they confiscated many incriminating documents, including a letter to Dr. Paul Joseph Goebbels, the German propaganda minister.

Princess a Prisoner.

It was officially emphasized that Princess Margot will be a prisoner in her own castle, and will not be permitted to receive visitors or communicate with the outside world.

"And," it was added pointedly, "care will be taken to keep the German consul away."

While the German prince languished in Klagenfurt jail, another prince, an Austrian, Ernst Rudiger von Starhemberg, a Fascist leader and vice chairman of Chancellor Dollfuss' patriotic front, was flailed oratorically by a former cabinet member, Karl Hartleb, in the Styrian Diet.

Elect Governor.

The legislature was convoked in a special session to elect a successor to Gov. Rintelen, who will become Austria's minister to Rome.

"This Starhemberg, who feels himself the herald of a new Austria and talks of eliminating democracy and corruption, first squandered the inheritance of his forefathers, then borrowed heavily of the Jews, and now, because they will not lend him more, lets himself be financed from abroad," Hartleb vehemently asserted.

Dictator Idea Hit at College By Roosevelt

Cooperation of Nation Urged in Address at Chestertown.

American Plan Is Best, He Says, Accepting Honorary Degree.

Chestertown, Md., Oct. 21 (AP). President Roosevelt pointed the Nation to the path of cooperation as the way to recovery "without a dictator" in a talk here today after he accepted an honorary degree from old Washington College.

With obvious disdain of "some countries of dictatorship" and their "five and ten year plans," Mr. Roosevelt told the people of Eastern Shore Maryland gathered here:

"In this country, which has not a dictator, we can move farther toward our goal in a shorter space of time without giving it a definite term of years."

Calls for Nation's Help.

However, he called the Nation to the "colonial spirit of cooperation" as the way out and warned that while "we have accomplished much in the last few months, we can't reach the goal in a couple of months."

The folks of this early colonial territory who crowded the spacious campus lawn interrupted with applause.

Mr. Roosevelt, who is going to talk to the country tomorrow night, cast aside an intention not to speak today as he received a rousing welcome from the audience. He spoke extemporaneously.

Significantly he also recalled the teachings of his Harvard University president, Charles W. Eliot, on the proposition of distribution of wealth.

Minority Controls Wealth.

"In wealth and education," said Mr. Roosevelt, "there is represented only a minority of the people. As he said, the wider a distribution of wealth, in the proper way, the more we can make it possible for the men and women of this land to have the necessities of life in such shape that they will not have to lie awake at night worrying where the food for tomorrow is going to come from. Then we will have the security that is necessary for the progress of this country."

Mr. Roosevelt donned an academic gown before he walked to the wooden stand amid the gowned representatives of the universities of the Nation.

Gilbert Wilcox Meade was inducted as the nineteenth president of the 151-year-old college before the Chief Executive. Later Dr. Meade slipped the purple stole signifying the degree of doctor of laws, over the bared head of the President.

Mrs. Roosevelt and Gov. Albert C. Richie, of Maryland, stood immediately behind Mr. Roosevelt.

President Roosevelt returned to the White House last night after a leisurely trip by yacht and automobile from Chestertown.

Soviet Official Slain in Poland

Suspect Jailed by Police Admits Membership in Ukranian Group.

Lwow, Poland, Oct. 21 (AP).—A man whose name police kept secret, but who said he was a member of an Ukrainian organization, today shot and killed Alexander Mailow, a Soviet consular officer, in the consular building. Another official named Dzugaia was wounded in both hands.

The assailant appeared at the consulate and asked to see the consul. When Mailow asked him his reason, the man drew a revolver and fired. The vice consul called the police from an upper floor. The officers climbed through a window, as the door was locked, and seized the killer. Numerous arrests of young Ukrainians in the city followed.

Lwow authorities expressed regrets to the Soviet consul and the Warsaw foreign office expressed its regrets to the Russian minister.

Berlin, Oct. 21 (AP).—A Wolff's (German) dispatch from Warsaw today gave the name of the man who killed Alexander Mailow, a Soviet consular officer at Lwow, Poland, as Nicholas Lmyk.

Graf Zeppelin Reports Over Fortaleza, Brazil

New York, Saturday, Oct. 21 (U.P.). The Radio Marine Corporation received a wireless message from the German dirigible Graf Zeppelin today saying the ship was over Fortaleza, Brazil, at 6:15 a. m., G. M. T.

Fortaleza is on the seacoast 400 miles northwest of Pernambuco, Brazil, which the dirigible left last night for a flight to Chicago.

2 Die as Plane Dives Into Heart of Venice

Venice, Italy, Oct. 21 (AP).—A military seaplane carrying two Italian officers plunged into the heart of Venice, on the bank of the Rio Nuovo (New Canal), today, killing both men.

The motor became detached from the plane and splashed into the canal. There were no other victims.

Pay Increase For Strikers Aim of U. S.

Officials Act to Reopen Codes, End Textile Mills' Strife.

Richberg Assails Labor and Industry for Balking NRA.

In an attempt to relieve the industrial strike situation, administration officials yesterday sought to reopen NRA codes to obtain higher minimum wages and simultaneously unloosed an attack upon recalcitrant labor and industrial leaders accused of fomenting strife.

First code revision activity from within the administration is expected this week as a result of a petition from strikers asking President Roosevelt to grant modification hearings on the textile agreements.

Supporting the code revision plans was word from Robert F. Wagner, of the National Labor Board, and Sidney Hillman, member of the NRA Labor Advisory Board, that the minimums should be raised to provide relief from silk and rayon workers' strikes in New Jersey, Pennsylvania and New England, affecting 65,000 workers.

Richberg Hits Both Sides.

Donald R. Richberg, chief counsel for the NRA, asserted the activities of many employers and employes are handicapping recovery, but that up to date NRA's work "has been a success far beyond any reasonable expectation of what could be accomplished in four months."

However, he pointed out, it was not possible to obtain "the complete annihilation in a few months of all the destructive forces that have been accumulating in decades of planless, anarchistic industrial government."

"As rapid marches to spectacular triumphs are succeeded by necessarily slower progress in moving great masses of people forward," he said, "the cheering chorus naturally subsides and we begin to hear the criticisms of those who have not yet shared increased employment and better wages, and those who expected a miraculous end of the depression in 90 days.

Rebukes Employers.

"The representatives of large and powerful associations of employers who heartily commended the purpose of the administration in granting the industrial managers the privilege of association and joint action, free from the restrictions of the antitrust laws, protested with equal vigor against the grant of the same privilege of association and self-protection to their employes.

"It also was unhappily evidenced that many labor organizations were inclined to see in the legislation more of an opportunity to gain an advantage in a continuing war between capital and labor than an opportunity for both parties to find new means of cooperating for common benefit.

"It is most unfortunate that strikes are constantly impending our progress on the road to recovery. It is equally unfortunate that many irreconcilable employers are fomenting and making difficult the settlement of such strikes by using every available means of evading the requirements of the law.

Labor Also Scolded.

"It is most unfortunate that labor organizations, in many instances, waste their energies and exasperate the public by fighting with each other instead of working together for common good."

Involved in the overtures for code revision was the first open move by the American Federation of Labor in carrying out its convention agreement to seek not only higher code minimums, but also minimums for skilled workers in various grades.

Negotiations have been carried forward by Wagner and Hillman to end the textile strikes, with Northern employers agreeing to give their weavers $27 a week average pay if Governmental assurance can be had that all other mills in the industry will pay $22. The $27 pay is agreeable to most of the strikers, but Hillman believes it would be impossible to obtain agreements to pay $22 throughout the remainder of the industry without code revision.

Governor Guarded Against Kidnapers

Herring of Iowa Menaced in $75,000 Plot.

Des Moines, Iowa, Oct. 21 (U.P.). Gov. Clyde L. Herring, threatened in a $75,000 kidnap plot, has been carrying a gun and is under constant guard of two detectives, it was revealed today.

Gov. Herring made a fortune as first State distributor of Ford automobiles. At one time he was reputedly a millionaire. The 53-year-old executive, first Democratic governor of Iowa in 50 years, attempted to make light of the plot.

Polly Moran Married To Los Angeles Lawyer

Las Vegas, Nev., Oct. 21 (U.P.). Polly Moran, one of the screen's best-known character actresses, was married here today to Martin Malone, Los Angeles attorney. Justice of the Peace Frank M. Ryan pronounced the marriage vows in the presence of a few close friends.

Leader in Farm Strike Asks Labor to Aid Cause; Revolt Brings U. S. Action

Nation Awaiting Message From Chief Executive Sunday Night.

Loans Contemplated for Crops Still in Hands of Producers.

Rapid developments emphasizing the plight of the American farmer yesterday hastened the Government's campaign to help him.

Action, demands, explanations, investigation and manifestoes came with machine-gun precision while the Nation awaited President Roosevelt's heart-to-heart talk with the people over the radio at 10 o'clock tonight.

The farm situation is claiming close attention of the administration. Discussion involves plans for lending farmers money on wheat and corn. Arrangements already have been made to lend Southern farmers up to 10 cents a pound on cotton. The new program is expected to put the Northern farmer in the same position.

A definite quotation per bushel of corn and per bushel of wheat probably will be fixed and farmers will be loaned up to that figure. This would peg the price of grain.

Farm Strike Starts.

Meanwhile, the farm strike in the West started at noon yesterday. It will be several days before the effect can be determined. Striking farmers are pledged to withhold all produce from markets.

It is estimated the Farmers Holiday Association, which called the strike, has 2,000,000 members. However, this is not an accurate estimate of the number of farmers striking, as many nonmembers are expected to cooperate. The farmers are pledged to withhold their products until prices reach the cost of production. Gov. Langer of North Dakota has the same purpose for his wheat embargo.

The grain loan proposal being discussed by Secretary Wallace, George N. Peek, agricultural adjustment administrator, and others would provide that funds be supplied by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation and that the Commodity Credit Corporation, formed to handle cotton loans, would furnish the working machinery.

The loan plan would affect only about half the wheat farmers. It is estimated 50 per cent of the present crop already has left the hands of the farmers. The loans would be available principally to farmers in the northern part of the wheat belt.

Tax Increased Urged.

There has been some demand for an increase in the wheat processing tax from 30 cents a bushel to 44 cents. Some opposition has developed.

Besides the corn and wheat plan, the Department of Agriculture is considering loans to cane and beet growers.

The loan might approximate $6 a ton, it was said, and the processed sugar could be held as security. A processing tax on sugar is being studied. Suggestions have been made that the levy be one-tenth of a cent a pound. Money raised could be used to repay the Government.

Hawaiian and Puerto Rican sugar growers may be eligible to borrow.

The farmer's plight also is being connected with discussion of the retail code. It is proposed that stores in towns with a population of 2,500 and less, or possibly of 5,000 and less, be exempt from the price mark-up provisions of the code.

$25,000,000 Will Be Split By Army, Navy

Funds for Motorization and Plane Construction Far Under Estimate.

The Public Works Administration yesterday authorized an allotment of $25,000,000 to the Army and Navy for motorization of troops and for airplane construction, turning down temporarily a request for a much larger sum.

In addition, $6,412,690 was set aside for other Federal projects scattered throughout the country.

Army officials refused to disclose how much was aksed from the Public Works Administration. After learning they were to receive $10,000,00 for motorization and divide $15,000,0000 for air service with the Navy, they said a restudy of the whole situation would be made.

Plane Needs Told.

A meeting of the joint board of the War and Navy Departments will b called to divide the $15,000,000, it was learned. Both Army and Navy officials said the sum was inadequate to meet construction needs of the services for new airplanes.

The Navy's five-year airplane program has been completed for many months, but with construction of more than 40 new warships under way or ordered, requirements of the service will call for nearly 400 new planes.

Navy officers said they need 290 new planes for the cruisers and other line ships being built or to be built. They also will need 114 for the U. S. S. Ranger, a new plane carrier to be built. It was estimated that 290 planes of the types needed would cost at least $9,000,000, and that the $15,000,000, roughly would pay for 400 planes.

First Cavalry Moved.

The Army motorization allotment, which is in addition to previous allotments from the PWA for various uses in the War Department, will aid in substituting motor power for horse and mule power. The Army has not disclosed its plans for motorizing infantry sections, artillery and supply trains, but motorization of cavalry units already is under way.

The First Cavalry Regiment was moved from the Mexican border to Camp Knox, Ky., and converted into a mechanical unit. The regiment's equipment includes armored motor cars and fast tanks. Modernization of another cavalry regiment is on the Army's modernization program.

Holiday Association Chief Strives to Enlist Wide Support.

Growers' "Last Chance" to Escape Slavery, Reno Declares.

Des Moines, Oct. 21 (AP).—Milo Reno, president of the National Farmers Holiday Association, tonight carried his plea for support of a national farm strike to the doors of industrial labor.

Announcing his departure to Chicago for a conference Monday with A. F. Whitney, of Cleveland, president of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen, Reno said "every effort would be made to enlist the moral support of all other groups of society."

To the cause of the nonbuying, nonselling strike, the fiery holiday leader summoned the Nation's 30,000,000 farm population.

In what numbers farmers would join the holiday movement or stick by the Federal Government's relief program was not known.

Appealing for support from members and nonmembers, Reno asserted the strike was a battle to determine "whether the farmer shall become a peasant, the menial slaves of the usurers and the industrialists," or retain the independence "inherited from his fathers."

Price Increase, Goal.

In a letter to State association presidents, Reno advised that "schools, churches, civic institutions, labor groups can be informed, not only as to the justness of the farmer's cause, but also that every business will suffer if the farmers' purchasing power is not restored, and that the life of the Republic is, at this time, hanging in the balance."

In Sioux City, 13 months ago the center of farm strike troubles in which one trucker was killed, all was quiet today. County Holiday association leaders said they had not been officially notified of the strike and would not act until they had heard from Reno.

Nebraska's Holiday president, H. C. Parmenter, conferred with associates at Omaha to plan a curtailment of that city's milk supply.

Picketing would be used, he said, "unless we have the proper cooperation.

Railroads Defy Ban.

Although Gov. William Langer's wheat embargo in North Dakota remained nominally in effect, railroads continued to transport wheat. Sheriffs, ordered to enforce the ban, awaited formal instructions.

From Nebraska came Gov. Charles Bryan's prediction the strike might obtain higher produce prices in shorter time than the Federal Government's program. He sought as-

Military Planes Rushed to Sonora Where Wild Horde Is Massing.

Nogales, Ariz., Oct. 21 (U.P.).—Half a dozen Mexican military airplanes have been rushed to the state of Sonora in fear of a Yaqui Indian uprising.

The United Press learned today that the planes were dispatched to Guaymas, where 800 warriors are concentrating on Bacatet Mountain.

The Southern Pacific de Mexico has doubled its soldier guard on trains passing through Yaqui country, it was announced, while the Mexican government is discouraging motorists traveling in the district.

Unrest in the wilder parts of Sonora has been noted for several weeks, and hundreds of Indians were reported gathering in the mountains near Guayamas.

Whitney Denies Pecora Charge Of Holding Out

Declares Stock Exchange Is Willing to Help Senate Inquiry.

Richard Whitney, president of the New York Stock Exchange, yesterday declared unjustified the charge of Ferdinand Pecora, counsel to the Senate Banking and Currency subcommittee, that the exchange had refused to cooperate with the committee in sending questionnaires to its committee.

Whitney said the exchange is willing to send the committee's revised questionnaire to its members with the recommendation that they answer it. His statement was issued in New York to the Associated Press.

Meanwhile, Harvey C. Couch, Reconstruction Finance Corporation director, offered to go before the Senate Banking Committee to explain a personal letter to C. S. McCain, chairman of the Chase National Bank governing board, uncovered by committee investigators.

"There is nothing in my relationships with Mr. McCain that I desire to hide," Couch said.

He said the letter had to do with an invitation from McCain to reorganize a group of Insull properties. Couch said he rejected the offer.

Couch Quiz Is Hinted.

Asked if he would call Couch before the committee, Chairman Duncan U. Fletcher said Couch "might want to appear."

Whitney's statement followed a remark by Pecora Friday to the effect that he saw no occasion for further inviting the cooperation of the stock exchange.

"We asked their cooperation and we didn't get it," he said. "So now we will proceed without it."

Whitney replied that Pecora had sought to have the exhange compel its members to answer the questionnaire.

Terms Proposal Unfair.

"This would have deprived the members of the exchange of the right to assert, if they saw fit, that the information required of them was not proper or relevant to the pending investigation," Whitney said. The exchange obviously could not deprive its members of this right, which is one given to every citizen by the Constitution of the United States.

"At the hearing Friday Mr. Pecora sought to make it appear that the exchange had even refused to send the questionnaire to its members with a recommendation that they answer it voluntarily. There was nothing in Mr. Pecora's letter to me to indicate that any such procedure was contemplated and in fact the suggestion that the answers be made voluntarily was first publicly made by Senator Fletcher, the chairman of the Banking and Currency Committee, at the hearing Friday in Washington.

"When I read the transcript of the minutes containing Senator Fletcher's suggestion I immediately wrote to him that the exchange would adopt it.

Questionnaire Revised.

"I am advised that the questionnaire is being further revised and materially modified as a result of conferences held Friday between members of Mr. Pecora's staff and representative members of the exchange who had been subpenaed to appear in Washington.

"I have written Senator Fletcher that when the new questionnaire is agreed upon, the exchange will send the revised questionnaire to its members with a recommendation that they answer it, if that is the wish of the Senate committee."

The tilt between Whitney and Pecora started shortly after the original questionnaire was submitted to the exchange. Whitney finally told Pecora that the exchange would not ask its members to answer it because the exchange regarded it as an invasion of the rights of members with respect to their confidential relations with the customers.

Disclosure that the letter from Couch to the Chase Bank official, bearing a 1932 date, had been found in the Chase National Bank files came while the committee was in week-end adjournment.

Pecora in New York.

Pecora and his investigating staff were in New York conferring with brokers on last-minute changes in the questionnaire the committee will circulate without the exchange's assistance.

Tomorrow the committee plans to resume examination of Albert H. Wiggin, former chairman of the Chase board, and his successor, W. W. Aldrich, on $80,000,000 of Chase National Bank loans to Cuba for public works financing.

Activities of Couch before he entered the Reconstruction Finance Corporation recently were referred to before in connection with $300,000 in loans advanced to him by Dillon, Read & Co. on collateral. On December 31, 1931, he still owed $150,000, the record showed.

On Morgan Favored List.

Previously, Couch had been listed as one of the purchasers of "bargain stock" from J. P. Morgan & Co. The evidence showed he obtained 500 shares of Niagara and Hudson stock in August, 1929, at $25 a share when it was listed at $36.

Asked last night about the McCain letter, Couch said it was "purely a personal one" to a lifelong friend and business associate.

"He had called me on the telephone to learn if I would consider resigning from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation board to undertake the reorganization of a group of Insull properites," Couch said.

"I told him I had to complete the job I had begun for the Government and would not be able to accept his offer. I explained further that when I finished here I expect to return to Arkansas to continue to extend such aid as I can in the development of that section.

"Neither the letter nor the telephone conversation had anything to do with the Reconstruction Finance Corporation."

Milk "Trust" Scored as New Code Is Asked

Crosby Wires 11 Governors Plea for Consumers and Producers.

Aid of 11 governors and mayors of 13 principals cities in forming an association to demand a single, National code for the milk industry was called for yesterday by Representative Charles N. Crosby, of Pennsylvania. Crosby demanded that a top price of 8 cents a quart to consumers be set and producers be allowed 4 cents.

In a telegraphed appeal, he charged that "tricky and dishonest basic price and surplus quota" provisions in codes drafted by "former National Dairy trust employes in the A. A. A. and other Federal recovery agencies" allow exorbitant price gouges to continue in milk distribution. He asserted that the "local probe by the Senate Milk Committee shows the National Dairy trust gets a spread of 6 to 11 cents per quart in Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, Chicago, Baltimore and Washington areas."

Says Producers Are Bankrupt.

The appeal was sent to governors of Minnesota, New York, Wisconsin, Iowa, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Michigan, Missouri Kansas, Illinois and Nebraska. It also went to the mayors of New York, Detroit, Cincinnati, Cleveland, Buffalo, Pittsburgh, Baltimore, Philadelphia Syracuse, Los Angeles, San Francisco, Salt Lake City and New Haven. Copies were sent to Senator Arthur Capper, William Randolph Hearst and Representative Henry T. Rainey.

Crosby telegraphed that "milk producers are bankrupt and consumer demands low due to high profits taken by the National dairy trust. Producers' and consumers' rights are neither respected nor protected.

Will Demand Single Code.

The association being formed will demand a single code, he said, under which basic price and surplus system will be abolished and milk and dairy standards readjusted. The code also will provide Federal health inspection by Federal personnel, a minimum price to producers of 4 cents a quart and a top price to consumers of 8 cents. Milk for relief purposes would be set at 6 cents.

"The Chicago Mayor and city council join the demand for a general milk code for the entire country and a Senate probe of the National dairy trust," he wired.

Producers Hit Code.

Declaring that the proposed milk code offered no protection to them, members of the Maryland and Virginia Milk Producers Association, in a special meeting at Fairfax Courthouse, opposed its approval as now drawn by the Agricultural Adjustment Committee.

A resolution asking the board of directors of the producers' association to defer any action on a code until local producers have a chance to draw up one suitable to a majority of the membership was unanimously adopted.

The proposed code was objectionable, declared A. Smith Bowman, of Sunset Hills, in that it made the distributors a party to it. He said they should not be included if the code was to help producers.

A single class of milk with one price was advocated by Dr. F. W. Huddleson. He said he believed that part of the code providing for three separate classes of milk was merely a provision to dupe local producers.

U. S. May Grant Loans to Farmers

This would tend to keep prices lower in rural communities.

Debt Concessions Sought.

Farm-debt conciliation committees have been appointed or will be named at once in 15 States, Henry Morgenthau, jr., governor of the Farm Credit Administration, announced. The committees are being appointed by governors.

The committees, working through county organizations, will seek to bring about voluntary compromises between creditors and debtors in cases of excessive indebtedness. It is expected that in many instances the indebtedness can be satisfied by loans though the Federal Land Bank or the Farm Credit Administration.

Gov. Morgenthau pointed out that in many instances debtors can operate their farms more efficiently than others, if mortgages were foreclosed.

Inflationists are taking advantage of the farm revolt to push their claims. Senator Norris reiterated his belief that currency expansion was the peg on which an immediate increase in farm prices must be hung.

Norris Reiterates Plea.

In reply to a request from Labor, official publication of the railway unions, Senator Norris said:

"I wired the President I thought he could accomplish this desired result (restoring purchasing power to the farmer) by issuing new money instead of new interest-bearing securities in his call for the refunding of the $1,500,000,000 of fourth Liberty loan bonds.

"This would save the taxpayers interest on the bonds, which amounts to more than $65,000,000 a year. It would increase the currency by the amount of the bonds canceled and would be a step in restoring the purchasing power of the farmer.

"I am whole-heartedly following the President, but I am earnestly advising him that, in my judgment, expansion of the currency is necessary."

Meanwhile, a definite statement of what he intends to do with respect to money was asked of the President by Senator Hastings, of Delaware. He asserted business was "disturbed and distressed" by its lack of knowledge of the President's intention regarding inflation. He expressed vigorous opposition to inflation.

Mystery Blast Kills 3 Men

Four Hurt as Air Line in Kentucky Gas Plant Explodes.

Winchester, Ky., Oct. 21 (AP).—Two men were killed, a third died later and four others were injured seriously today in the explosion of an air line of the Kentucky Pipe Line Co. here.

L. J. Wagner, 33, and R. R. Gibson, 35, both of Winchester, were killed instantly. Bert Noblette, 54, died tonight from body burns.

The cause of the explosion, which occurred in the main building of the plant, had not been determined tonight.

Military Rites For Col. Peed, Medical Officer

Burial to Be in Arlington Cemetery Tomorrow at 2:30 p. m.

Military funeral services will be conducted at Arlington Cemetery tomorrow for Col. George P. Peed, of the Army Medical Corps. Col. Peed died Friday at Fort Slocum, N. Y.

Born at Portsmouth, Va., Col. Peed first served as assistant surgeon, with the rank of captain, in the Fourth Virginia Infantry, joining in 1899. He was promoted to major in 1916 and colonel in 1929.

Col. Peed graduated from the University of Virginia in 1895, and completed the advanced course in the Medical Field Service School in 1927.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Robert F. Peed.

Services will be at 2:30 p. m., with full military honors from the Fort Myer gate. Burial will be in the southern section.

I. N. Merchant, 95, Burial Tomorrow

One of Last Confederate Veterans in Capital.

Funeral services for I. N. Merchant, 95, one of the District's few remaining Confederate veterans, who died Friday, will be held at 9:30 a. m. tomorrow from Dailey's funeral home. Burial will be in Arlington National Cemetery at 10:30 a. m. with full military honors.

Mr. Merchant died at his home, 1338 Monroe street northwest, after an illness of three weeks. He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Emma McLaughlin Merchant; six sons, Charles S. Merchant, Columbus, Ohio; Paul, Ray X. and Ernest Merchant, of Washington; M. G. Merchant, Baltimore, and D. Z. Merchant, Williamstown, W. Va.; and two daughters, Mrs. R. F. Kemp and Miss Mary Lou Merchant, Washington.

He was born in Virginia in 1838. Enlisted in Company E of the Second Virginia Infantry, he fought in the battle of Bull Run and the Battle of the Wilderness. He was taken prisoner by the Union Army and held until the close of the war.

U. S. Denies Plan to Join In World Bank

Harrison Likely to Fill Vacancy Caused by McGarrah Death.

Reports that the United States is to be represented officially on the board of the Bank for International Settlements brought from the State Department yesterday a denial that it knew of such a plan.

While Americans have served on the board of the World Bank since its inception, none acted as representatives of the United States Government, it was pointed out.

Reports that this country would be officially represented arose from the fact that George L. Harrison, governor of the Federal Reserve Bank of New York, is expected to become a member of the World Bank board.

Death Causes Vacancy.

There has been a vacancy on the board since last May when Gates W. McGarrah, an American director, died. Leon Fraser was the other American serving on the board. McGarrah was president of the bank and on his death he was succeeded by Fraser.

Under the bank charter, the vacancy belongs to Harrison. The charter provides that the board shall consist of the governors of the central banks of Belgium, France, Germany, Great Britain, Italy, Japan and the United States. It further provides that in cases where there is more than one central bank in the country, the governor of the central bank in the principal financial center shall serve.

Under this provision, it is expected that Harrison, as governor of the New York Federal Reserve District, will be the new director.

Simson Ban Recalled.

In 1929, Secretary Stimson issued a ruling forbidding the Federal Reserve System from participating in the ownership or direction of the World Bank. The Bank for International Settlements was involved with war debts and settlements, and tied up with the question of reparations.

Since then the question of reparations has been wiped out by the Lausanne agreement, and war debt payments have been suspended. For the present, at least, there is nothing of this nature for the World Bank to handle.

He is survived by the widow and four sons. Dr. Davis studied public health work in Johns Hopkins University.

Soldiers Mutiny In Santiago, Cuba

One Killed, Eight Jailed, 15 Discharged.

Santiago, Cuba, Oct. 21 (AP).—This provincial capital was like a beleaguered city tonight because of a soldiers' mutiny, extreme disaffection among normal school students and threats of a railway strike. One soldier was killed in fighting among troopers who mutinied because of dissatisfaction over a change in their officers.

Fifteen soldiers were dishonorably discharged, several noncommissioned officers were transferred to other districts and eight privates accused of fomenting the uprising were under arrest.

The labor situation was increasingly tense.

Dr. Leonard C. Jones, Educator, Dies at 47

Schenectady, N. Y., Oct. 21 (AP). Dr. Leonard C. Jones, 47, professor of history at Union College, died today from pneumonia.

He was a member of the Rockefeller Foundation's war relief commission in 1916 and 1917, and was decorated by Belgium.

35-Word Note Tells League Germany Quits

Reich Is Told Move Is Effective When Nation Fulfills Obligations.

Geneva, Oct. 21 (AP).—In a 35-word note Germany today told the League of Nations she was through with its international deliberations.

But the League, as it did last spring in the case of Japan, diplomatically replied that the Reich's resignation can only become effective if Germany fulfills her international obligations.

Immediately Geneva started talking about probable courses of action.

Visit Is Formal.

Some thought the disarmament negotiations, from which the Hitler government withdrew a week ago, should be given a decent earthly burial, but others said they preferred that the plans be placed in a tomb from which they can be removed for revival when Europe again shows a disposition to talk business.

The German communication was signed by Foreign Minister von Neurath and was presented by German Consul General Krauel to J. A. M. C. Avenol, the League secretary general, in a strictly formal and somewhat funereal visit.

The note said:

"Sir: on behalf of the German government I have the honor to inform you that Germany hereby declares she withdraws from the League of Nations in accordance with Article 1, Paragraph 3, of the Covenant."

The American move toward Russian recognition caused more interest here today than the German retirement.

It was predicted by some observers that Russia may propose a nonaggression pact to the United States Government and suggest a joint policy for the Far East.

Johnston, Friend Of Edison, Dies

Engineer Pioneer Trolley Builder in South.

James Robert Johnston, 77, electrical engineer and friend of the late Thomas A. Edison, died in Kansas City after a lengthy illness, according to word received here yesterday.

He constructed one of the first electrical street railways in the South, at Augusta, Ga., shortly before 1900. A native of London, he came to America at the age of 8 with his father.

On one occasion Johnston offered to finance the inventions of the late J. Harris Rogers, of Hyattsville. Rogers was the inventor of a wireless communications system used in the United States submarine service during the World War.

B. F. Joy Funeral Set for Tomorrow

Services Will Be at Riggs Street Home at 2 P. M.

Services for Bernard F. Joy, 70, who died Friday at his home on Riggs road northwest, near the District line, will be held tomorrow at 2 p. m., at his home. Burial will be in Rock Creek Cemetery.

Mr. Joy was a former superintendent of the Rock Creek Parish Sunday School, a former member of the vestry and a warden in the parish. He was the son of Thomas W. and Sarah B. Etchison Joy. He engaged in truck farming many years.

He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Hattie Ward Joy; two sons, Thomas W., and B. Frank Joy; two daughters, Mrs. F. B. Mills, and Mrs. B. B. Busby, all of Washington, and eight grandchildren.

He's Game!

Employer Hires 1, Wife's Kin; Doesn't Need Him.

Warnings, advice and even a caustic comment on one man's domestic problem have reached the Census Bureau in returns on employment and pay roll totals in the NRA reemployment count.

Some of the comments accompanying returns received yesterday told a more feeling story than that revealed in the cold statistics.

One man gave a picture of his domestic life in this grim comment:

"I employ one man and have no use for him. He is my wife's brother."

One employer from New York who signed himself "Ardent Admirer," warned the President against the evil of short selling. Another writing from Iowa was certain recovery would be hastened if married women were barred from employment outside their homes.

"If the married women would stay at home and raise families it would reduce the farm surplus," reasoned this commentator.

Labor Pushes Nazi Boycott

A. F. L. Prepares Circulars Charging Germany With Cruelty to Workers.

The American Federation of Labor is preparing circulars calling on organized labor to boycott German-made goods, William Green, president of the federation, said yesterday, pursuant to recommendations of the recent convention of the federation.

"The people of Germany may choose whatever government or form of government they prefer, but we can not stand by idly while any government crushes the labor movement, imprisons and tortures its leader and metes out barbarous punishment to the relatives of those who can not be caught," the circular says.

"It will be considered unworthy of an American trade unionist to purchase a German-made product or commodity or to patronize German shipping in any manner while this cruel, hideous and fiendish persecution continues and while the Jewish people are persecuted in like manner."

Grid Fans Crash; 1 Killed, 3 Hurt

Bank Cashier Dies After Princeton-Columbia Game.

Princeton, N. J., Oct. 21 (AP).—One man was killed and three critically injured when their automobile crashed into a tree on the Lincoln highway, near Kingston. They were returning from the Princeton-Columbia football game.

The dead man is the driver, Albert R. Towers, 29. Police say he swerved to avoid another car and lost control.

Towers, son of the president of a bank in Kearny, was assistant cashier of the Central Hanover Bank of New York.

Bucharest, Roumania, Oct. 21 (AP). A train carrying passengers crashed into another carrying petroleum near Sinaia tonight, killing nine persons and injuring six.

Singer Seeks Divorce.

Reno, Nev., Oct. 21 (AP).—Emily Roosevelt Cook, opera singer and fifth cousin of President Roosevelt, sued here today for a divorce from Archibald M. Cook, of New York and Connecticut.

Japan's Ruler Leads Troops Close to Russia

Emperor Takes Personal Charge of Army's War Games.

Tokyo, Oct. 22 (Sunday), (AP).—Emperor Hirohito departed by special train this morning to assume personal direction of the army's annual maneuvers, conducted this year on the shores of the Sea of Japan, the section of the homeland closest to Russia in Asia.

Premier Saito, Gen. Sadao Araki, minister of war; Admiral Mineo Osumi, minister of the navy, and other cabinet members will entrain later for the scene of maneuvers in Fukui prefecture, scheduled for October 24, 25 and 26.

The army has not announced the strategical problems expected to be solved by the maneuvers, but marked interest has been displayed in the site chosen. Fukui Prefecture is nearest on Japanese shores to Vladivostok, at the spot where a Soviet army might be expected to attempt a landing in case of a Russo-Japanese war.

It is known that the army plans to test many of the new weapons it is forging in its ambitious arms replacement plan—airplanes, tanks, antiaircraft defenses and motorized artillery.

Underlying the maneuvers campaign is the desire of army leaders to obtain approval of the cabinet and parliament for the largest military estimates in Japan's history in the 1934-35 budget.

Russian forces east of Lake Baikal are said to exceed 140,000 men, especially strong in the air divisions. Japanese claim that some 300 airplanes are assembled in Vladivostok, Khabarovsk and other cities, including scores of heavy bombers capable of bombarding Tokyo and returning safely to their bases.

Graf Zeppelin Due In Miami Monday

Airship to Pause for Day on Hop to Chicago.

Miami, Fla., Oct. 21 (AP).—Poking its nose through Caribbean skies, the Graf Zeppelin sailed toward Miami tonight for a one-day stop on its good-will flight to the Century of Progress Exposition in Chicago.

By dawn Monday, the dirigible, which left Rio de Janeiro Thursday, is expected to arrive here on its fifth voyage to the United States. Besides Commander Hugo Eckener and the crew, it carries 17 passengers, one a 10-month-old infant.

While here Dr. Eckener plans a conference to determine whether he will advance plans for establishment of a vast transatlantic dirigible service to link Europe, South America and the United States.

Culbertson Rules Ace-Showing Valid

Society Woman Tests Bid, and Expert Acts.

New York, Oct. 21 (AP).—A society woman today tested the legality of ace-showing bids in contract and they were formally ruled valid by Ely Culbertson, acting in an official capacity.

The ruling is at variance with one made by the Portland Club of London earlier in the week.

At Crockford's, society bridge club, Mrs. George U. Harris demanded a new deal when an opponent bid five no trump over four no trump, thereby indicating that one side held all four aces.

Marconi Sees Saturn With Biggest Telescope

Mount Wilson, Calif., Oct. 21 (AP). Guglielmo Marconi, famed Italian inventor, came to the world's largest telescope here tonight with Dr. Edwin Hubble, astronomer noted for his observations of distant universes.

Among things at which the 100-inch reflector was pointed for the master of signal communication was the planet Saturn, whose rings make a brilliant picture through the big telescope.

Russian Trade To Mean Jobs For 300,000

Expert Gives Impressive Outline of Possibilities in Recognition.

Cleveland, Oct. 21 (AP).—Kenneth Donaldson's pencil today pictured no less than 300,000 American workmen back on industrial pay rolls within a very few months incident to Washington's projected recognition of the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics.

That pencil, wielded by a professor at the Case School of Applied Science, Cleveland, at the express request of the State Department, sketched an impressive outline of the business that the U. S. S. R. probably would do with the United States, once the two nations have effected a rapprochement.

It wrote, for instance, the figure $350,000,000 annually as the sum covering American exports to Russia.

It set down figures running into many mililons for lone items such as locomotives which the United States can hope to sell to the nation which has been without recognition from so many world powers since the 1917 revolution.

Donaldson No Theorist.

Donaldson is no mere theorist. For nearly a year he was consulting engineer for an American firm operating in the Urals and collected a mass of material. He visited Russia's principal cities. Lately Harry F. Payer, Assistant Secretary of State, asked Donaldson for an estimate of the trade for which the United States could hope from Russia in the event of recognition and active resumption of trade relations.

The professor-engineer made his report to Washington. Today he elaborated on that report to newsmen. Russian needs, he explained, run from hand tools and cotton cloth to locomotives and other heavy machinery, and those needs can be filled without long-term financing.

"It is perfectly feasible," he said, "to export to Russia in the neighborhood of $350,000,000 worth of goods annually, provided Russia is allowed to pay for them in raw materials such as ores, furs, jewels, lumber, pulpwood and a relatively small amount of a large number of articles."

Itemizes Russian Goods.

Russian goods to be received as part payment he itemizes as:

Two million tons of high-grade iron ore, 500,000 tons of manganese ore, 50,000 ounces of platinum, 4,000,000 tons of pulp wood, 3,500,000 tons of lumber and timber, $10,000 worth of oil for use on ships carrying the traded materials, and $3,000,000 worth of dishes, linen and other miscellaneous articles.

Seattle, Oct. 21 (AP).—Shipping men, port authorities and other business heads took a keen interest today in negotiations for recognition of Russia by the United States declaring that Seattle, as the nearest Pacific seaport of this Nation, might see the opening of a new trade era.

George H. Greenwood, president of the Pacific National Bank and the Seattle Clearing House Association, said "it all depends upon whether the Stalin government will follow recognition by local trade, and if so, whether shipments will be made from this coast or from the Atlantic."

Nashville, Tenn., Oct. 21 (AP). Senator K. D. McKellar said here today he thought President Roosevelt "is exactly right" in opening negotiations concerning American Rocognition of Soviet Russia.

McKellar Favors Move.

"It has been our rule to recognize a foreign government when it seemed to be stable," Tennessee's senior Senator said. "The Russian government has been in existence for some 15 years now and apparently is stable.

"It is not the kind of government that we would choose, and I do not believe in its principles or its policies, but it is not our duty to select a government for Russia, and I believe it would be to the material interest of our country to recognize Russia."

Little Rock, Ark., Oct. 21 (AP). Senator Joe T. Robinson recalled today in connection with the move toward recognition of Russia that he advocated such action in the Senate a year ago.

He would not comment further, but said he would discuss the Russian situation in an address tomorrow night before the Indianapolis Forum.

Sees Need for Loan.

Chattanooga, Tenn., Oct. 21 (AP).—Representative Sam D. McReynolds, chairman of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, said today that completion of negotiations for a loan to Russia with which to purchase American cotton was the first step toward recognition of the Soviet government.

Edward H. Hayes, National commander of the American Legion, has stated that it is vigorously and without any exception opposed to recognition of Soviet Russia. The resolution as adopted at the recent annual convention in Chicago stipulated that it also is opposed to extending credit or other form of aid to Russia, its agent, or subsidiaries, either directly of indirectly.

Rome Fears U. S. May Help Soviet

Hope "Spiritual Forces" May Balk Recognition.

Vatican City, Oct. 21 (U.P.).—Hopes that "spiritual forces" will prevent resumption of diplomatic relations between the United States and the Soviet Union were expressed today in unofficial circles at the Holy See. Observers here see a strengthening of a "deplorable regime" if the United States recognizes the Soviet.

At the same time it is hoped moral influence of the United States may modify the antireligious policy of Moscow.

Half-Billion Trade Is Litvinoff Bait

every world conference he has entered, whether it was to make a plea for recognition, or to bolster trade, or to discuss peace.

Official and civil circles were rejoicing at the turn of events, and the tone of the press was jubilant.

Newspapers Praise Move.

(Associated Press.)

Russian newspapers commented at length on the subject, editorial writers being especially interested in the commercial peace move.

The editorial comment was voluminous, but Soviet officialdom warily abstained from an enlargement of the views set forth in the government-controlled press.

So much importance was attached here to the forthcoming Washington decisions that no one in authority risked an open observation for fear that a misconstrued phrase or an ill-used word might affect the negotiations.

Moscow has been disappointed too many times in its past efforts to come to some understanding with Washington to take chances now on this delicate subject.

May Sail Saturday.

It was understood M. Litvinoff probably will be accompanied by no other government officials and that his entourage may consist entirely of secretaries.

It was considered not unlikely that he will sail on the liner Manhattan from Havre on Saturday.

Meanwhile, numerous incoming dispatches from Soviet correspondents in the United States attested to the great interest here in the subject.

In addition to giving comments by various American public figures, and newspapers they described at length the scene at the White House when President Roosevelt made public yesterday the exchange of messages between the two capitals.

"On the dark background of the present state of international relationships," said the newspaper Izvestia, "President Roosevelt's message is a pleasing fact."

Economic Hopes Raised.

It interpreted the action as indicating a growing conviction in America that favorable conditions exist for "the cooperation of both countries in the most varied field."

Regarding economic hopes the Newspaper for Industrialization, organ of the heavy industry commissariat, maintained that:

"Soviet economists now discussing import plans in connection with the second five-year plan naturally anticipate such results of the Washington negotiations which will give a strong impetus to the development of trade with the United States."

Cooperation Predicted.

"The heightened interest of The United States To the U. S. S. R.," said Izvestia, "reflects an ever-growing conviction that exceptionally favorable conditions exist for the widest cooperation between the two countries in the most varied fields.

Points to Activities.

"The exchange of messages between President Roosevelt and President Mikhail Kalinin will produce great satisfaction. In the course of 16 years Soviet Russia has established stable and normal relations with its neighbors.

"We wish to believe that the establishment of official contact will prove only the first step toward a reapproachment of two great countries which certainly will be welcomed by all sincere friends of peace."

The Komsomolskaya Pravda said the American overture "comes at a time when the entire capitalist world is in a serious plight," and pointed to a "conflict in the Far East, intensification of Russo-Japanese relations and Germany's withdrawal from the League of Nations."

Receiver Appointed For Chemical Firm

Wilmington, Del., Oct. 21 (AP).—Chancellor J. O. Wolcott in Chancery Court today appointed Clarence A. Southerland, of this city, receiver for the Consolidated Chemical Corporation, against which receivership suit was filed earlier in the week. The corporation operates plants in West Virginia and New Jersey.

Ford to Receive Gift Of Soviet-Made Fords

Moscow, Oct. 21 (U.P.).—Henry Ford is soon to receive a gift from Soviet Russia—two Soviet-made "Fords," one a truck and the other a passenger car.

They were produced at the Gorki automobile plant, built two years ago and which today is turning out machines at the rate of 20,000 a year.

Table Shows Drop in U. S. Trade With Russia.

Moscow, Oct. 21 (AP).—The following table, comparing Soviet imports from the United States in the first six months of 1933 were, in the period in 1932 and showing increased purchases of only two items, illustrates the decline of American sales here:

(In rubles.)

| | 1933. | 1932. |
|---|---|---|
| Machinery, appliances | 1,703,000 | 6,226,000 |
| Wire | 904,000 | 8,000 |
| Automobiles | 753,000 | 1,484,000 |
| Machine parts | 699,000 | 2,481,000 |
| Electric machinery and appliances | 566,000 | 3,323,000 |
| Automobile parts | 557,000 | 2,521,000 |
| Tractor parts and accessories | 244,000 | 19,000 |
| Chemical and surgical supplies | 147,000 | 263,000 |
| Ferrous metals | 145,000 | 344,000 |

The main items of Soviet imports to the United States during the first si xmonths of 1933 were, in the order of their importance, furs, sausage casings, coal and coke, iron ore, tinned food, silk products, fish, mineral products, handicraft work and textiles.

abroad. He has talked with Litvinoff during comparatively recent months.

Secretary Hull, although saying no final decision had been made, may carry through his original intention of heading the United States delegation to the Pan-American conference at Montevideo, Uruguay, early in December. This probably would mean his absence during part of Litvinoff's visit. The prospect remained, however, that Hull might cancel the trip.

In the discussion yesterday of prospective recognition of Russia, the name of John Van A. McMurray was heard often. He talked much with Russian delegates at the London Wheat Conference. Newly appointed Minister to Latvia, Estonia and Lithuania, McMurray will be the American envoy nearest to Moscow.

Conferences Held.

He has been in repeated conferences during the past week with Robert Kelley, chief of the Division of Eastern European Affairs of the State Department. Kelley has gathered numerous data upon Russian conditions and affairs.

Mentioned also in talk of possible ambassadors to Moscow has been Henry Morgenthau, jr., governor of the Farm Credit Administration. He was designated by the President several months ago to handle matters pertaining to trade relations with Russia.

In highly informed official quarters it was pointed out yesterday, however, that any talk of possible ambassadors was premature, since the type of man chosen would be dictated by the course and tenor of the conversations with Litvinoff.

Although certain to be taken up in these discussions, it was felt in official circles that there would be little difficulty in gaining from the Soviet an antipropaganda guarantee. The President was described by some as determined to exact such a promise as an answer to the objections of some critics of recognition.

Moore Heads Waterway Group.

Baltimore, Oct. 21 (AP).—J. Hampton Moore, mayor of Philadelphia, today was elected president of the Deeper Atlantic Waterways Association for the twenty-seventh time. Richmond, Va., was selected for the 1934 convention.

Judges Taken Over Reichstag Firebug's Trail

Court Questions Whether One Man Could Have Set Off Blaze.

Berlin, Oct. 21 (AP).—Judges and newspapermen today followed the trail which Marinus van der Lubbe said he took February 27 in firing the Reichstag Building and the question was raised whether the young Dutchman alone could have started the blaze in 20 minutes.

The court, which is hearing incendiarism charges against Van der Lubbe and four others, lingered along the route for two hours.

Reporters took 50 minutes for a casual inspection of the trail, whereas testimony has been offered that Van der Lubbe not only found his way through the dark building but placed firebrands in the brief period.

Van der Lubbe has maintained that no one helped him.

Only a few witnesses were heard today, among them a laborer named Organistka, who testified the arson was planned long ago.

Organistka said he met the defendant a year ago on a hiking tour in southern Germany. During an argument over the wearing of a Nazi swastika emblem, the witness quoted Van der Lubbe as saying "the Reichstag's days are numbered."

When he left the hikers, Organistka testified, he told them: "Your politics is doomed; there is only one Nazi-ism."

To this, he said, Van der Lubbe replied, "if that becomes true, then it will be done with fire and sulphur."

Reich Compromise Weighed by League

Resumption of Parleys Is Predicted by Leaders.

Geneva, Oct. 21 (U.P.).—Resumption of direct negotiations for an European arms settlement, with a compromise which would permit the German government to return to Geneva, was predicted tonight by leaders of the League of Nations.

A distinct feeling of optimism persisted, despite Germany's formal presentation today of her notice of withdrawal from the league.

Germany will have the right to cancel her resignation at any time within two years.

Marion Hughes Married To Woolen Millions Heir

New York, Oct. 21 (AP).—Miss Marion Hughes, former wife of Conkey Whitehead, wealthy Atlanta sportsman, was married today to Andrew Pierce 3d, 26-year-old heir to woolen millions.

The ceremony was in All Saints Unitarian Church.

Hawaii Island Shaken By Severe Earthquake

Hilo, Hawaii, Oct. 21 (AP).—A severe earthquake shook the island of Hawaii today.

Acute tremors in business and residential districts of Hilo reminded inhabitants of repeated predictions that the Kilauea volcano was ripe for eruption.

Russian Credit Is Held Needed To Win Trade

Economists Claim Soviet Recognition Advantage Overestimated.

Administration economists are agreed that business and agricultural interests have been a little too optimistic in counting on great trade expansion as a result of negotiations looking toward recognition of Soviet Russia.

It is pointed out that it will be some time before Russian foreign trade can reach the proportions generally predicted, when it was first learned President Roosevelt had opened negotiations for recognition.

The greatest single reason for the delay will be the need for large credits from the United States before Russia can make any large purchases from this country, it is said.

Has Favorable Balance.

Russia now has a favorable trade balance with the United States for the first time since the war. Department of Commerce statistics show that during the first eight months of 1933 American exports to Russia were $6,500,000 as compared to imports from Russia of $6,900,000.

There has been a sharp decline in United States exports during the last three years. In 1932 they totaled only $12,300,000 as compared with $103,400,000 in 1931 and $111,400,000 in 1930. Russian sales to the United States amounted to $9,100,000 in 1932, $12,600,000 in 1931, and $22,000,000 in 1930.

Experts attribute this decline to Russia's inability to secure credits in this country and generally look for diplomatic recognition to facilitate Russian loans.

Small Part of Total

The United States usually has been on the favorable side of Russian-American trade relations, although Russia's purchases from the United States have always been a small part of this country's total exports. From 1910 to 1914 Russia bought $23,500,000 worth of goods out of the United States' total exports of $2,166,000,000; from 1921 to 1925, $31,700,000 out of a total of $4,317,000,000; and from 1926 to 1930, $75,600,000 out of a total of $4,777,000,000.

Commerce Department officials believe that, if recognition becomes a fact, the trade between the two countries will be largely Russia's exchange of raw products for American manufactured goods.

Disabled Launch Missing 3 Days Off Florida.

Miami, Fla., Oct. 21 (AP).—The disabled motor launch, Pilot No. 1, with five persons aboard, which had been missing since it left here last Wednesday for Bimini, has been picked up by a Coast Guard boat and is being towed to shore.

The announcement was made after a Coast Guard plane returned from a flight up the east coast.

The party aboard the boat, all from Miami, comprises two men, a woman and two children.

surance, however, from Holiday leaders that the movement would not tolerate violence.

Ohio Holiday officials remained inactive as New York dairy farmers planned to meet Sunday to consider a strike.

Senator Norris, of Nebraska, was reported authoritatively today to have telegraphed Washington that he was back of the President's program, but that he favored currency inflation.

Hog Buying Criticized.

Criticizing Secretary of Agriculture Wallace's hog program as "a brazen attempt to bribe the farmer to surrender the little independence he has left," Reno said:

"We may expect some opposition from supposed farm leaders who are satisfied with the crumbs that fall from their master's table, but I do not anticipate any opposition from the farmers and other groups of society who really desire the happiness and prosperity of all our people."

"We have reached the point where statements and promises are mere gestures to lull the farmer to sleep, that his enslavement may be completed.

"We were promised a new deal by which agriculture would receive the same consideration as other groups. Instead, we have the same consideration as other groups. Instead, we have the same old stacked deck and, so far as administering the agricultural act is concerned, the same old dealers."

Branches in 23 States.

Des Moines, Iowa, Oct. 21 (AP).—The National Farmers Holiday Association, which directed its members to withhold marketing of produce, starting today, in an effort to raise farm prices, has branch organizations in 23 States.

100,000 May Join.

Milwaukee, Wis., Oct. 21 (AP). Farm leaders tonight claimed 100,000 Wisconsin farmers next week would show support for the movement by withholding produce from markets.

Virtually no marketing is done Saturdays throughout the rural areas, so it was impossible to judge the effectiveness of the strike order.

Bidding Farewell to Ham Fish

Which Gave Us More Trouble, the Red Menace or the Blue Menace?

By William Harlan Hale.

It is all over now. The American Nation, after quivering and quaking for 16 years under the terror of Red invasion, now suddenly makes peace with the grizzly bear across the sea. To all the Hamilton Fishes among us, it must look like an abject surrender, and one which is sure to doom the Commonwealth to immediate ruin.

Poor Ham Fish! He led the patriotic hosts in fighting and bleeding for the safety of America. For a decade and a half they went around, snooping into private lives, frisking doubtful citizens, deporting shiploads of them, and discovering arsenals of bombs and armies of Bolsheviki in almost every deserted barn.

Literally so, in fact. One of the greatest heroisms of Ham Fish, when as head of the Military Affairs Committee of the House he led the Red-baiting activities of the country, was an expedition of secret police to Baltimore.

He had heard that—horribile dictu—a revolutionary brigade, heavily armed, had gathered in an old warehouse in that city, and that it was about to descend upon Washington and declare Moscow the capital of the United States. With the tactics of a field marshal he deployed his forces around the silent building, and at the signal they charged. The door came down under the battering, and lo! as they burst in, not a soul was to be seen, but a crate of vegetables toppled over, and four cabbage heads rolled out.

Ham Fish, of course, had a visionary style all his own: he saw Reds hovering above and around him in the same multitude as a mediaeval saint saw angels; and they put him into a frenzy, too, but of a different sort.

He had many companions in these spectral seances: to wit, the Daughters of the American Revolution, the American Legion, the Navy League, the Sentinels of the Republic, the Ku Klux Klan, the Methodist Board of Temperance and Morals, the Minute Men, and many other organizations of the same exalted breadth of vision. Even the American Federation of Labor, which might be supposed to be working for a workers' utopia, joined in denouncing the workers' Russia.

For a neutral observer it is a sad spectacle to see the utter ingratitude of the Nation to all the patriots, Christian fighters, and upholders of the American Home, who did 16 years' battle with the Russian ogre. During all those years they clamored for our support on the gory front; they made us rout professors, intellectuals, and other strange people who might be prospective bomb-throwers; they made the front pages with almost weekly sensations.

And now we have repudiated them. The chief reason we have done so is this: The much-vaunted much-feared enemy never once appeared. The Red Menace—alas for Ham Fish—never materialized! The sabotage—alas for the fluttering hearts of the Colonial Dames—was never committed!

Not only that. But suddenly there comes to mind the idea that all these true-blue organizations created a state of mind which ran parallel to the "Red Menace," and which an ungrateful Nation might call the "Blue Menace." And now, when we look back upon a decade and a half of hundred-percentism, free-speech suppression and anti-radical hysteria, the Blue Menace seems to have been by far the greater of the two.

Insull's Firms Solvent, Greek Court Is Told

Defense Lawyer at Hearing Quotes Balance Sheets to Prove Claim.

Athens, Greece, Oct. 21 (AP).—Arguments whether Samuel Insull was guilty of acts punishable under Greek law occupied most of a hearing today in which the United States Government is making its second attempt to extradite the former Chicago utilities operator.

The public prosecutor restated the accusation against Insull, fraudulent bankruptcy and transfer of property in anticipation of bankruptcy, and then declared that certain offenses considered crimes in other countries were not so considered here.

Denis Lazarimos, Insull's attorney, praised a previous verdict in the case as typical of Greek justice and then spent four hours quoting various figures from balance sheets of Insull firms, which, he said, proved their solveney.

Today's hearing continued most of the day and then was adjourned until 10 a. m. Sunday.

Another attorney for Insull, P. Rhalli, emphasized that the substance of the case must be investigated thoroughly to ascertain whether the former utilities magnate is punishable under Greek law.

The attorney maintained that his client had given up a life insurance policy and his wife's property.

Insull calmly replied to the court president's questions regarding his age, profession and length of stay in Greece, but avoided a reply to this question:

"Do you know that the American Government accused you of going counter to the laws of the United States of America?"

ing prices of legal liquor prohibitive."

Arrests by Washington police under the Sheppard law, which covers sale of liquor, set a five-year record during the last fiscal year, Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police, reported to the District Commissioners yesterday. The total was 16,777, as against 15,552 in 1932.

Total arrests exceeded by nearly 4,000 those of the previous fiscal year, the count being 104,725 and 100,775. Of these, 68,119 were white persons and 36,606 colored. Of the total, 88,722 were held for court action, as compared with 86,565 in the preceding years.

Arrests for felonies numbered 4,772; misdemeanors, 46,886; violations of municipal regulations, 41,106, and miscellaneous, 11,961.

The Traffic Bureau led all other precincts and bureaus in the number of arrests with 30,528, compared with 25,392 the year before.

Arrests for violations of the Volstead act, which takes in sale, possession and transportation of intoxicating liquor, numbered 3,185 last year, as compared with 4,104 in 1932; 3,637 in 1931, 5,551 in 1930 and 5,226 in 1929, the report showed.

Washington 'Madhouse,' Says Georgia Governor

Macon, Ga., Oct. 21 (AP).—Gov. Talmadge today described Washington as a "mad house—where some new code is drawn up every day."

Talmadge said "no NRA or no code can bring back prosperity until the prices of raw products—cotton, corn, peanuts, hogs—and wages go up in proportion to the cost of manufactured articles."

Family of Three Shot To Death in Home

Dover, Mass., Oct. 21 (AP).—A family of three were found shot to death in their bungalow home today. They were Mr. and Mrs. Frank E. Kettlety and their daughter, Ruth, 8. Police believe the crime occured Wednesday night, as the child attended school that day.

The mother was in her bed, the child on the floor near the bed and Kettlety was crouched in a corner.

British Leader Lauds Accord

Lansbury Says Roosevelt Aids Peace by Move Toward Russia.

London, Oct. 21 (AP).—President Roosevelt's move toward American recognition of Soviet Russia was hailed today by George Lansbury, veteran Laborite leader of the opposition in Parliament, as a powerful influence for peace in Europe and the Far East.

"I am delighted and am sure the British labor movement will join me in congratulating President Roosevelt and the American Nation on resuming relations with the great Russian nation," said Lansbury.

"There is a great danger of war both in the Far East and Europe. These wars arise from economic conflicts. Russia and the United States ought to make it possible for a settlement of the Sino-Japanese and Russian difficulties in the Pacific.

"The Japanese nation must learn it is impossible these days, however strong it may be in a military sense, to ride roughshod over any nation and defy the opinion of the world."

Pinchot's Name Barred In Liquor-Plot Trial

Philadelphia, Oct. 21 (AP).—Attorneys defending State Senator John J. McClure and 75 codefendants on trial for conspiracy to violate the prohibition laws, lost an important point today when Judge George A. Welh refused to permit any political angles to enter the case.

Germans See Peace in U.S., Soviet Move

Press Holds Recognition Parley "Important Development."

Berlin, Oct. 21 (AP).—German citizens were told by their government-controlled newspapers tonight that America's overture to Russia is "one of the most important developments in international politics."

Editorial writers generally agreed with the Deutsche Zeitung that "we are entering upon a new chapter in the history of the world."

That German commercial relations may be affected by America's recognition was pointed out, but the Vossische Zeitung remarked: "German business and industry never claimed a monopoly for supplying the Russian market."

See Peace Promoted.

Following what apparently was on official report, the press evaluated the Russo-American rapprochement as "calculated to promote the peace of the world."

Several newspapers attempted to make it clear why the United States and Russia have much more in common than is generally supposed. Among other considerations, their vast range of territory and widely scattered populations, their common worship of the machine and the pioneer spirit.

One interesting interpretation was that of the Boersen Zeitung, which said: "Exponents of capitalism and anticapitalism have closed ranks to escape threatening destruction. Fire and water are trying to mix amidst general chaos."

Editorial opinion agreed that, as the Vossische Zeitung put it, "American recognition of the Soviet Union has a significant anti-Japanese flavor."

Old Friendship Recalled.

The reference President Roosevelt made in a note to Russia regarding the centuries-old friendship between the two nations apparently surprised some editors; who took pains to explain that Alaska once belonged to Russia and that Cossacks in the eighteenth century crossed the Bering Sea to America.

The Boersen Courier believed that Senator Borah will be the first ambassador to Soviet Russia and the Tageblatt described Maxim Litvinoff, the Russian foreign commissar who will be sent to Washington, as "a tenacious negotiator."

Hitler Modifies Rule On Election Entrants

Berlin, Oct. 21 (U.P.).—Modifying Adolf Hitler's first plan to have none but recognized Nazis run as candidates in the general election next month, the government announced tonight that the names of prominent statesmen now supporting the party would be included on the ballot.

Post's Cooking School to Open On October 31

Miss Ruth Chambers, Noted Culinary Expert, Will Be in Charge.

A new and different cooking school, to cover every phase of selection and preparation of food for the family, will be offered FREE to housewives of this city through arrangements just completed by The Washington Post.

One of the finest programs obtainable on the important subject of foods will be presented. A famous cooking expert, Miss Ruth Chambers, of the National Live Stock and Meat Board, has been engaged to conduct the school, which will be held October 31, November 1, 2 and 3 at the Washington Auditorium.

A special and distinctive feature of The Washington Post Cooking School will be the attention devoted to the cooking of meat, the food which is the basis of the daily menu.

Right Way Easiest.

It is in the realm of meat cookery that a vast amount of experimental work has been done recently by the U. S. Department of Agriculture and by universities and colleges.

This interesting and practical new knowledge will be presented by Miss Chambers in her clear-cut talks and expert demonstrations. It is easier to do things the right way. Miss Chambers proves, and many fussy, old-fogy ways and ideas are swept into the discard.

The best, easiest and most economical ways of preparing the various cuts of meat—beef, pork, veal and lamb—will be demonstrated. With these will be demonstrations of all other types of foods which make up the complete meal. Salads, vegetable dishes, pastries, frozen dishes—all the items which are included in the balanced menu for the entire family—will be presented at the cooking school.

The Washington Post believes this program will be the most valuable, up-to-the-minute and thoroughly interesting presentation of cookery ever offered to the housewives of Washington.

School to Be Free.

Every woman who has the welfare of her family at heart will find it worth while to put aside other engagements to be present at every session, beginning with the first, on Tuesday, October 31, at 2 p. m.

Remember the dates! Tuesday, October 31, November 1, 2 and 3!

Remember the place! The Washington Auditorium!

Remember that the school is absolutely free, a gift of The Washington Post to its readers and to the general public of Washington. There are no obligations of any sort.

Every effort is being made to accommodate the largest number of women,—and of men, too, for they will be welcome—so that all may hear and see clearly as Miss Chambers and her assistant, Miss Emily Conklin, give their demonstrations.

Uses Complete Kitchen.

A complete kitchen will be installed upon the lecture platform and the various dishes will be made ready, every step in the preparation shown, and then cooked before the audience. The result can not only be seen but "proved,"—if the "proof of the pudding is in the eating,"—for members of each class will be given samples to take home!

Incidentally, the newest in kitchen appliances and the ways of using them will be shown as the lessons progress.

Be sure to be there, as guest of The Washington Post.

THAT the credit union movement has made rapid progress in the last two years is shown in the annual report of Ola G. King, chairman of the Credit Union committee, submitted at the annual meeting of the District Federation.

Starting with organization of a credit group in the Treasury Department local No. 262, May, 1930, the movement has expanded into other locals.

Not only does the credit union provide a method of systematic saving in amounts as low as $1 a month, with interest at 6 per cent, but it also enables the member to borrow money for provident purposes at a reasonable rate of interest.

The Treasury credit union now has a membership of 301, and stock of $11,645.96. The outstanding loans now total $11,259.98, the annual report shows.

Total Membership 1,700.

War Department Local No. 261 has a union with a membership of 45, the report shows. The Women's Local No. 105, of the Bureau of Engraving and Printing, also has shown rapid growth. Its membership totals 128.

There are also 12 other credit unions in the District with a total membership of 1,700.

These various credit unions, the report states, have formed an association known as the Cooperative Credit League of the District, composed of five representatives from each credit union, chartered to operate within the District. Such representatives are selected from the officers and members of the credit and supervisory committees and the board of directors. This association will hold bimonthly meetings.

Duckpin Notes.

Miss Alice McQuinn (), of the Agriculture Juniors, with a high set of 323, and Miss Evelyn Burns (), of Treasury, No. 2, with a game of 136, were standout performers last week in the Ladies Federal Bowling League. The Aggie Juniors maintained their pace in the race by shutting out the Veterans Administration, No. 2, Treasury, No. 2, whipped Interior to hold second place.

* * * *

General Counsel, No. 1, team still holds first position in the Commissioner and Miscellaneous Ladies League, with 14 wins and 1 loss, while Accounts and Collections is second with 10 victories against 5 losses. Gertrude Ingraham bowled last week's high individual set of 324 with games of 110, 113 and 101.

* * * *

The Skippies were taken over the bumps by the Battle Axes last week in the Customs Ladies Bowling League, losing the first two games by no small margins. They staged a comeback, however, in the third game. Total pins were 1,074 against 986. The Strikers lead the league, and the Skippies are in second place.

* * * *

KRAZY KATZ, by taking the odd game from Tobacco Scraps, assumed undisputed lead in the Miscellaneous Tax Unit Bowling League. Capt. G. M. Hoesen, rolling anchor, came through with a spare in the last box of the second game and a strike in the ninth box of the last game to win. Tobacco Scraps, Capitalities, Eagle Eyes and Swiss Navy, with nine wins and six losses each, are tied for second place. R. Bradshaw, Sand Blowers, with 139, won high game, and C. E. Sipes, Comebacks, with 361, took high set for the week.

* * * *

The Steam Rollers are living up to their name in the Dynamite Bowling League. Last week they flattened the Hill Billies. Starting the season in the cellar, the Steam Rollers are perched at the top with 10 wins and 5 losses. Little Potatoes are second with nine wins and five losses.

* * * *

Play in the War Department Bowling League last week placed Ben Dennehy in the limelight. He shot a 146 game and 408 set to surpass all rivals. The Hydrographic team produced a collective game of 569 and shared laurels with the veteran Barbettes, who amassed a high set of 1,697.

* * * *

Scattering the maples for a set of 1,749, which included games of 596, 574 and 579, both 596 and 1,749 being new marks for the league, the Highway No. 2 team whitewashed the Sewer Department No. 2 in the District Government League, and continued at the head of the race with 12 straight wins. Highway No. 1 moved into second place by drubbing Sewer Department No. 1.

SIDNEY WALLENSTEIN, tennis committee chairman, Patent Office, won the championship last week after a fast set with Harry Goldsmith. The tournament, which began September 16 at Henry Park, was a lively one straight through to the climax. Only employes at Patent Office were eligible.

It is reported that Sidney said he'd "bring home the bacon" and that is what he did, to the tune of 9 to 7, 6 to 2 and 6 to 2 in the final sets. The six leading players were:

Mr. Goldsmith, Mr. Wallenstein, G. Gardes, S. Stocklinski, I. Edwards and Arthur Tomelden.

Mrs. M. K. Ridgeway Retires.

Twenty-eight employes of Veterans Administration paid tributes to Mrs. Margaret Kemp ("Kempy") Ridgeway yesterday at a luncheon at the Raleigh Hotel as she retired, after more than 15 years' service. Mrs. Ridgeway's first work with the Government was with the old War Risk Bureau. Later she was transferred to the Accrued Award Unit, Finance Division.

During the brief ceremony in her honor a handsome pair of silver candlesticks was presented to her. Mrs. Lucy Coats and Miss Betty Dunn were in charge of arrangements. Others participating were:

Selma Malmsten, Katherine M. Phillips, Clara G. Selden, Anna Moulton, Edith Knowlden, Eva Judge, Hattie E. Taylor, Sadie J. Fegley, Adelina Quigley, Lula Mitchell, Edna M. Adams, Virginia Frye, George E. Downing, Wallace E. Ridgeway, E. E. Jacques, Mabel Rowlands, Lena A. Gallivan, Sarah B. Bentley, Ethel Wiley, Frances Owens, Ada Stinemetz, Dora Eaton, Edith McDonald (*), Laura Greer, Rose Myers and Julia Harding.

NRA Assailed As Attorneys Argue Legality

Code Is Arbitrary Edict by Dictator, Lawyer Asserts in Suit.

Knoxville, Tenn., Oct. 21 (AP).—A code set up under the national recovery act was termed "an arbitrary edict by the President, who has been made a dictator," during argument in Federal Court here today on a suit contesting the constitutionality of the act.

The charge was made by Carlyle Littleton, of Chattanooga, attorney for Ralph Starring, 33, former employe of the Southern Silk Mills, of Springs City, Tenn. Starring sued for an injunction to prevent the company complying with the underwear manufacturers' code and the United States district attorney from prosecuting the mills for violating the code.

Littleton asserted the code constituted "terrific coercion," and that the recovery act had the effect of "terrorizing employers" and interfering with the rights of employes. Starring alleged he was discharged because the underwear code limited machine hours in the mill.

Hammond E. Chaffetz, special assistant to Attorney General Cummings, contended the suit should have been filed by the Southern Silk Mills, rather than one of its employes.

8,000 Jewelry Workers End New York Strike

New York, Oct. 21 (AP).—Grover A. Whalen, City NRA Administrator, today announced settlement of a two-weeks' strike of jewelry workers, and said the strikers, numbering about 8,000, will return to work Monday.

A shorter work week and a slight increase in wages were agreed upon.

Maddox Urged For District U. S. Attorney

Washington Bar Group Presents His Name to Cummings.

Col. Luther Robinson Maddox yesterday was recommended to Attorney General Homer S. Cummings for the post of United States Attorney for the District by a group of members of the Washington bar.

Appointment of Maddox was urged by a delegation which included Hayden Johnson, chancellor of National University and president of the Board of Education; George A. Maddox, Glen Willard, professor of law at National University; Judge Milton Strasburger, J. Miller Kenyon, former president of the Washington Bar Association; E. S. Devore and Tench T. Mayre.

Maddox, who has practiced law since 1924, is a Democrat and is 49 years old. Born at Naruna, Va., he first took a degree in civil engineering and then studied at the University of Paris. He has four degrees in law, served overseas with the Seventeenth Engineers, and has 16 years' experience with public utilities and with the Interstate Commerce Commission.

Although Leo A. Rover, encumbent, has asked to be relieved, little has been done to name a successor. Rover's term expired in January, and he recently sent in his resignation, which was accepted, conditional to the appointment of a successor.

Those mentioned for the post include Lucian Van Doren, Ralph F. Cusick, Leslie C. Garnett, Lanadale Sasscer, Levi David, David Tine, John P. Bramhall, William H. Collins and former Judge Michael M. Doyle.

Maddox is a member of the American Bar Association, a member of several engineering societies, and served as officer for several engineering groups. He is a lieutenant colonel with the organized reserves.

Man and Wife Die In Lake Boat Leap

Elderly Pair Plunge From Lake Michigan Ship.

Muskegon, Mich., Oct. 21 (AP). Capt. Frank Coleman, of the steamer Virginia, reported to Coast Guards here on his arrival this afternoon from Milwaukee, that two passengers listed as Mr. and Mrs. L. P. Snyder, jumped overboard when the vessel was 5 miles out from this city shortly before 1 p. m.

The middle-aged couple had arranged a week ago for the trip from Milwaukee to Muskegon, Capt. Coleman reported.

The Virginia put about and searched for the couple, but they apparently went down immediately.

Passion Play Cast Selected For Next Year

Dr. Lang, of Georgetown, Will Marry Player After Production.

Results of the election at Oberammergau to select the cast for the special production of the Passion Play next summer, marking the 300th anniversary of its founding, were received here in a cablegram to Dr. Anton Lang, jr., professor of German at Georgetown University. Dr. Lang is a son of Anton Lang, who acted as Christus many years ago.

The famous play is staged every 10 years. The 1934 production is special and additional in honor of the tercentenary.

Anton Lang was chosen as the speaker of the prologue. The Christus is to be played again by Alois Lang.

Other principals include Miss Clara Mayr, whose engagement to Dr. King, jr., was announced last summer, and who will take the role of Mary Magdalene.

Dr. Lang hopes to be married to Miss Mayr at the conclusion of the play next summer and will bring his bride to America.

Amnesty Pleas Inundate New Turkish Capital

150 Black-List Members Beg to Return Home 'Republic Day.'

Ankara, Turkey, Oct. 21 (AP).—The new Turkish capital is inundated with petitions from political exiles following announcement that the Kemalist government will grant amnesty to political as well as other offenders on the tenth anniversary of the republic, October 29.

Members of the black-list of 150, former partisans of the Ottoman house or of the Progressive party formed in opposition to President Mustapha Kemal's party, are scattered in France, England, Bulgaria and Syria.

Typical in its Eastern eloquence is the following petition of two exiles in Aleppo, Syria, addressed to the Ghazi:

"O thou, great chief who saved the Turks, thou who gave them a new birth in greatest glory, save also us who now salute thee with a deepest love. Save us from this infernal life which forces us to wander from country to country, forever weeping endless tears. Forgive our sins, O powerful Ghazi, in the name of the liberation of great Turkey."

New Society Asked to Aid Temperance

Rockefeller Group Wants One Divorced From Old Methods.

New York, Oct. 21 (AP).—A new temperance society was suggested today by the Rockefeller Liquor Survey.

The organization, the report said, might be "divorced from old groups and methods that have outlived their usefulness."

"Such an organization," it continued, "could bring together, behind intelligent programs, men and women interested in the maintenance of a sober country, and determined that the return of alcohol shall mark the beginning of real temperance."

"The need of research is paramount," the report said. "We must have the facts about the effects of alcohol on the human system, facts which scientists of accepted standing can support. It is to be hoped that heated controversy will subside, and that objective consideration will take its place.

Stress Need of Tolerance.

"Not only do we need research so that facts can displace opinion and superstition, but we need unprejudiced dissemination of facts. This requires a tolerant spirit, and tolerance in education is perhaps difficult to achieve.

"Whatever line temperance instruction may take, its chief emphasis, if it is to capture this younger generation, should be on life and health and not on disease and death. The necessity of keeping fit for work and sport is a far more effectual appeal than moral homilies. Our young people can not be browbeaten into righteousness.

Wants School Books Revised.

"School textbooks should have searching revision in these matters.

"Wherever exaggerated statements regarding the effects of alcohol are found, these must be eliminated in order to make possible the objective teaching of what is known to be true. In all these efforts the only effective appeal today is an appeal to intelligence.

"With the old wet and dry controversy out of the way, the argument for sobriety, for temperate living, for a clean and orderly country, can be made in a manner that will stir the Nation."

Show Planned By Art League

Classes Will Start in New Hearquarters During Week.

Organization of fall classes and the opening of the first exhibit of the season next Sunday will inaugurate the new headquarters of the Art League of Washington at 1503 Twenty-first street northwest. The exhibit will be the Fifth Quarterly Art Show.

Most of the former instructors will remain this season. Val Clear, director of the league, will continue to teach anatomy and life drawing, with Sewell Johnson leading the portrait and water color classes. Edith McCartney teaches pastel painting and Antionette Fulton the batik course. Etching will be taught by Minnie L. Brigg, while G. A. Scherier is instructing classes in bookbinding.

Children's classes and adult study of crafts will be directed this year by Elizabeth A. Barnes, who organized the occupational therapy work at Mount Alto and Walter Reed Hospitals. The theory and system of color will be the subject of a series of lectures by Dr. I. H. Godlove, color physicist.

SOMEHOW, the Recovery Party's Washington campaign isn't working out exactly as was expected.

Of course, it never was hinted there would be any Washington campaign.

When Joseph V. McKee selected Ferdinand Pecora for district attorney on his New York county recovery ticket, Pecora went out of his way to stress that.

So far as he was concerned, there wouldn't be any personal campaign of any kind, said Mr. Pecora.

He was counsel for the Senate Banking Committee, and would continue to be counsel for the committee until January 1, so help him.

If on that blithe New Year Day Mr. McKee happened to have a job in the New York district attorney's office waiting for him, he would accept it.

But there would be no campaigning on his part, positively. What with his banking investigation, he didn't have a minute to give to it, in the first place. And in the second, he intended to see the investigation through.

He made his acceptance conditional upon that. And when Mr. Pecora accepted a place on the McKee ticket, he did it with all of the aplomb of a candidate announcing his election. He appeared that sure.

On the sidelines, the scribes chuckled. Here and there at the press table, an eye was winked. They thought they saw through this campaign sacrifice on Pecora's part.

Why, it wasn't a sacrifice at all, they would tell you. What better campaign would a man want than his name in headlines every day over stories of sensational Senate committee exposures. It was to laugh!

BUT that was back two weeks or so or more, back in the days when Mr. Pecora had Senator Carter Glass for an occasional sparring partner. Such clashes could be counted on to steal the headlines from the New York bankers.

Lately Carter Glass hasn't been around. There hasn't been anybody to fight with but the New York bankers. And they have been strangely meek.

So anxious have they been to please, in fact, that the exploits of Mr. Clarence Dillon and Mr. Albert H. Wiggin and Mr. Winthrop W Aldrich have copped all the headlines.

Somewhere down in the stories, of course, there always is reference to questioning by committee counsel. But it isn't impressive; it isn't even satisfying. By no stretch of the imagination could you call it campaign material.

And somehow, the people back in Manhattan don't always associate the Senate Banking Committee's inquiring counsel with the Ferdinand Pecora who is running for district attorney of New York.

One New York daily the other day omitted his name from a list of candidates. And Mr. Pecora noticed it. He registered a mild protest to Washington scribes.

So the Recovery Party's Washington campaign isn't working out exactly as was expected.

Maybe Mr. Pecora himself has hit upon the solution. He was joking when he made the suggestion to newspapermen but his voice had a sort of plaintive appeal in it.

"It wouldn't do any harm," he told the boys, "if you mentioned the fact somewhere in your stories that I'm also running for office."

Bishop Ryan Reception Set November 14

Dignitaries From Over Nation Invited to Civic Function.

A committee headed by Frank J. Hogan is sponsoring a civic reception in honor of Bishop-elect James H. Ryan, rector of Catholic University of America, at the Mayflower Hotel November 14. Gov. Alfred E. Smith of New York, Postmaster General James A. Farley, and over seventy Catholic cardinals, archbishops and bishops have signified they will attend.

Gov. Smith on November 14 will also take office as a member of the board of trustees of the Catholic University of America.

The arrangements committee members are: Senators William I. King, Fred W. Van Nuys, and David I. Walsh; Representative Mary T. Norton, Daniel J. Callahan, James E. Colliflower, Joseph J. Cotter, Robert J. Cottrell, Edwin C. Graham, O. H. P. Johnson, Thomas P. Littlepage, Claude W. Owen, Robert V. Fleming, Joseph P. Tumulty, Thomas R. Shipp, Frank J. Hogan, and Robert Jackson.

The reception will begin at 9 p. m. A national broadcast will be made of speeches by dignitaries of Church and State. Guests of honor will form the receiving line at 10 o'clock.

The reception has been arranged partly because it is impossible to seat at the National Shrine of the Immaculate Conception all who wish to attend the consecration services of Bishop Ryan.

Invitations will be extended to prominent educators and statesmen outside the city of Washington. A large out-of-town attendance is expected.

Gen. Johnson to Speak At Chamber Meeting

The twenty-sixth annual meeting of the Washington Chamber of Commerce at the Mayflower Hotel Wednesday night will be dedicated to the NRA.

First Lady Talks To Group Nov. 20

Accepts Invitation to Tuberculosis Meeting.

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, wife of the President, will speak at the annual meeting of the District Tuberculosis Association November 20 in the Brookings Institution assembly hall, 722 Jackson place, Mrs. Ernest R. Grant announced yesterday.

Miss Grace Abbott, chief of the Children's Bureau of the Labor Department, will deliver an address on the problems of child health protection in Washington following the remarks of Mrs. Roosevelt.

The Minister from Denmark, Otto Wadstedt, will be a special guest in consideration of his country's historical connection with the first official use of Christmas seals in the fight against tuberculosis.

Dr. William Charles White, president of the Tuberculosis Association, will preside.

Week of Opera Starts Nov. 19

Popular Prices Promised; Half-Rate Seats Are Offered Children.

A week of grand opera at popular prices has been scheduled for Washington Auditorium beginning Sunday, November 19, it was announced yesterday by Maurice Frank, manager of the International Opera Co. of New York.

The opera casts will include Carmela Ponselle, sister of Rosa Ponselle and member of the Metropolitan Opera Company; Ciro DeRitis, Washington barytone; Martino-Rossi, tenor, and Amelia Vergeri, Frank said.

"Cavalleria Rusticana" and "Pagliaci" will be the opening offering. "Carmen," "Gioconda," "Rigoletto," "Aida," "Traviata," "El Trovatore" and "Faust" will follow. Frank announced he would set aside half the capacity of the auditorium for school children at half prices, provided there was a sufficient demand for tickets. Seat prices will range from 25 and 50 cents in the balcony to 83 and 99 cents in the orchestra. "Aida" will be given a matinee performance for children and teachers Saturday, November 25.

Catholic University Juniors Elect Editor

Daniel E. Lawler, of Syracuse, N. Y., was last week elected editor in chief of the Cardinal of 1935, senior Catholic U. annual, at a meeting of the lay junior class of the university.

Joseph A. Cicala, West Haven, Conn., was chosen business manager. Art editors are John D'Onofrio, of Newark, N. J., and Carlos Fabrega, of Panama City.

DO YOU KNOW YOUR OPERA

(To Music Lovers in Washington)

Get a real thrill from an unusual opportunity to hear Opera at low prices during the week beginning November 19th.

Learn something of the history and development of Opera from a series of lectures especially arranged by Dr. Edwin N. C. Barnes, Mus. Ed. D., covering the operas that will be given by the International Opera Company

There will be ample illustrations by Victrola records, and some of the outstanding arias will be sung by artist students of the Washington Musical Institute.

Beginning October 31st thru November 17th these lectures will be given Tuesday and Friday evenings at 8 o'clock at the Washington Musical Institute, Inc., 831 18th street northwest. Met. 2511.

One Vote Against Many.

A press report, presumably a feeler, states that a proposal to authorize the Governor of the Federal Reserve Bank of New York to become a member of the board of directors of the Bank for International Settlements is under consideration. This proposal is not new, although discussion of the subject in the past has had little, if any, publicity. Heretofore, the Federal Reserve Board has frowned upon the suggestion and it has not been seriously pushed. It should be vigorously opposed now.

Membership in the League of Nations was rejected by the people of this country because they felt that it would impose upon us grave responsibility with respect to questions in which we had only slight interest, if any, and in the consideration of which we could contribute little of value.

Our abstention from the League of Nations was regretted at the time by European nations, but many of their statesmen since have expressed the opinion that probably our action was as wise for Europe as it was for the United States.

Failure to join the League in a way that would have involved us in embarrassing relations has not resulted in failure to join European nations in cooperative effort in specific matters covering a wide range and variety of subjects affecting our own and world interests.

Similarly, during recent years the Federal Reserve System has cooperated with European central banks, and it has done so without membership on the Board of Directors of the Bank for International Settlements. The System can continue to cooperate without such membership.

One need not be an advocate of extreme economic or political national isolation to desire to refrain from having on a board of directors one man, with one vote, to represent the banking resources of the United States, when there are on the same board so many other votes representing relatively so little in resources and so much in experience.

Let the Federal Reserve System cooperate in every proper way with the European central banks, but not sit at the directors' table with a single vote and none too much experience. The heads of foreign central banks are not super-men, but they are essentially men who know what they want.

Do we know what we want? If we do, can the Governor of the Federal Reserve Bank of New York get it for us?

Hard Times vs. Health.

A survey by the Public Health Service illustrates the danger of drawing conclusions from superficial or inadequate facts. Officials of the service were puzzled by reports that the health of the people had improved during the depression. An inquiry was made in eight large cities, involving the case histories of 12,000 families. The returns to date indicate that the depression has made serious inroads upon the health of the unemployed.

The impression that the health of the people has improved since 1930 was gained from a decline in the death rate and the reduction of fatalities from certain diseases. If fewer people out of every 100,000 are dying, it was argued, and some diseases associated with malnutrition are taking a smaller toll, the Nation must be healthier than it was in times of prosperity. But this conclusion does not take account of qualifying factors.

Health surveys have been completed in Detroit, Pittsburgh and Birmingham. The families studied were classified into three groups according to their income per capita. Virtually no change was found in the health of those families that were poor in good times and remained so during the depression. The results were similar for families of moderate means and those in comfortable circumstances, providing they retained their previous status. But families that dropped from comfortable circumstances to poverty during the last three years have experienced 60 per cent more sickness than families that have remained in the comfortable group. Sickness among families of this type also was more prevalent than among families accustomed to poverty. Families of the unemployed were found to have 39 per cent more illness than families of full-time workers. Findings in this respect were much the same in each of the three cities where surveys have been completed.

Unhealthful conditions are not always reflected immediately in the death rate. There is no exact ratio between sickness and mortality. But any conditions which tend to undermine health may accelerate physical deterioration and thus affect the death rate in future years.

The belief that health and hard times go hand in hand may prove to be one of many delusions that have grown out of superficial studies in the last three years.

Licensing New Machinery.

The action taken by the cotton industry in voluntarily empowering the NRA administrator to impose restrictions upon the installation of additional spindles and looms has given rise to many surmises as to the significance of this move. In some quarters the licensing regulations to be applied to the cotton industry are regarded as inaugurating a new policy of Governmental control over private capital investments which will be extended gradually to other industries having excess productive capacity.

As a matter of fact, representatives of the cotton industry are responsible for the insertion in the cotton code of a section recommending that steps be taken to provide for the licensing of additional productive machinery. Accordingly, recommendations have been made on behalf of the industry by its planning committee asking that certificates be secured from the administrator to show that permitted installations are "consistent with effectuating the policy of the National Recovery Act during the period of emergency."

An influential group within the industry long has desired to bring about agreements among competing mills to control output, but the prohibitions of the anti-trust laws have hampered its efforts. Moreover, many low cost mills located in sections in which hours of work have been long and labor relatively cheap have not been disposed to cooperate in a general restriction program for the benefit of the industry as a whole. Consequently, code limitations upon working hours and machine operations have been welcomed by advocates of restriction. The president of the Textile Institute, for instance, says that the limitation of machine operation to two forty-hour shifts "was and is the cornerstone of the code."

If overcapacity, as asserted, necessitates placing restrictions upon the utilization of existing machinery, it follows logically that the industry as a whole would not look with favor upon an expansion of productive capacity at this time. However, while the cotton code was still in embryo, some mills in areas where long hours were customary and labor costs relatively low were busily engaged in installing new machinery in order to be in a position to make up for an anticipated reduction in working time. Hence, it is not necessary to assume that the Government is the prime instigator of an undertaking to establish control over new capital allocations within the cotton industry. Probably it would be fairer to say that in this case the Government is assisting the industry to do what it could not accomplish by its own unaided efforts.

The evidence appears to uphold the position taken by those who maintain that overexpansion reduced the cotton textile industry to a state of chronic depression even during the recent boom years. The chairman of the Plant Extension Committee told members of the Cotton Textile Institute a few days ago that, despite the introduction of code limitations upon working hours, 4,900,000 spindles did not run at any time during August. He concluded that "any tendency of mills located in low cost areas or mills that had hitherto run two or more shifts to compensate for code restrictions by the purchase of additional machinery should be effectually curbed."

As a means of extricating the cotton industry or any other industry from conditions of chronic overproduction, with its attendant wastes and losses, restrictions upon the installation of new machinery may be necessary as a temporary policy. On the other hand, if such restrictions should be long continued, or if they should be embodied in permanent industrial codes, many difficult questions would arise. For example, would low cost cotton mills that could employ more spindles and looms with profit be forbidden to enlarge their equipment until competing mills were fully employed? What would be the effect of a general application of provisions of this sort upon the heavy industries that produce capital equipment? What price would the public be forced to pay for such retardation of the progress of industrial mechanization resulting from refusal to license installation of additional equipment?

These are only a few of the perplexing questions that confront a nation whose property has rested in the past upon its eagerness to expand its capital equipment and to encourage maximum efficiency in operation in order to sell an increasing output at a diminishing cost.

Education of Americans.

Dr. William J. Mayo, famous surgeon, tells a medical association assembled at Cleveland that "under our present form of education" Americans as individuals "are great men, but collectively we are a failure. We throw together into Congress a group of men, each educated along his own narrow line. None has a broad general knowledge of the problems of his country." Dr. Mayo thinks a "general education of youth would ultimately improve government." He speaks approvingly of the plan adopted by the University of Minnesota, which encourages high school graduates to browse about and learn life as well as book knowledge.

In advocating broader general education Dr. Mayo is of course prescribing correctly in behalf of better government. Pending the tedious delay in raising the general level of education which would enable citizens to maintain an ideal government, it may be asked why Americans fail to use their present store of education in behalf of better government. Nearly 50 per cent of them, taking the country as a whole, fail or refuse to vote. The percentage of stay-at-home voters reaches a staggering total in some States. Their failure to perform the duty of voting hardly can be attributed to lack of education.

Dr. Mayo's generalization in regard to members of Congress seems to be too sweeping. Where is there a better forum than Congress for the acquisition of "broad general knowledge of the problems of the country?" Members may have little general knowledge when they begin their novitiate, but certainly they have the opportunity to learn more of government than is being taught in universities.

Pacific Air Plans.

Ambitious projects that have already reached the stage of definite planning and negotiation contemplate linking the Philippine Islands by air lines with the United States, the Asiatic mainland and Europe through the established Dutch routes reaching Java. Governor General Frank Murphy, it is announced from Manila, has proposed a three-year aviation program. Its first objective, a commercial air service between Manila and Hongkong, may soon be realized.

A subsidiary of an American air concern already is established in China. American pilots have completed a survey flight from Shanghai and Hongkong to the Philippines, and executive officers of the United States corporation have been inspecting routes. Improvement of weather report service from Manila appears to be one of the first necessities.

Minor links now considered would eventually form a part of the general plan for a trans-Pacific system crossing from the United States via Honolulu and South Sea Islands to Manila. Even before this American connection is made the Philippines may be joined with the longest air passenger route in the world, that of the Royal Dutch Air Lines from Holland to the Dutch East Indies. This connection would put Manila within about ten days by air from Europe.

Air plans for the Philippines call for a Government aviation unit in the island constabulary to serve as a nucleus for a general air service. During the three years covered by the development of an inter-island system, airports would be constructed in the provincial capitals.

Peking's Famous Observatory.

From the Kansas City Times.

After forecasting the weather, watching the stars, studying the heavens and naming the lucky and unlucky days for nearly 700 years, the famous Peking Observatory, called by the Chinese the "star-gazing platform," has gone into total eclipse.

Henceforth the observatory, which was founded in the time of Marco Polo, will be regarded merely as a museum. Its former functions have been taken over by the meteorological department of the National Academy of Peking.

The scientific world was shocked in 1900 by the looting of the observatory by the French and German troops. Secretly the priceless instruments were removed and sent to Europe for safe-keeping. Gradually the instruments were returned, but since that time have been carefully guarded.

Declared by the Chinese to be the oldest institution of its kind in the world, the Peking Observatory was established by the renowned Kublai Khan, Mongol "Lord of the World," in 1279. The observatory formerly marked the southeast corner of the Mongol capital under Kublai Khan, but when the capital was rebuilt for the occupancy of the Mings, the southern wall was carried farther to the south.

* * * *

When it first was established the observatory was equipped with bronze instruments, provided by Kublai Khan and made by him. It was not until 300 years later that Europe had its first observatory, which was built in Denmark by King Frederick III in 1576. The famous English observatory at Greenwich dates only from 1675, and that at Paris from 1671.

However, the building of the Peking Observatory is not so ancient as the site on which it stands, for about 100 years ago the original structure was replaced and the present building is even more modern.

The principal instruments are on top of the tower, about 10 feet higher than the city wall, from which there formerly was an entrance, but the place can not now be entered from the wall, but through the buildings below, where some of the instruments are to be seen. Visitors have been admitted only by card.

The Peking Observatory for centuries has been regarded by the Chinese nation with sacredness and awe. Upon the reading of the stars by the official astronomers, who as a rule were men of profound learning, the lives and acts of the people in the remotest part of China have been regulated. No marriage, funeral, christening, seed-planting, house-building, selection of a burial site, or any other important affair in a Chinese life has been decided without considering the position of the stars and their astrological bearing upon these events.

For nearly 400 years the observatory was directed by Chinese Mohammedans, who held their posts as imperial astronomers, it is said, because of their classic reputation in forecasting eclipses of the sun and moon, and drawing up a calendar of lucky and unlucky days.

In 1622 the Jesuit fathers, under the celebrated mathematician, Father Schall, replaced the Mohammedan astronomers, when the Jesuits showed the Chinese emperor that the prognosticators had erred in calculating the arrival of an eclipse. Father Schall was thereupon named the imperial astronomer, and the observatory remained in the hands of the Jesuits until the middle of the nineteenth century.

Most of the instruments now in the observatory were made under the direction of the Jesuit priest, Verbiest, who was placed in charge of the observatory as head of the imperial board of mathematics. Verbiest was in charge of the observatory until 1688 and taught the Chinese astronomical science as known to the Europeans.

One of the instruments was presented the Emperor of China by Louis XIV. When the observatory was looted by the Germans many of these instruments were sent to decorate a terrace in Potsdam. The looted instruments were replaced by copies half the size of the originals. When the treaty of Versailles was signed, Germany agreed to return the originals, China thus gaining the "booby prize" of the great war, as this was her sole reward for joining the allies.

In addition to the other prized instruments taken by the raiders was a celestial globe, a huge bronze sphere, on whose surface the stars were represented as brass-headed nails. In the courtyard there has stood, until recent years, two splendid planispheres mounted on chained dragons of most curious design and workmanship. These were the rarest treasures of all, for they dated to the thirteenth century and were made by the order of the Mongol conqueror himself.

They showed that even at that early day the Chinese possessed a perfect knowledge of casting in bronze, for these instruments were of the finest workmanship and equal to any producible in the world today.

The Peking Observatory has and always will remain a shrine for the Chinese. It is as sacred to them as is Mount Vernon to Americans, and as a museum it probably will come nearer serving its purpose than as an observatory.

China thought enough of its observatory that it was willing to sacrifice all war spoils for the return of its prized instruments. There was a tradition to observe, and despite a modernness which is slowly creeping into the empire, China rises again to defend its ancient institution.

Carlisle Bargeron

EVERYTHING is being done on such a patriotic basis nowadays that perhaps it is entirely out of order to say that the administration's supporters breathed a distinct sigh of relief when Mr. Roosevelt hit upon the plan of investigating the salaries of all high corporation officials, and that the Republicans threw up their hands and said: "Oh, what's the use?"

BARGERON.

I know that we have been living since March in such a perfect state, with partisan politics so absolutely adjourned, that any statement that the administration supporters and the Republicans could have reacted this way is sensational in that it implies that the Republicans are just watching for the President to make a slip on which they can make a case. But it so happens that this is the fact.

* * * *

AND these Republicans thought they had a good one on him, too, with his announcement that he wanted the movie actors' and actresses' salaries readjusted. There was about this such a ridiculousness that the Republicans took more heart than they have enjoyed since the debacle of last year. That the President was worried about the salaries of the movie people and that his complaint seemed to be, or so lent itself to the interpretaton, that they made more than he, seemed to be a vehicle of political attack of the first degree.

It lent itself to ridicule which is certainly a vulnerable approach against the enemy and furthermore it was riding on its own accord without the Republicans pushing it along.

Paragraphers throughout the country were laughing about it; there were countless jibes about the President being out to reduce Baby LeRoy's salary. You can appreciate what an unfavorable picture this put Mr. Roosevelt in. There would have been soon, if there have not already been, cartoons depicting the President and Baby LeRoy in combat. You know how certain things catch on in the country, like popular songs, the current version of "The Three Little Pigs" and the "Big Bad Wolf," and Mr. Roosevelt's closing of the banks when he first came in.

* * * *

WELL, his war on the movie salaries was catching on, but not in a way favorable to him. Any study of the country's newspapers proves that.

It had the Democratic leaders perturbed, too. Why, they asked, should Mr. Roosevelt with all of his problems and worries turn to such a silly thing as this. The Republicans laughed hopefully as they have not laughed in many moons.

The distinct impression, too, is that Mr. Roosevelt realized very soon after the words left his mouth that he had made a slip, that his penchant for doing things, for keeping things moving, had in this instance done him wrong.

* * * *

BUT he has an asset which Mr. Hoover did not have and this is what saved him. He has a sense of humor. It stood him in good stead and when the reporters went back to him after the first reaction of his announcement had come in, he wasn't mad. He seemed to be enjoying the thing as much as anyone else, as much as the Republicans, in fact. He held his head.

It would seem to be significant that following closely upon that incident was the announcement that all high corporation salaries were to be probed. The Baby LeRoy business becomes lost in that. Hah, the light is to be thrown over a wider field.

People being constituted as they are, Mr. Roosevelt will get a good hand on this, regarless of the merits of the plan or of whether anything is ever done about these salaries or not.

* * * *

OF course, it maybe that the two incidents have not the slightest connection, that the administration had sometime ago directed the inquiry into the corporation salaries. It is a fact, though, that the announcement that five governmental agencies had sprung into action on this matter came out after people got to laughing about the movie salary stuff. And Attorney General Cummings' opinion about what the Government may or may not do in the premises seems to have been rather hastily got up.

And whether the corporation salary inquiry was started to take the spoligh from the movie salary slip or not, the Democratic leaders are very glad it came. By the same token the Republicans who had arisen from their seats have again sat down with the observation:

"You can do nothing with a man as clever as that."

MIXED METAPHORS.

Mixed metaphors are a common byplay in times when the blood is hot and the imagination outruns the tongue, says the Worcester Telegram. Nevertheless, the national speaker who recently mildly intimated that any one who tried to scuttle the NRA would find that he had "jumped into a hornet's nest up to the hilt" needs every decent allowance that can be made for a distracted mind. Which leads to the question: Why do we cling in a machine age to metaphors which hark back to preindustrial days?

Not one man in 10,000 has ever held a sword in his hand, and fewer still could recognize a hornet's nest, yet these analogies persist. We live in an automobile age, yet we lock the stable after the horse is stolen, and put the cart before the horse, &c., &c.

Karl W. Corby Plans Charity Horse Show

Program Will Include 8 Classes and Two 1½-Mile Races.

Mounts from leading stables in Washington and vicinity will make their last appearance of the outdoor show season next Saturday in a benefit performance for the Washington Home for Incurables.

The show is being sponsored by Karl W. Corby and will be held at his Timberlawn Farm estate on the Rockville pike near Garrett Park, Md.

A program featuring eight regular show classes and two 1½-mile steeplechase races for nonthoroughbred horses and thoroughbreds has been prepared by Bernard Cox. The show will start at 1 p. m.

Will Ride in Colors.

Both races will be ridden in colors and will be staged over one of the toughest steeplechase courses in this section.

Approximately 100 horses are to be entered. Exhibitors expected are Percy M. Niepold, Miss Margaret Cotter and her father, Joseph J. Cotter; Vernon Owens, Albert E. MacKenzie, Claude W. Owen, president of the Washington Board of Trade; W. C. Eacho, Larmour Oyster, George P. Plummer, Thomas T. Mott, Mrs. William G. Hill, Boyd Keys, Miss Eleanor Diamond, Mrs. Charles Nicholson, Mrs. A. B. Court, Mrs. Ira T. Wycke, Joseph Burrows, Mrs. J. Banks Berry, F. Moran McConihe, Miss Marian Lang, Frank Burrows, Vernon Clark, jr., Charles C. Carrico, Miss Edna Roth, Fenton Fadeley, Mrs. James Kriz, Mrs. Harold E. Egan, Albert Ryan, Mrs. E. T. Goodman, Miss Maude Priest.

The Program.

Class 1—Open saddle class. Conformation, manners and style of going to count. First, $8; second, $5; third, ribbon.

Class 2—Hack and hunter. Must show a good square walk with loose reins, fast trot and slow canter; then over jumps, not to exceed 3½ feet. Performance under saddle, 40 per cent; over jumps, 40 per cent, and quality and suitability to count 20 per cent. First, trophy; second, ribbon; third, ribbon.

Class 3—Hunters other than thoroughbreds, to be shown at a fair hunting gait over an outside course. Performance and way of going to count. First, trophy; second, ribbon; third, ribbon.

Class 4—Saddle class. Thoroughbred type. Shown at a walk, trot and canter. Conformation, 50 per cent; manners and way of going to count 50 per cent. First, $5; second, ribbon; third, ribbon.

Institute Takes Up Problems of Church

Church problems will be considered at a three-day interdemoninational missionary institute of the Woman's Council, Washington Federation of Churches, beginning Tuesday in First Congregational Church.

Miss Margaret Slattery will be the principal speaker Wednesday night at a mass meeting. She will talk on "Youth Rides Out the Storm." A study on "Christianity and Industry in America" will be directed by Mrs. Joy Elmer Morgan, Baltimore.

Other speakers include Mrs. Wellen Fisher, Mrs. William L. Darby, Mrs. F. E. Edington and Mrs. Walter Knipp. A pageant on modern life will be given Thursday.

Mental Hygiene Group Plans Annual Dinner

Dr. William A. White, president of the Washington Institute of Mental Hygiene, which includes the Child Guidance Clinic and the Life Adjustment Center, will preside at the institute's annual dinner meeting next Saturday night at 6:30 o'clock at the Y. W. C. A. Mrs. Harold K. Moulton is dinner chairman.

Dr. George Stevenson, director of community clinics of the National Committee of Mental Hygiene, will speak on "The Mental Hygiene Clinic in the Community." Dr. Ernest R. Groves, professor of sociology at the University of North Carolina, will give the principal address, speaking on "Readjustment to the New Social Order."

The Senator's Diary

Monday, Oct. 16.

Prohibition repeal, as we used to say about prosperity, is "just around the corner." It will be here sooner than any one, even the most optimistic wet, expected. Thirty-three States have voted and all have favored repeal. In only one—Tennessee—was the result even close. Only three more States are needed to complete ratification and they should be secured on November 7.

On that day Pennsylvania, Ohio, Kentucky, North Carolina, South Carolina and Utah will elect delegates to State repeal conventions.

It is taken for granted that the first three named will go wet. Probably the other three will go wet also, although North Carolina is ranked next to Kansas in dryness, and Utah must overcome the opposition of the powerful Mormon elders to repeal.

But by early December all the necessary formalities of repeal should be completed. And then will ensue an interregnum of at least a month—perhaps two months—until Congress can enact appropriate legislation to meet the situation brought about by repeal. The truth is that the National Government and most of the States have been caught unprepared by reason of the amazing speed of the repeal movement.

Many States, of course, will go on as usual for a while, operating under their old prohibition laws and letting the bootleggers take care of the needs of the thirsty. But the country generally, I think, is looking to Washington for guidance in handling the liquor problem. The States want to see, for instance, what sort of law Congress will enact to control the sale of hard liquor in the District of Columbia. The Capital apparently is to be the "dog" for experimental liquor legislation. If the legislation works, it will serve as a model for the rest of the country. If it doesn't work, Congress can try something else. Also, the States want to find out what the Federal Government is going to do about taxing liquor so that they can work out their own taxing systems.

Tuesday Oct. 17.

On account of the Norris lameduck admendment, Congress will meet a month later than usual, and when it does meet there will be wide differences of opinion concerning the best legal methods for regulating the liquor traffic. There seems to be an almost unanimous feeling that the saloon should be outlawed, but the lawmakers may encounter considerable difficulty in reaching an agreement about where liquor should be sold. The plan suggested by the Rockefeller group is being studied carefully, but its reception has not been enthusiastic. Perhaps the administration will come forward with a program that will command a majority.

Congress will have a knotty problem on its hands when it undertakes to determine the tax to be levied on spirituous liquors. During the interval between repeal and congressional action it is assumed now that the old tax of $1.10 a gallon will prevail. As a revenue producer that would be a failure. Some want to make the tax $2 a gallon, some $3 a gallon, and some are suggesting reestablishment of the World War rate of $6.40 a gallon.

If the rate is too high, bootleggers will find it profitable to continue in business. I have an idea that a rate of about $3 a gallon eventually will be adopted. That would mean 75 cents tax on every quart and, I am told, that retailers could sell it profitably at about $2 a bottle. Even at that figure the bootlegging industry may continue to thrive. A generation grown accoustomed to bathtub gin at 75 cents or less per quart may not take kindly to $2 whisky.

Wednesday, Oct. 18.

The approach of repeal raises another interesting question: What is Morris Sheppard going to say on January 16 when it comes time for him to make his annual speech on the success of prohibition? January 16 is the anniversary of the ratification of the eighteenth amendment, which Sheppard sponsored in the Senate. Every year for the past decade it has been Sheppard's custom on that date to rise in the Senate and deliver a carefully prepared address describing the benefits of the dry law. The speech usually was notable for its extreme length and the lack of rapt attention on the part of Sheppard's colleagues. I am sure that when Sheppard speaks on next January 16 he will have a much better audience than in the past. Former Senator George Moses, for instance, has promised to return to the Senate to listen to him.

Thursday, Oct. 19.

No one, perhaps, will be more devoutly thankful for the repeal of prohibition than genial Jim Farley. Jim has carried the wet banner of the Administration into all kinds of hostile territory, particularly in the South. He has made numerous speeches as the President's spokesman and he has applied the pressure to the local organization leaders where it was necessary to get out the vote for repeal. No other official of the Administration has contributed so effectively to repeal as the "political master general." Jim has done all this, it should be borne in mind, entirely through devotion to principle. He is a total abstainer himself and always has been. He won't even have the pleasure of a legalized highball when repeal becomes effective. He probably will celebrate by eating a large bar of sweet chocolate, his worst form of dissipation.

Friday, Oct. 20.

Carter Glass, now verging on 76, is back from Europe in much improved health, but still under his doctor's watchful eye. His acid witticisms are the delight of those who attend the banking and currency hearings in the Senate Office Building these days. Recently after a series of sharp exchanges in the committee room, he rose and said:

"I'm tired of providing all the entertainment at these hearings. I must run along to see my doctor now. Some one else must take over the job."

Mr. Glass is not the only cantankerous member of the banking and currency committee. He has a worthy rival in Senator Jim Couzens, of Michigan. Couzens grew indignant the other day when Fredinand Pecora, the committee's chief counsel, and Clarence Dillon, of Dillon, Read & Co., wound up the session by exchanging compliments across the table. Although he has been most friendly to Mr. Pecora, he expressed his displeasure emphatically.

"I do not want this hearing to end with a mere exchange of flowers when I feel that the matter is much more serious than that," he said.

Saturday, Oct. 21.

For the benefit of those who are inquiring what has become of the "brain trust," I can state that it is still functioning, but it doesn't seem to be able to get the publicity it did when it was headed by Prof. Ray Moley. Prof. Moley possessed a headline-winning knack that his erstwhile colleagues in the "trust" don't appear to have.

Criminals Told Churches Unite To Fight Them

Wilbur La Roe, Jr., Points to Crime Increase and Drunkenness Here.

Increases in the number of arrests for drunkenness and crime in the District of Columbia were cited last night as one of the civic problems confronting the city by Wilbur La Roe, jr., chairman of the civic committee of the Washington Federation of Churches. Mr. La Roe spoke over WRC on the Washington Community Forum.

"I am almost ashamed to say over a radio which carries my voice to other parts of the United States, that in September alone 2,026 persons were arrested for drunkenness in the District of Columbia, an average of 67 per day," Mr. La Roe said. "That illustrates how beer is making us sober. If under a beer regime we have 67 persons a day arrested for drunkenness in the District of Columbia, I dread to think what we shall have under a whisky regime.

Crime Found on Increase.

"I wish that increased drunkenness were our only difficulty. In September alone 468 persons were arrested for commission of felonies. Included in these felonies were 8 arrests for murder, 2 for manslaughter, 35 for assault with a dangerous weapon, 20 for grand larceny, 46 for robbery and 263 for housebreaking. It is interesting to compare the number of arrests for housebreaking for September, 1933 and 1932. The figures are 263 for this year and 85 for September last year."

Mr. La Roe said the depression had placed terrific burdens on police, courts and welfare agencies of the city. He added there had been a startling increase in crime and immorality and "Never did Protestant, Catholic and Jew present such a united fight against those things which pull men down or join with greater determination in an effort to lift men up."

Churches Ready to Fight.

"I have no doubt," Mr. La Roe said, "that included in this radio audience are some denizens of the underworld who are responsible for crime conditions prevailing in this Capital. To you, the Washington Federation of Churches sends this message:

"'It is our desire to help you by guiding you along a better path, if you show the slightest inclination in that direction; if not, we intend to give you battle. Either this is going to be a city of which the Nation will be proud or it is going to be a city of vice and drunkenness. There is no room for compromise. Either we are going to surrender to you and close the doors of our churches, or you are going to surrender and mend your ways or get out of the District of Columbia. Which will it be?'"

Missionaries Will Visit D.C.

Dr. Jones, of India, Among Lecturers to Appear December 10-12.

Noted Protestant missionaries will deliver a series of lectures in Washington churches and auditoriums during a conference of foreign mission boards December 10-12. Among them is Dr. E. Stanley Jones, of India.

The conference will be one of 29 to be held in 16 major cities by almost 100 mission boards.

The Washington conference will open December 10, when 20 pulpits will be occupied by visiting speakers. In the afternoon there will be mass meetings at Constitution Hall and the Washington Cathedral.

On December 11 there will be a union meeting of city and suburban ministers at the Epiphany Episcopal Church, followed by luncheons and evening sessions. Denominational conferences will be held December 12. The conference will close with a dinner at the Mayflower Hotel December 12.

Headquarters will be at the Washington Federation of Churches office.

"NRA Failure," Long Declares

Senator Visits Shreveport in Private Car of Rail, Utilities Magnates.

Shreveport, La., Oct. 21 (AP).—Senator Huey P. Long came to Shreveport today in the private railroad car of the Couch brothers, railroad and utilties magnates, and urged redistribution of wealth at a bridge dedication. When the senator reached the city, he posed for a picture beside the car, which he said belonged to "my friend, Harvey Couch."

He told his hearers here the NRA plan "is not working" and asserted he saw "very little hope" for National recovery unless his program for decentralization of wealth is adopted.

In a reference to his lack of war service Long said today:

"I didn't go to war because I had a wife and children to support. I didn't go because I wasn't mad at anybody and I won't go the next time unless they make me, like they did a lot of fellows during the last war."

Trio Calls on Visitor In Chicago; Kills Him

Chicago, Oct. 21 (AP).—Clovis Yerkes, about 25, believed by police to be from Mobile, Ala., was shot to death by one of three men who called on him at his rooming house here tonight. The slayers fled. Police said a letter written to Yerkes by Miss Rosa Moore, Mobile, led them to believe he was also from the Alabama city.

Clarksburg, W. Va., Oct. 21 (Spl.). Announcement was made by Hubert Ellis, State department commander, of the appointment of F. Allen Simmons, of Moundsville, as West Virginia department Americanization chairman for the American Legion.

Plans Drafted For Christmas Tree Lighting

Yaden Appoints Leaders in Arrangements of Yuletide Event.

Plans for the annual lighting of the National Community Christmas Tree, in Sherman Square, south of the United States Treasury Building, will be started soon by a committee representing the Community Center Council, which each year puts in motion machinery for this "official" celebration of the Yule season on Christmas Eve.

J. G. Yaden, president of the Community Center Council, which last year held its semiannual meeting in the board room of the Franklin Administration Building, has announced names of the men and women in charge of the organization of the citizens committee on arrangements, the national committee and the tentative plans. In addition to Mr. Yaden, the members of this committee are Frederick A. Delano, Henry L. Quinn, H. C. Phillips, Miss Edith Grosvenor, Mark Lansburgh and Col. West Hamilton.

The council reelected Mr. Yaden for his third consecutive term, and named Miss Edith Grosvenor and William H. Lewis vice presidents. Miss Helen Wedding, of the Community Center Department, was chosen secretary temporarily.

Mrs. E. K. Peoples, director of the Community Center Department, presented a resume of the year's activities and attendance at all centers throughout the city, and stressed the difficulties and problems of carrying through a program of real recreational leadership under existing financial stress.

The attendance at all public events conducted by the Community Center Department last summer was 446,000, a notable increase over the 227,000 the year before. These figures include the Fourth of July, summer festivals and other outdoor recreation programs sponsored by the department.

Among those at the meeting were Mrs. Truman Abbe, Mrs. L. W. Hardy, Mrs. Clara Critchfield, Mrs. William F. Meggard, Miss Edith Grosvenor, Dr. Marie B. Lucas, Miss Bess Davis Schreiner, Miss Helen Wedding, George Beason, W. H Lewis, Mark Lansburgh, Bernard G. Ladd, H. C. Phillips and H. D. Woodson.

Roosevelts Break Personal Vote Rule

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., Oct. 21 (AP).—For the first time in many years, President Roosevelt will not vote in person at his usual Hyde Park polling place on November 7.

Giving "duties in Washington" as the reason for inability to vote in person, the applications of the President and Mrs. Roosevelt for absentee ballots were received today by the Dutchess County board of elections here.

The ballot forms will be sent to Mr. and Mrs. Roosevelt.

Baker Bids Nation To Relief Rally

Mrs. Roosevelt to Preside at Two Sessions.

New York, Oct. 21 (AP).—Newton D. Baker, Chairman of the 1933 Mobilization for Human needs, tonight set October 30 as the date for a National campaign rally in Chicago of 102 communities that will seek to raise $53,651,210 before November 20 for welfare work.

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt will preside at two of the sessions as chairman of the National Women's committee.

YE OLDE TAVERN

Just as in the GOOD OLD DAYS

Milton S. Kronheim will resume the sale of fine wines and liquors, if and when the 18th Amendment is repealed. Again, as in the good old days, Kronheim will supply Washington with the finest of domestic and imported stocks, and has already completed arrangements which will be of interest to all dealers qualified to dispense Wines and Liquors, under the laws existing after repeal.

Managers, Owners and Caterers of Clubs, Hotels, Drug Stores and Restaurants are invited to communicate with Mr. Kronheim at once. His services and counsel in this connection are at their immediate disposal and his previous experience may prove of valuable assistance.

You are urged to take immediate advantage of this service with the understanding, of course, that all information will be effective if, as, and when Wines and Liquors are legalized and that all arrangements will be subject to Federal, State and District regulations and taxes.

Guests Invited In Observance By Girl Scouts

Callers at Little House to Include Mrs. Dall, Secretary Perkins.

Mrs. Anna Roosevelt Dall, Miss Frances Perkins, Mrs. Harold Ickes and Mrs. Wilbur Car will visit the National Girl Scout Little House during Girl Scout week, opening next Saturday.

Other visitors will include Mrs. Frederick Brooke, Mrs. Henry Flather, Mrs. Walter Tuckerman, Mrs. Frederick Atherton, Mrs. E. Goring Bliss, Mrs. J. Harris Franklin, Miss Elizabeth Houghton, Mrs. Arthur MacArthur, Miss Grace Abbott, Mrs. Ellis A. Yost, Miss Hettie P. Anderson, Miss Margaret Fox, Mrs. Seth Thomas, Mrs. George Scriven, Mrs. Anson Phelps Stokes, Mrs. Lindsay Russell, Mrs. Adolphus Staton and Mrs. Edward E. Gann.

The week will start Saturday with a Girl Scout entertainment for settlement children in the Little House. There will be games in the nursery at 10:30 a. m., followed by a luncheon prepared by Girl Scout cooks, Betsy Ross, Margaret Staebner and Betty Rawdon, Troop 60.

During the children's afternoon nap cookies will be baked to be served at the story-hour later in the afternoon. Scouts who have qualified for the child nurse badge will be on duty. They are Isabel Walter, Irene Scott, Helen Sheets and Margaret Osterwald, Troop 53.

Each Girl Scout will attend her own church in uniform October 29. The Rev. Mr. Burgan, of the Hamline Methodist Episcopal Church; Dr. Hollister, of Chevy Chase Presbyterian Church, and the Rev. Mr. Clarke, of the Takoma Park Trinity Episcopal Church, will give special Girl Scout services.

Monday will be home-making day. Girl Scouts will bake and decorate a birthday cake to be served at the Brownie party the following day.

Tuesday is handicraft day. Girls will make baskets, hammocks, rugs and quilts in the Little House and in one of the department stores.

Wednesday is thrift day. Canned goods left over from community gardens will be exhibited.

There will be demonstrations of community service, extension scouting and Red Cross activities the remainder of the week.

Lynching Protested By Colored Elks

Message Sent to President on Mob Violence.

The Grand Lodge of Colored Elks, through its Civil Liberties Department yesterday, addressed President Roosevelt at Chestertown, Md., by telegram, on the subject of mob violence.

At the same time, the grand legal advisor, Perry W. Howard, Republican National committeeman from Mississippi, and W. C. Hueston, Elk education commissioner, proffered their legal services to the Negro, George Crawford, extradited from Massachusetts for trial in Leesburg, Va., for murder.

J. Finley Wilson, grand exalted ruler, and James E. Kelley, grand secretary, on behalf of the grand lodge, sent a telegram to the President saying:

"The grand lodge of the Improved Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks of the World, through its National Department of Civil Liberties, earnestly prays the Chief Executive of the United States of America, while on the Eastern Shore of Maryland to receive the degree of doctor of laws from a college named in honor of the first Chief Executive of the Nation, that he find occasion incident to receipt of such degree to emphasize the importance of law and order and to deprecate mob violence on American soil."

Howard Gets Works Fund For Buildings

Library and Classrooms at University to Cost $1,250,000.

Construction of a library and an educational classroom building for Howard University will be started immediately as a result of an allotment of $1,250,000 yesterday by the Public Works Administration.

The library, to be four floors in height, will cost $800,000. It will contain table study accommodations for 800 students, with space for 700,000 volumes, reserve book and periodical rooms.

The present obsolete main building of the university, erected in 1870, will be replaced by a modern four-story building costing $460,000. In addition to classrooms it will contain professors' offices and other accommodations. Authorities estimate the two buildings will provide employment for more than 4,400 man-months.

An additional allotment of $80,000 was made yesterday to aid in reconstruction of a power plant at St. Elizabeths Hospital. The original authorization for this project was $250,000.

Another allotment of $30,000 was made for the National Training School for Boys to be used in reconditioning 15 buildings. The work will employ about 15 men for a year.

A fourth allotment of $85,000 to be expended in Washington was granted to the National Institute of Health to be used at once in two new buildings recently built at Twenty-fourth and E streets northwest. The Federal Government previously had allotted $570,000 for construction of the buildings.

Allotments totaling $4,359,900 were made yesterday for various Government enterprises, the largest, $3,300,000 going to the Coast and Geodetic Survey, Department of Commerce. This money will be expended for field surveys and triangulation, also for procurement of boats, trucks and other equipment.

70 Per Cent in Wages.

Seventy per cent of the allotment will go directly to wages, and it is estimated that 1,300 man-years of employment will be furnished.

The General Accounting Office received $506,000 for additional expenses in auditing expenditures authorized by the national industrial recovery act. An allotment of $1,000 was made to the Bureau of Mines for repairs to a building at McAlester, Okla.

Indian villages in Alaska will be improved by $100,000 granted the Bureau of Indian Affairs. On this project Indian labor will be used. It is estimated work can start at once and 1,400 man-months of employment be given on road building, trails, paths, and drainage.

An international flood control waterway will be constructed at Nogales, Ariz., with $433,000 allotted to the International Boundary Commission. The allotment provides for completion of the American section of the project. An appropriation by the Mexican government for its share of the work is expected soon.

The aeronautics branch of the Department of Commerce was allotted $19,500 for the installation of airway lights between Louisville, Ky., and Indianapolis, Ind.

An award of $400 was made to the Department of Agriculture to complete an artesian well on Government property at Stoneville, Miss.

Dr. Seidman Named To Open Lectures

"New Deal" His Topic at Jewish Center.

Dr. Joel Seidman, of Johns Hopkins University, will open the fall program of lectures at the Jewish Community Center Wednesday night wilth a talk on "The New Deal." He will deliver four other lectures on following Wednesdays.

Other lecturers are Dr. N. B. Fagin, Johns Hopkins, who will make three talks on the American theater, and Dr. Frank N. Trager, instructor of philosophy at Johns Hopkins, whose topic will be "A Critique of Modern Books."

A boxing show and buffet supper will open the athletic season tomorrow night under joint auspices of the center and Jewish War Veterans, Washington Post.

The Dramatic Society will hold an open meeting Thursday night, when Senor Jose Giberman, of the Spanish Embassy, will talk on the "Spanish Drama." Edgar Ansell Mowrer, former chief of Berlin's foreign correspondents, will speak November 5 on "Germany Turns Back the Clock."

Ladies of Charity Sponsor Lectures

Miss Louise McGuire Heard Monday, October 30.

A series of lectures on volunteer participation in community welfare work has been arranged at the National Catholic School of Social Service, under sponsorship of the Washington Ladies of Charity.

The first lecture, on "The City's Responsibility to Its Citizens," will be given by Miss Louise McGuire, instructor in social economics, Monday night, October 30.

Among other persons interested in social welfare who will address this group during the series are Dr. James Gannon, Washington surgeon; Miss Fay Bentley, director of the department of school attendance and work permits; Miss Gertrude Bowling, executive director of the Instructive Visiting Nurses; the Rev. Dr. Thomas Vernon Moore, psychiatrist; Miss Mildred Terrett, executive secretary of the Juvenile Protective Association, and Miss Catherine Lenroot, assistant chief of the United States Children's Bureau.

Back-to-Farm Program Urged For Negro Race

Educator Pleads for NRA to Assume Leadership in Permanent Relief.

(Associated Press.)

Finding no permanent good to the Negro in relief subsidy in the city, Kelly Miller, dean of Howard University here, yesterday made a plea that the National Recovery Administration aid members of his race to establish themselves on farms.

"The city Negro has no definite function or assured status," Dean Miller said.

"The farm is the Negro's best chance and the best help the Government can render him in this emergency is to aid him to avail himself of this chance."

Dean Explains Plan.

The 70-year-old dean, connected with the Negro university here as student and professor 53 years, suggested that whatever funds are set aside for Negro relief be devoted to establishing exemplary Negro farm communities in the South, where the race would have business and social centers, with churches, a general store and playgrounds, and could develop a culture of its own.

Apprehension was expressed by the educator over the fact that Negroes during recent years have lost 4,000 square miles of land they formerly owned and tilled.

Citing that one-tenth of the national population is Negro, and that two-fifths of the Negro population is urban, Miller said members of his race "loiter around the outer edge of industry and are assigned to the manual and menial tasks which the white man does not prefer to perform. He has been attracted by the glow of the city allurements as the moth by the candle, only to be blinded by its light and consumed by its heat."

Different in Country.

The country offers a different picture, Miller said, "not less deplorable at present, but immeasurably more promising in prospect. Competition is less keen and conditions of living are easier to meet. The Negro is more nearly on equal terms with his environment, being closer to the heart of Mother Nature, who is more kindly and congenial with him than the artificial sophisticated conditions of city life."

The educator ended his plea for Negro relief of a permanent nature with a statement that the NRA "can no more efficiently serve the Nation than by serving the Nation's neediest in a way that will encourage them along the line of self-competency and self-respect."

Swede Lauds U. S. Courage on NRA

Economist, Here to Study Plan, Praises Wisdom.

Praise for the "undaunted courage and power of wisdom" of the United States in its recovery experiment, while other nations hesitate, was expressed yesterday by Dr. Erik Sjostrand, Swedish economist, who is making a study of the NRA for his government.

A former attache of Swedish legations in London and Paris and at present an emissary of his government to the International Labor Office, Dr. Sjostrand visited NRA headquarters and later planned trips to industrial centers to study results of the recovery drive.

"What struck me very much in America is the undaunted courage and the power of wisdom in swift decision with which America is facing the problems and trying to solve them," he said.

"I think everyone must be impressed by the figures published by the Department of Labor on the number of industrial workers reinstated during September."

Church Supper November 25.

The annual supper and dance of the parishoners of the Church of the Ascension of Bowie, Md., will be given November 25. The arrangements committee includes Mrs. Mary Hardy, Mrs. John E. Mullikin, Mrs. Guy Bell, Mrs. Barbara Baumann, Mrs. Leo Baden, Mrs. William Lloyd, Mrs. Willis Lancaster, Mrs. Bessie Milton, Mrs. John Vermillion and Mrs. Eldbridge Jones.

Buster Keaten Rewed; Mexican Knot Invalid

Ventura, Calif., Oct. 21 (AP).—Joseph "Buster" Keaton, 38, screen comedian, and Mae Scrivens Hawley, 28, his nurse, were married here today by Judge Malvern Dimmick. They were accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. Melville D. Coakley, of San Francisco.

This is the second marriage of the couple, one several months ago in Mexico having been invalid under the California law.

Wallace Aids Roerich Peace Banner Parley

Leads Officials Seeking Protection for Art in Time of War.

Secretary of Agriculture Wallace heads a long list of officials announced yesterday as honorary members of the third international Roerich Peace Banner convention called to meet in Washington next month to urge world recognition of the Roerich peace emblem to protect art treasure centers from destruction in time of war. Secretary Wallace will address the convention.

More than 25 nations will send representatives, according to Louis L. Horch, president of the Roerich Museum in New York, sponsor of the meeting in behalf of Nicholas Roerich, founder of the museum and originator of the peace banner idea.

Other speakers will be Senators Nye and Erickson, and Charles Moore, chairman of the Fine Arts Commission. The list of honorary members includes Senator Wagner, honorary chairman; Supreme Court Justice Sutherland, Governors Herring, Iowa; Blazer, Nevada; Ferguson, Texas; McNutt, Indiana; Moeur, Arizona; Park, Missouri; Langer, North Dakota; Talmage, Georgia; Senators Fletcher, Logan, Thomas and McCarran; Bishop James E. Freeman, Bishop Francis J. McConnell, L. V. Coleman, director of the American Association of Museums, Washington; C. Powell Minnigerode, director, Corcoran Art Gallery, and Duncan Phillips, of the Phillips Memorial Art Gallery here.

C. of C. Offers Praise to NRA On Wednesday

Gen. Johnson and Local Assistants Included in Tribute.

"NRA Night," to pay tribute to the administration's recovery work, Gen. Hugh S. Johnson and local groups aiding in the work, will be celebrated by the Washington Chamber of Commerce Wednesday. The occasion will be the chamber's twenty-sixth annual meeting, to be held at the Mayflower.

Thomas F. Littlepage, chamber president, in announcing the meeting, said: "The beneficial results of the National Recovery Administration are now evident throughout the country and in the Capital City and are attested by material increases both in employment volume and wages paid. Washington business owes a debt of gratitude to NRA and its efficient leader and the Chamber of Commerce is proud of the opportunity to give voice to this local appreciation."

Official business to be transacted at the meeting includes election of a president, two vice presidents, and new members of the board of directors. Those placed in nomination for the governing board are Thomas N. Beavers, Col. Wrisley Brown, Lee D. Butler, C. C. Cappel, W. H. Collier, P. Michael Cook, Frank H. Edmonds, Col. U. S. Grant 3d, Ernest E. Herrell, C. Phillips Hill, Richard H. Hutchison, and Joseph P. Tumulty.

Arrangements are being made by Harry T. Peters, chairman, the chamber's house committee and the directors. A talk by Mr. Littlepage will be broadcast at 9 p. m. Monday summarizing the annual report of chamber activities.

Trio Held in Probe Of Mystery Injury

Roommates of Man Found Unconscious Detained.

Three roommates of Clifton J. Day, 32, found unconscious beneath the window of an apartment at 1604 Q street northwest, remained behind bars in Third Precinct yesterday while physicians at Emergency Hospital reported Day's condition unchanged.

Day, with possible concussion of the brain and fracture of his skull, was semiconscious last night, but unable to talk coherently.

The men held are Warren Winders, 23, and Hoyt Brown, 24, both of Shreveport, La., and Robert A. O'Neil, 22, Los Angeles. They were unable to explain why Day was fully clothed when found in the apartment areaway.

Each of the trio said he was awakened by the man who found Day unconscious.

Ickes Helpless as "Sharks" Plan Harvest at Oregon Dam

Declares Proclamation to Block Land Rush Is Forbidden.

A new threat by "land sharks" to profiteer at the expense of gullible investors by selling them land in the vicinity of the $20,250,000 Bonneville power dam, to be built in Oregon with Public Works funds, yesterday found Secretary of Interior Ickes virtually powerless to halt such sales.

Ickes said his legal department informed him he was without the power to issue a proclamation withholding cheap power from persons owning land bought from the sharpers.

"I have been asked by Senators and Representatives to issue a proclamation that no electricity will be furnished from the Bonneville power dam to land which is sold at profiteering prices," Mr. Ickes said in a press statement.

"This has been suggested in order to stop land speculators who have obtained options on land in the vicinity of this project with a view to boosting prices through a boom similar to that by which thousands were mulcted in the vicinity of Muscle Shoals.

"I would do anything in my power to spike the guns of these predatory land brigands. Muscle Shoals should furnish a lesson to the unwary. Thousands were induced to purchase land here on the representation that it would vastly increase in value. It has not and will not and neither will the land in the vicinity of the Bonneville project."

Mr. Ickes' legal advisers pointed out that action by the Department would tend to fix land values, for which no authority is given to the executive branch of the Government.

Air Officials to Be Guests on Zeppelin

Department of Commerce officials are to be guests of Dr. Hans Luther, German Ambassador, aboard the Graf Zeppelin when it flies from Akron Ohio, to Chicago.

Ewing Y. Mitchell, Assistant Secretary of Commerce in Charge of Transportation, and Eugene L. Viral, Director of Aeronautics, will fly in the Commerce Department's transport plane with Dr. Luther to Akron, leaving Washington at noon Wednesday, the Associated Press reports.

Discharges Given 13,838 Here; Thousands Are Shifted to South.

Wholesale discharging of young men from the Civilian Conservation Corps on completion of six months' enlistment periods, and the rebuilding of the corps for the winter has been virtually completed. It was announced yesterday by Robert Fechner, C. C. C. director, that 13,838 from the Third Corps Area, which includes the District of Columbia, have been discharged.

Reports received from the nine Army Corps Areas indicate 123,346 men have been discharged or sent to their home States for discharge. It is anticipated from 125,000 to 130,000 of those in summer camps will be discharged. Slightly more than 100,000 have been selected to fill vacancies.

When enrolled to maximum strength there will be 302,000 men in the camps and 14,400 in Indian reforestation camps.

The movement of 10,000 members from Northern and Western camps to the South, to avoid Northern winters, is well under way.

Most of the 1,468 new winter camps have been located, and in many cases construction of semipermanent quarters is nearing completion. By the time all of the camps have been made ready, it is estimated 250,000 men will have been moved.

When all new companies are settled there will be approximately 50,000 men working in the South. Of these, 40,000 will be southerners.

Expenditures for construction of quarters in winter camps will run into millions. It was estimated that $2,000,000 will be used for constructing wooden shelters in the Fourth Corps Area alone. It also will be necessary to buy $2,300,000 worth of clothing in that area.

Roper to Address D. C. Trade Board

Group to Hold First Fall Meeting Tuesday Night.

Daniel C. Roper, Secretary of Commerce, will speak at the opening fall meeting of the Washington Board of Trade at the Willard Hotel Tuesday night.

The subject has not been announced. He will be introduced by Claude W. Owen, president of the board. Other features include presentation of a tribute to Col. U. S. Grant 3d, retired director of public buildings and public parks, and entertainment by the George Washington University Glee Club.

Copeland Drug Bill Explained By Dr. Cullen

Mother's Home Treatment of Minor Ailments Is Not Curtailed.

Answering criticism of the proposed Copeland bill governing sale of drugs and medicinal preparations, Dr. F. J. Cullen, chief of drug control of the Federal food and drug administration, yesterday said the bill will not affect treatment by mothers in the home for minor disorders.

"Mothers will not be denied their inalienable right to treat themselves and their families for minor ailments, diseases or injuries if the bill is passed by Congress," Dr. Cullen said.

"Every mother knows that certain types of cramps, colic or other affliction can be treated successfully in the home—given proper medicine purchased at the drug stores," he said. "But the labels should tell the whole truth as to their remedial efficacy. Such labeling would be assured by the bill."

The bill prohibits distribution of drugs and medicines for diseases in which self-medication is especially dangerous.

Woman Attacked And Robbed of $4

Mrs. Lulu Carter Unable to Identify Suspect.

Beaten by an unidentified man who dragged her into an alley, Mrs. Lulu Carter, 28, of 1161 Third street northeast, was in Homeopathic Hospital last night. Police said the motive was robbery.

Mrs. Carter, said she, was attacked in Abbey place near Third street northeast shortly after she had left her husband, Frank Carter, a plasterer, to use a telephone.

Hospital attaches said Mrs. Carter received facial cuts and head injuries. She said she had been struck by a heavy weapon and robbed of $4.

Police arrested Bernhard Nelson, 17, colored, of 132 Rhode Island avenue northwest. He had bloodstains on his shirt and trousers, but he said that police had struck him. Mrs. Carter failed to identify him, police said.

Huge Aviation Program Urged To Add Jobs

Meeting Asks $60,000,000 for Defense Services; $15,000,000 Given.

The Federal Government yesterday was urged to undertake a public works aviation program on a huge scale, including $60,000,000 for Army and Navy air services. This suggestion was advanced by the National Aeronautics Association at its annual convention.

While this program was before the convention, the Public Works Administration announced allotment of $15,000,000 to the two services for development of aviation. The PWA also revealed it will continue study of the Army and Navy air construction program which would involve a much larger expenditure.

In order to spread employment the association urged that the Civilian Conservation Corps be employed to construct 300 intermediate landing fields in national forest and mountain areas. The CCC camps are located chiefly in these regions.

The association program would include another dirigible to replace the lost Akron. It also was proposed to recommission the Los Angeles and to build a new training airship.

These officers were chosen: Former Senator Hiram Bingham, president (relected); F. Trubee Davison, former Assistant Secretary of War for Aeronautics, vice president; Robert F. Garland, Tulsa, secretary, and Porter Adams, Boston, chairman of the executive committee.

McKee Aid Hits Mills' Support Of LaGuardia

Possibility of Roosevelt Entry Into Campaign Brought to Fore.

New York, Oct. 21 (AP).—Candidates revamped their strategy along national lines tonight as they prepared to enter the final fortnight of the New York City mayoralty campaign.

The battlefront was extended to Washington when a group of Republican stalwarts, headed by Ogden L. Mills, stepped behind the fusion banner of Fiorello H. LaGuardia and were promptly accused of trying to build a machine for the 1936 Presidential election.

Whether President Roosevelt will enter the lists in support of Joseph V. McKee, independent, remained conjectural.

The fusion cause, aimed at the overthrow of Tammany Hall, was declared "a misnomer and false label" tonight in a statement by Harry M. Durning, catmpaign manager for McKee.

Dunning, declaring LaGuardia was "unmasked" when former Secretary of the Treasury Mills came to his support, added:

"With W. Kingsland Macy, party to the infamous Hofstadter-Steur judgeship deal; Sam Koenig, repudiated Republican boss of New York County, and Chase Mellon, his successor; Ogden L. Mills, author of the famous dry platform plank of LaGuardia's Republican party; Elihu Root, Henry L. Stimson and all the other old G. O. P. faithfuls dancing arm in arm behind LaGuardia on the Mecca Temple stage, there was no longer any doubt as to the purposes of the campaign.

"The Republicans who disowned him and whom he repudiated are now only too glad to use LaGuardia to snare votes that that they may capture New York City for the same crowd that brought about the present economic crisis throughout the Nation. There is no doubt about LaGuardia being the Republican candidate."

McKee supporters expressed belief that Mills' appearance in the arena would make it permissible for the White House to take a hand in matters without violating political ethics.

Republican Hits Democrat Claim

Says Virginians Not Voting on Recovery Plan.

L. C. MacPherson, chairman of the Arlington County Republican Committee, yesterday characterized as misleading the assertion by Representative Howard W. Smith in a speech in Cherrydale several days ago that on November 7 Virginia voters will have their first opportunity to support President Roosevelt's policies by casting their ballots for Democratic candidates on the State ticket.

Referring to Representative Smith's address, MacPherson said, "nothing could be more absurd. The election of State officers and whether they be Democrats or Republicans has nothing to do with President Roosevelt's recovery program."

"I want to remind Representative Smith and other Democratic leaders that in no campaign has the Republican party in Virginia ever used any such absurd and misleading propaganda."

Bethesda Firemen Win Cup Contest

One More Victory Needed to Retain Trophy.

The Bethesda Volunteer Fire Department yesterday won its second leg for the Charlotte B. Randall Trophy in contests participated in by Montgomery County volunteer firemen. The contests were held under auspices of the Chevy Chase department, last winner of the cup.

The Bethesda department now must win the cup once more to retain permanent possession. Chevy Chase and Gaithersburg-Washington Grove each have won a contest for the cup.

Judges were Battalion Chief T. B. Stanton, Capt. A. J. Lipske and Sergt. A. Whiteman, Washington Fire Department.

Col. Ward's Wife Injured in Crash

Driver of Truck Also Hurt in Collision With Auto.

Lieut. Col. Bloxham Ward, 54, of 2521 Connecticut avenue, northwest, was shaken, and his wife, Emily, 51, was cut and bruised late yesterday when their automobile crashed into a truck driven by Mehle Webster, 28, of Ballston, Va., at Twenty-fourth street and Virginia avenue northwest.

Webster suffered a wrenched back. He was taken to Emergency Hospital, while Mrs. Ward was taken to Naval Hospital.

Police were told Col. Ward was on leave from his post in West Virginia, and was living temporarily at the Connecticut avenue address. No arrests followed the accident.

$20,000 Willed To Engineer Group

New York, Oct. 21 (AP). — The American Society of Civil Engineers was bequeathed $20,000 in the will of J. Waldo Smith filed today.

Smith, who died last Saturday at his New York home, constructed New York City's $185,000,000 Catskill Mountain water supply system.

A bequest of $5,000 was left to the Western Society of Engineers, Chicago, and his medals, diplomas and other "rewards for distinction" were bequeathed to the public library in Lincoln, Mass., his birthplace.

Work in Melchers Exhibition

"The Bride," one of the paintings by Gari Melchers on exhibition at the Corcoran Gallery.

Gari Melchers' Paintings Put On Exhibition

100 Examples of Work at Corcoran Art Gallery Until Dec. 3.

The greatest one-man art exhibition ever held in Washington opened yesterday afternoon at the Corcoran Gallery when more than 100 oil paintings, water colors, drawings and etchings by the late Gari Melchers were shown. The exhibition will be open until December 3.

The memorial exhibition represents more than half a century of distinguished achievement.

The four salons on the second floor have been set aside for the exhibition. They present a gay aspect, and a visual proof of the fondness of this artist for soft bright blues and lavendars and an appreciation of the rose he so often introduced in his work.

One of the most notable paintings is a large canvas of the Last Supper with the face of Christ illuminated by the glow of a lamp that hangs from the ceiling.

There are two pictures for which Mrs. Melchers posed. "Mystery," a smaller canvas of a lovely woman, and the painting of a tiny colored child, with round dark eyes, on the lap of her mother, are exhibited.

There is something startling in the face and figure of the young girl, a nude, Mr. Melchers painted so effectively, in "The Doctors." One doctor sits by the side of the sick girl, while another doctor and nurse stand nearby.

This exhibition has been assembled by C. Powell Minnegerode, director of the gallery, with Mrs. Melcher's assistance. It is made more notable by the loan of pictures by Mrs. Edward C. Walker, Mrs. James Parmalee, Andrew W. Mellon, Mr. and Mrs. R. M. Kauffmann, the Phillips Memorial Gallery, Charles D. Lanier, Charles V. Wheeler, Mrs. Melchers and the executors of Melchers' estate.

Boy Snatches Woman's Purse and Escapes

A purse containing $10 and change was snatched from the hands of Mrs. B. B. Pizzie as she walked near her home in Takoma Park last night.

Mrs. Pizzie reported a young colored boy grabbed the pocketbook and darted into an alley near Third and Carroll streets northwest.

Uruguay Leader Quits; May Seek Presidency

Montevideo, Uruguay, Oct. 21 (AP). The Minister of the Interior, Alberto Demicheli, today resigned. He announced his nomination for the vice presidency on the same ticket with President Gabriel Terra.

If President Terra does not run for reelection this year it is expected Demicheli will succeed to the presidential nomination.

Survey Spurs Fight On Child Malnutrition

Health Service Reveals Depression Ravages in Jobless Families.

Announcement yesterday by the Public Health Service that families of unemployed are in much poorer health than those of the employed has spurred the Children's Bureau in its Nation-wide program to allay effects of depression malnutrition among children of the United States.

The Public Health survey, made in typical Eastern cities, revealed that the "disabling sickness" rate was nearly 5 per cent higher among jobless families than among those employed. The survey was conducted in cooperation with the Milbank Memorial Fund.

Respiratory Ills Increase.

Although the depression does not seem to have increased childhood diseases such as measles, mumps and whooping cough, there has been a sharp increase in respiratory ills among children of the unemployed.

The Children's Bureau has completed an exhaustive report on malnutrition due to the depression, based on reports of health officers at the national malnutrition conference two weeks ago in Washington.

Campaign Under Way.

All the States, either through State health officers or relief agencies, have begun an intensive campaign to determine the extent of malnutrition in their districts and means of combating it.

By the first of January it is expected all States will have local organizations actively working on programs of proper feeding and medical attention.

The Children's Bureau has forwarded to State health officers examination forms to be distributed through local relief organizations and doctors to ascertain the extent of undernourishment in each State.

They Miss Rodeo But It's Fun Helping Papa Play Detective

Children Ride in Car as Father Takes Four to Jail.

New York, Oct. 21 (AP).—Isabel Downey—she's 8—and Joe Downey, jr.—he's 6—are the heroes of Vesey street because they missed the rodeo to help their papa catch some crooks.

Papa is a detective.

"I wasn't scared a bit"—Isabel tossed her curls—"on account of my papa is a policeman. But my kid brother here,"—a jerk toward Joe—"was a bit scared."

"I wasn't scared either," said Joe indignantly.

Papa Finds Business.

Detective Downey was taking his youngsters to the rodeo. They had dropped mama at a movie—"on account of mama doesn't like horses and cowboys."

The detective saw a confidence game as they turned a corner.

"Wait a minute, you kids," said he. "Here's a little job for papa."

The children were goggle-eyed when papa yanked his gun and jumped among four men.

"In a cab with you guys," said papa.

"Come on kids," he called, "we're going to run these guys in."

Isabel Tells Her Gang.

Said Isabel to the Vesey street gang today:

"Brother and I sat on the extra seats. Papa sat in front with the driver and the men sat on the regular seats. They were quiet and still until papa got out of the cab.

"Then one of them handed some money to another and said:

"'Here's your money. Keep your mouth shut or we'll all go to jail.' He talked out of the corner of his mouth so papa couldn't hear.

"But I pulled papa's coat tail and whispered what I heard. He patted me on the head and smiled like he was tickled."

After Downey had recorded the complaint he and the children rejoined his wife and all went home.

Legion Honors Maryland Unit Head Saturday

Reception at Hyattsville Compliments Aiello; Officials Invited.

A reception for Maryland State Commander of the American Legion, Caesar L. Aiello, will be held at Hyattsville Saturday. Several hundred legionnaires from Maryland, the District of Columbia, and Virginia, will participate.

Invitations have been extended to Gov. Albert C. Ritchie; Edward L. Hayes, national commander of the legion; Mrs. Ruby Owens Wheatley, president of the Legion Auxiliary of the Maryland Department; and the commanders of the District of Columbia and the Virginia Departments.

The program will begin at 3 p. m. with a competition for the best-appearing and best-drilled drum and bugle corps. The units will march down Franklin street from Wine avenue to the National Guard Armory.

Officers Installed.

Refreshments will be served from 4 to 6 p. m. at the armory, John McNulty, of Linthicum Heights, vice commander of the Southern Maryland Council, will preside at an early night meeting.

Arrangements will be completed at a meeting tomorrow night at the armory. Representatives from the seventeen posts in the Southern Maryland Council wil meet with the committee of Snyder-Farmer Post. Members of the post on the general commitee are Tyler M. Birch, post commander; Capt. J. M. Edlavitch, Ralph J. Sheffer, vice commander; Joseph H. Mims, E. J. Cannon, Carl W. Walzl and John A. Johnson.

At the last meeting of Snyder-Farmer Post, State Commander Aiello installed Commander Birch and other officers. The post formally thanked Capt. Edlavitch and Mr. Sheffer for services in the past year. Capt. Edlavitch has been active generaly in the affairs of the organization. Sheffer, who served as post adjutant during the past year, was installed as vice commander.

Committees Named.

Commander Birch appointed the following standing committees:

Executive — Capt. Edlavitch, chairman; Orion R. Butler, E. J. Cannon, William T. Luman, Waldo Burnside and John A. Johnson.

Membership — Vice Commander Sheffer, chairman; Carl W. Walzl, Capt. John N. Brooks, State Senator Lansdale G. Sasscer, James W. Rogers and E. J. Cannon.

House—Joseph B. Weiss, chairman, and Clyde Veach.

Capt. Edlavitch, Orion R. Butler and E. J. Cannon also have been charged with the responsibility of passing on all extraordinary expenditures by the post.

Two Girls Hurt In Auto Crash

Driver Wrecks Car in Police Chase; Faces Charge of Drunkenness.

A man who police said identified himself as an attorney in the Department of Justice was charged with reckless driving and driving while drunk at the Fifth Precinct Police Station last night following a race with a Maryland policeman and an automobile crash in which two girls were injured slightly.

The driver, who gave the police the name of John M. Hudson, of 2006 Columbia road northwest, and his three companions were said by police to have left a Bladensburg, Md., barbecue stand without paying a bill of less than $1. Maryland Policeman C. S. Jones pursued them to Thirteenth street and Bladensburg road, where Hudson crashed into a car driven by Joseph Moran, of 548 Fourteenth street southeast.

The Misses Dorothy Burleigh, 18, of Clarendon, Va., and Frances Sinnott, 23, of Ballston, Va., who were in Hudson's car, were treated for cuts and bruises at Casualty Hospital and then released. Hudson, Moran and J. P. Jackson, of 1614 K street northwest, who was riding with Hudson, escaped injury.

Bank Teller Recovering From Crash Injuries

J. Tarbell Howard, 29, a teller at the Washington Loan & Trust Co., was reported recovering in Sibley Hospital last night from injuries suffered in an automobile accident early yesterday.

Howard's machine crashed into a pole at Third street and Rhode Island avenue northwest. He was driving alone, en route to his home in Hyattsville, Md.

Red Cross Has Busiest Period Since War Time

Distribution of Federal Supplies for Needy Makes Big Task.

The American Red Cross engaged in more widespread and diversified activities in the past year than in any corresponding period since the World War, according to the annual report released yesterday. Most of the chapters cooperated with other public and private agencies in general measures of unemployment relief.

Chapters in all but six among 3,098 counties participated in the distribution of flour or cotton, according to James L. Fieser, vice chairman in charge of domestic operations.

In the face of the depression, adult membership in the Red Cross fell only 7 per cent. Administrative costs amounted to $730,000 for handling Government wheat and cotton valued at $73,000,000.

More than 1,000,000 men and women received certificates of proficiency in first aid and life saving in two decades. In the last year 78,795 certificates were issued, a gain of 6,000 over the previous year.

Junior Red Cross enrollment totaled 6,629,866, and enrollment of nurses in active status in the Red Cross nursing service was 35,750. Public health nursing was carried on by 467 chapters, employing 727 persons, who cared for 207,531 patients and made 1,233,000 sick-bed visits.

Women volunteers under the general direction of Mabel T. Boardman made 7,929,000 garments for families of the unemployed and 3,770,000 surgical dressings for hospitals last year.

P.-T. A. in Member Drive.

The Parent-Teacher Association of the Patrick Henry School at Arlington will launch a membership drive beginning tomorrow to continue through Friday. Mrs. Russell Johncox is chairman of the committee in charge of the drive.

Trial of Kelly Aids Links Him And Winkler

Kidnaper Was Just "A Good Fellow" to Geraldine Arnold.

Memphis, Tenn., Oct. 21 (AP).—A statement that George ("Machine Gun") Kelly told of contacting Gus Winkler in Chicago, a few days before Kelly and his wife were captured here was made today at the beginning of the trial of Langford Ramsey and John Tichenor for conspiracy to harbor the Kellys.

The statement linking Winkler and Kelly was read by W. A. Rorer, Department of Justice agent, who said he obtained it from Tichenor September 26, the day the Kellys were captured at Tichenor's house.

A dangerous criminal to the law, Kelly is just "a good fellow" to Geraldine Arnold, 12-year-old girl, who told officers his hiding place after the Urschel kidnaping.

Geraldine said "Kelly was always playing games with me" while she was touring the country with the desperado and his wife, acting as a "front" for the pair.

"He was a jolly good fellow. He and Mrs. Kelly bought me pretty clothes. They bought this dress—see?" she said. And he gave me $20 to send to my mother. He got mad at me only once, when I didn't want him to drink some whisky."

The Children's Theater Opens Local Season

"Five Little Peppers" Is First of Six Saturday Bills at National.

A jumble of shrill noises followed by a roar of excited "Sh-h-h's!" greeted the darkening of the National Theater for the opening performance of Washington's second season of the Children's Theater of New York. "The Five Little Peppers," a play adapted by Clare Tree Major from Margaret Sidney's book, clung so closely to the original text that the little ones in the audience, who had read the book, were afforded the added pleasure of reminding each other of "what's coming next."

By the time the curtain had risen half way, most of the audience had lost itself in Mrs. Pepper's kitchen, where the five little Peppers were having breakfast. Mrs. Pepper, as Viola Roache portrayed her, was surprisingly buxom and jovial for one so poverty-stricken, but was in all other respects the really motherly Mamsie Pepper that so many children have read about and loved.

As for the five offspring of Mrs. Pepper, the producer was up against the almost insurmountable problem which faces adult companies insisting upon presenting children's play with all-adult casts. In this case it was circumvented by using rather young adults for the older child parts and midgets for the tiny ones. In spite of the first-rate acting of Elaine Skidmore, as Polly, and the lovable Ben that Robert Josselyn created, they were both too "big" to be convincing.

Joel Pepper and David Pepper, played by Freddy Goodrow and John Ballas, apparently midgets, were so well acted that one could, to a certain extent, overlook their physique, but Ann Sutton, though about the height of a 4-year-old, had none of the movements characteristic of a child, which resulted in her Phronsie's being painfully grotesque.

The adult parts, besides Mother Pepper, were played by Nancy Wilson, Storrs Haynes, Eleanor Howe, Harry Storey, Paul Carroll and Norma Nelson. Miss Nelson, as Grandma Bascom, furnished highly acceptable comedy. Charles Powers, playing the child, Jasper King, was also hampered by his size.

But, in spite of the anxious whispering, "Is Phronsie a real midget?" the attention of the children in the audience was held throughout the seven scenes, at the end of nearly every one of which some little voice would pipe up with, "Aw, is that all?" and when the play was over an almost tearful, "Why can't we see them in their new house?"

"Five Little Peppers" was the first of six offerings of the Children's Theater, under the sponsorship of the Women's International League.

Rialto

"LADIES MUST LOVE." Universal picturization of a play by William Hurlbut, featuring June Knight, Sally O'Neill, Dorothy Burgess, Mary Carlisle and Neil Hamilton. Directed by E. A. Du Pont. Reviewed Saturday afternoon.

It is not only love that engages the attentions of this quartet of beautiful ladies, but more material things such as the wherewithal to meet the landlord's demands and the satisfaction of gastronomic cravings Naturally, in a case like this, diamond bracelets are not entirely overlooked.

But, "Ladies Must Love" is as good a title as any for this melange of sweet young things out for most anything they can get, even including husbands—if they have to. Ribald, perhaps, in spots, but consistently amusing throughout, and not without its moments of seriousness.

Briefly the story—what little there is—revolves around four girls who have signed an all-for-one-and-one-for-all "contract" whereby each shares equally the earnings (regardless of how acquired) of the others. Enter Bill Langhorne, who falls for Jeannie; enter the contract; exit, Bill. But it works out all right in the end and they all live happily ever after.

A typical cabaret-gold-digger-song-and-dance work, this; with all the expected impedimenta added for the delectation of the audience —and, at times, obviously to stretch the picture to feature length. With June Knight in the principal role, supported by Sally O'Neil, Dorothy Burgess and Mary Carlisle, these ladies are indeed almost sufficient in themselves to furnish a good excuse for any picture. Adding Neil Hamilton, as Bill; George E. Stone, Maude Eburne, Oscar Apfel, Edmund Breese, Richard Carle and Burton Churchill, the cast is all set to perform anything—meaningless or otherwise—for a good average entertainment.

Three songs—"Some One to Love," "I'd Worship Him Just the Same," "Tonight May Never Come Again" —are effectively used during the course of the action.

"All at Sea" is one of the better revuelets, built around a liner's concert, featuring in short, but very charming, numbers such renowned stars as Pat Rooney, Hugh O'Connell, Joe Laurie, jr., the Three X Sisters, Ethel Barrymore Colt and Vincent Lopez and his orchestra.

The "news" and news of the week are furnished by the Goofytone News Reel and the more authentic (though somewhat less amusing!) Universal News.

Chicago, Oct. 21 (AP).—Advertising, upholding trustworthy doctors as against quacks, bore the stamp of approval today of the Cook County Medical Society.

Action indorsing advertising, urging reduction in costs of medical care, and recommending scientific programs to help the general practitioner rather than the specialist, was taken at a meeting last night.

Rites to Mark Anniversary Of Hanson, "First President"

Descendant Will Unveil Tablet; Marylander's Career Notable.

Services to commemorate the 150th anniversary of the death of John Hanson, of Mulberry Grove, first President of the United States, will be held Wednesday, November 15, at Oxon Hill Manor, Prince Georges County, Md.

The services also will observe the 152d anniversary of his election as President of the United States in Congress assembled under the Articles of Confederation.

The memorial rites will be under auspices of the John Hanson Society of Maryland on the site of the original Oxon Hill Manor, a point which has a commanding view of the Potomac, across from Alexandria, Va., on the estate now owned by Sumner Welles, Ambassador to Cuba.

Descendant to Take Part.

The memorial tablet will be unveiled by a descendant of John Hanson, Walter Carpenter Young, son of Samuel Davis Young and Lola Carpenter Young, who have assisted materially in work of the John Hanson Society. It will bear this inscription:

"John Hanson, President of the United States in Congress Assembled 1781-1782, Died Here. the Site of the Original Oxon Hill Manor, November 15, 1783."

While the subject of John Hanson's right to the title of First President of the United States may be a moot one, his claim to fame rests on no such flimsy ground.

His public life began in 1757, when he was elected from Charles County to the Maryland Assembly and he served almost continuously until 1773 when he moved to Frederick County, which then embraced most of western Maryland. As chairman of the committee on public safety of Frederick, it was he who organized the first Maryland troops enlisted in the Revolution, incidentally the first troops below the Mason-Dixon line to respond to the call for men sent by George Washington upon his taking command of the Continental Army in 1773.

These troops brought undying fame to Maryland arms and at the battle of Long Island sacrificed themselves to save the army of Washington from decimation. At this battle they were the first American troops to use the bayonet.

Basis of Presidency Claim.

In 1779 Hanson was delegate to the Continental Congress and served as president of the Congress under the Articles of Confederation, from which fact arises his claim to being First President of the United States. He served on the committee of the Assembly which drafted instructions to Maryland representatives in the Stamp Act Congress of 1765, was a signatory of the Society of Freemen of Maryland and chairman of the committee on observation.

Hanson established a gunlock factory which supplied a large part of the gunlocks for the soldiers of the Revolutionary Army. He contributed practically his entire fortune to the Revolutionary cause.

Hanson and Daniel Carroll, the other Maryland representative, refused to sign the Articles of Confederation until the States agreed to cede to the Union all rights to the Western lands they claimed.

The other States desired to perpetuate themselves as independent nations with territories. Hanson and Carroll steadfastly opposed this and their stubborn insistence on an undivided Nation really founded the basic organization of the United States.

JOHN HANSON, first President of the United States, the 150th anniversary of whose death will be observed Wednesday, November 15.

The late Seymour Wemyes Smith, historian, in his book, "John Hanson," declares that historians have buried the greatness of Hanson in their glorification of George Washington and seem to have forgotten the eight years prior to Washington's election.

While it is true Washington was elected in a different manner from Hanson, yet it also is a fact that Herbert Hoover, for instance, was elected in an entirely different manner from George Washington.

Mr. Smith cited considerable correspondence and incidents in which Hanson is referred to as President, including a speech by George Washington a few days after Hanson's election.

Family Notable in America.

The Articles of Confederation were dropped because Alexander Hamilton and certain wealthy friends opposed the article that would allow national taxes to be based on property, which then was the principal evidence of wealth.

The Hansons for a century were an outstanding family dynasty of Maryland and included the Stones, Jenifers, Harrisons and Contes. It produced one President under the Confederation, two Presidents under the Constitution, two signers of the Declaration of Independence, one signer of the Articles of Confederation, one signer of the Constitution and five signers of the Maryland Declaration of Freemen, which preceded—if it did not precipitate—the Declaration of Independence.

The family also has produced several Maryland Governors, United States senators, a justice of the United States Supreme Court and Army general officers.

"On Saturday, the 15th ult., departed this life, in Prince Georges County, Maryland, the Hon. John Hanson, Esq., late President of the United States."

The place of his burial has not been definitely established, although research has been conducted by the John Hanson Society of Maryland.

New York, Oct. 21 (AP).—William Waldorf Astor 3d, son of Lord and Lady Astor, of England, came here today to watch New York elect a mayor.

Fair-haired, tweed-clad and 26, he said when he left the liner Bremen:

"All my family are in politics, you know. Every one in England is exceedingly interested in the progress of the NRA and most anxious to see what the results will be."

In explaining that he was not looking for a wife, he said:

"I'm quite fancy free, as you call it."

Job Insurance Session Called

Secretary Perkins Invites State, Labor Officials Here Wednesday.

Secretary of Labor Perkins has invited 50 labor leaders, economists and State officials to meet here Wednesday for a conference on unemployment insurance.

The meeting, at the Willard Hotel, will be in the nature of a reception for Sir William Beveridge, director of the London School of Economics and a recognized international authority on unemployment insurance.

All State officials dealing with labor laws and representatives of all interested Federal departments have been invited.

"While Wisconsin is the only State which has a law setting up unemployment reserves, there has been a growing movement in many other States in recent years favoring legislation along such insurance lines," Secretary Perkins said.

Roanoke River Project Urged

Promoters Seek $4,000,00 to Construct Ten Power Dams.

A second "Muscle Shoals" power development to serve the Atlantic States has been discussed with the Public Works Administration and the Virginia Public Works Advisory Board, it was learned yesterday.

The project calls for construction of 10 or more dams along the Roanoke River in Virginia and North Carolina at an estimated cost of $4,000,000. Promoters, headed by Edwin C. Gregory, of Washington, predict the project would become one of the foremost sources of primary power in the Atlantic States.

If authorized by November 1, they said, 1,250 men could be put to work by December 1 and 2,000 more would be needed to complete construction.

Gregory last night admitted the plan had been discussed with officials of the Public Works Administration, but he explained that it is still in a premature stage.

According to an Associated Press dispatch from Richmond, the Virginia board yesterday declined to pass upon the proposal on the ground that it "is beyond the scope of its work to indorse it."

A map accompanying plans for the development as submitted to the Virginia board called for construction of dams at Smith Mountain, Leesville, Taber, Seneva, Melrose, McKeever, Randolph, Russel Island, Buggs Island, Gaston, N. C., and Roanoke Rapids.

Poems Make Third Polar Trip With Byrd.

(Associated Press.)

A copy of Dryden's poems, published 135 years ago, is to make its third trip to the polar regions with the Byrd Antarctic expedition.

The book holds the record for world travel in polar regions.

It was left in the Arctic by Sir John Franklin and found in an Igloo cache 70 years later by Peary.

It was given by Peary to Dr. Louis Wolffe, physician for the expedition, who presented it to Miss Edith Palmer, of Millbrook, N. Y. She gave it to Byrd.

Kiwanians Give Governor Post To Carruthers

Charlottesville, Va., Man Chosen as New Head of Capital District.

Lynchburg, Va., Oct. 21 (Spl.). E. I. Carruthers, of Charlottesville, Va., was elected governor of the Capital District, Kiwanis International, at the fifteenth annual convention here today to succeed Edwin F. Hill, Washington, D. C.

The new governor, elected unanimously, takes office January 1. Mr. Hill's and the present lieutenant governor's terms expire December 31. Asa W. Howard, of Roanoke, Va., was reelected district secretary-treasurer.

Richmond was selected as the convention city of 1934, the date to be set by the executive committee. The district is composed of 49 clubs in Virginia, Maryland, Delaware and the District of Columbia.

District officers, club presidents and delegates were unanimous in continuing underprivileged child work, stressed over a period of years, with the result that thousands of crippled children have been put on their feet.

Backs War on Drugs.

The convention indorsed war on narcotics, eradication of radicals and racketeering as twin evils, maintenance of adequate educational facilities, proper adjustment of young people to present day social and economic conditions, promoting better relationships between county and town, and cooperating with boys and girls in vocational guidance.

Vice President Lewis T. Breuninger, of the Washington, D. C., club, extended an invitation to the Capital district, Kiwanis International, to hold its mid-winter conference in Washington. The executive committee will act on the invitation.

In the district attendance contest Richmond was awarded first place in the gold division, which includes clubs with a membership of 126 or over; Norfolk, Va., in the silver division, consisting of clubs with a membership of 76 to 125; Petersburg, Va., in the blue division, including clubs with a membership of 46 to 75; and Manassas, Va., in the white division, clubs of 45 or less.

Irving Diener Elected.

Irving Diener, Alexandria, Va., was elected lieutenant governor of the first division, succeeding Park W. T. Loy, Hagerstown, Md. The clubs in the first division are Alexandria, Arlington County, Fredericksburg, Manassas and Winchester, Va., and Cumberland, Frederick and Hagerstown, Md., and Washington, D. C.

Steel Prices Cut To Suit President

N. Y. Times Reports Slash Made to Get Business.

New York, Oct. 21 (AP).—The New York Times says leading steel companies, acting on the suggestion of President Roosevelt, have reduced the price of rails from $40 a ton to $37.75 in the hope of obtaining Federal orders for more than 1,000,000 tons of rails and fastenings.

The new price was filed today with the American Iron & Steel Institute by the Carnegie Steel Co., the Illinois Steel Co., the Tennessee Coal, Iron & Railroad Co., and the Colorado Fuel & Iron Co.

Byrd's Flagship Begins Journey To South Pole

Explorer Launches Second Expedition From Shipyard at Newport News.

Newport News, Va., Oct. 21 (AP).—With a cheerful good-by to his native Virginia, Rear Admiral Richard E. Byrd today pointed the prow of his flagship Jacob Ruppert toward the bottom of the globe.

The Jacob Ruppert, outfitted here with a boom for loading the big plane, with which Admiral Byrd hopes to continue his Antarctic exploration and scientific research, pulled out of the shipyard and into the James River early this afternoon.

Virtually recovered from the throat ailment which kept him in a Norfolk hotel room several days, Admiral Byrd just before his departure talked enthusiastically of his second venture in the South Polar regions.

He emphasized that this expedition—for a duration of two years—is not for the purpose of flying over the South Pole—a feat accomplished on his former trip.

"It is more than likely a flight over the pole will be made," he said, "but this will be primarily to get further data about an unexplored region nearly as large as the continent of South America."

The admiral said he was taking a large party because 12 branches of science will be served by the expedition.

Just before his departure Admiral Byrd conferred briefly with officers of the barkentine Bear of Oakland, the expedition's contact ship, now being caulked at the yard. The Bear of Oakland is expected to sail next week and join its flagship at Dunedin.

Rain Damps Smith Welcome to Fair

Says of N. Y. Race: "That's Not Before the House."

Chicago, Oct. 21 (U.P.).—Alfred E. Smith came to the World's Fair today, but an elaborate program planned in his honor was curtailed by rain.

The one-time Presidential candidate had short answers for questions about the New York mayoralty contest.

"That's another of the things that's not before the house," he said. Smith's address at the fair will be given Monday.

W. T. Simmons to Speak.

W. T. Simmons will talk on "Fall Planting and Winter Care of Roses" at a meeting of the Takoma Horticultural Club tomorrow at 8 p. m. in the Takoma Branch of the Public Library. The executive committee will meet at 7:30 p. m.

C. V. Whitney Star Earns $22,175

War Glory, at 15 to 1, Wins $5,000 Handicap From Sun Archer.

THE light blue and brown of the C. V. Whitney Stable, which has played only a minor role in Maryland racing this fall, was flaunted in the most important spot of autumn yesterday, when Jabot, a granddaughter of Man o' War, scored a neck decision over a flying Hindu Queen in the Selima Stakes at Laurel. Some 20,000 fans saw a field of 12 compete over the mile course in a race that marked the defeat of Bazaar, E. R. Bradley's 1934 Kentucky Derby candidate, which, backed into favoritism, could do no better than third.

Sonny Workman, the Washington boy who has become something of an unfashionable rider this fall, piloted Jabot in his best 1930 style, keeping the filly free from interference and making a brilliant and helpful stretch run with the Whitneyite. Thus Sonny Whitney has a check for $22,175 awaiting him. That was the value of the race to the winner, and it represents the peak, in money value, of the autumn stakes in Maryland.

Bazaar Has Rough Trip.

Horsemen were unanimous in their opinion that the race was not truly run from the standpoint of Bazaar. She was pinched off repeatedly during the running and suffered a bumping soon after the start that was not helpful.

Slapdash, Brown Witch, Willett and Jabot—that was the order of the leaders as the bulky field banked the clubhouse turn. Slapdash was still setting a fast pace as the group straightened out for the trip up the backstretch. Then began the big rush for the top. Jabot, Bazaar, Rhythmic and Hindu Queen were noticeably on the move. At the far turn, Jabot began to cut down the margin of Slapdash's lead.

In the meantime, Meade had tried to get Bazaar through here there and everywhere to no avail. On the swing for the stretch, Jabot passed Slapdash and became the target for two fast closing horses. Hindu Queen and Bazaar both found racing room and set out after the Whitney representative. Workman was working like mad on Jabot. Humphries was getting the most speed out of Hindu Queen and she shot up on the leader but just a fraction of a second too late.

Jabot Wins By Neck.

Jabot's margin was recorded as a neck. Meade and Bazaar finished like the wind, but the Bradley horse was only serving to defeat Rhythmic for the third money.

The Man o' War influence extended into the Maryland Handicap $5,000 added race, which drew a field that caused many to term it the second running of the 1933 Kentucky. The winner was War Glory.

Primo Risks Title Against Paulino

Carnera Says He Will Stop Foe in Bout Today.

Rome, Oct. 21 (AP).—After flying from his home and training "camp" at Sequals to the scene of tomorrow's 15-round heavyweight championship battle with Paulino Uzcudun, Primo Carnera put in a leisurely afternoon today inspecting the Piazza Siena, site of the scrap, and retired early.

Garbed in the black shirt of a Fascist militiaman, Primo went over the ring and equipment of the arena thoroughly, then returned to his hotel, dodging the crowds on the way. Meanwhile his Basque opponent went through a final light workout, which his managers accompanied with predictions that he would win the crown, "possibly by a knockout in the twelfth round."

The trainers and other attendants of both boxers formed guards around their hotels tonight to guarantee them undisturbed rest.

Louisiana State Shuts Out Arkansas, 20 to 0

Shreveport, La., Oct. 21 (AP). Louisiana State University's flying battered backs tore through the University of Arkansas for a 20-to-0 triumph today in a traditional intersectional grid clash before a State Fair crowd of 15,000.

Using reserves most of the game, Louisiana unleased a first half varsity power and air attack that drove Arkansas, conquerors of Baylor and Texas Christian in the Southwestern Conference, into the beaten class and kept their own record clear of defeat.

Home-Town Folks Welcome Hubbell

Giants' Pitcher and Jim Winford Feted.

Meeker, Okla., Oct. 21 (AP).—More than 10,000 Oklahoma baseball fans visited Meeker today to help this village of 750 residents welcome Carl Hubbell, "screw-ball" behemoth of the world champion New York Giants, back home.

"Our Carl" may claim to be a pecan farmer while in his home town, but today no one here thought of him as an agriculturalist. From far and wide, Carl's admirers poured into town to get a glimpse of the one-time sandlot youth, whose "ball that couldn't be hit" took him to the pinnacle of baseball fame.

Another Meeker baseball celebrity who shared honors with Hubbell was Jim Winford, who pitched the Columbus team of the American Association to a championship.

MINNEAPOLIS, Oct. 21 (AP). Pittsburgh's prowling Panthers were blasted out of the National football picture by a powerful Minnesota eleven which scored an outstanding 7-to-3 victory over the favored Easterners today. Attendance was 28,000.

Alfonse Paves Way.

Minnesota launched a driving, hard-hitting offensive that sent Bob Tenner, Gopher end, over the Panther's goal before the first period was eight minutes old.

With the ball on Pittsburgh's 16-yard stripe, Tenner took a shovel pass from Lund on an end-around-play to dart over for a touchdown. Bevan, guard, kicked the extra point from placement.

Julius Alfonse, slippery Gopher half, duplicated his performance of last week in paving the way for a Minnesota score by weaving 25 yards through Pitt's right tackle.

In the waning minutes of the second period the Panthers made a costly fumble on the Gopher 4-yard line. Sebastian missed the pass from center for a 5-yard loss. Weinstock, on the next play, kicked a field goal from placement.

Only a brilliant 60-yard run by Lund overshadowed his teammate's feat. The tow-headed Minnesota star took the opening kick-off in the second half on his 2-yard line, and was in the clear when Munjas dragged him down on Pitt's 38-yard line.

Pitt tried a desperate passing attack in the final minutes which failed to click and the game ended with the ball on their own 30-yard line.

Lund's kicking was a big factor in the Gopher victory. Minnesota scored six first downs to eight for Pittsburgh and gained 146 yards by rushing to 139 for the Panthers. In total yards gained, however, the Easterners were ahead with 230 against 162 for Minnesota.

PITTSBURGH, Oct. 21 (AP).—In one swift, rapier-like scoring thrust in the first minute of play, a cerebral Carnegie Tech eleven today knifed out a 7-to-0 victory over a big, bumbling Notre Dame team that just couldn't get going.

It was "Harpster football"—the gridiron art as taught by Tech's 26-year-old coach—that brought the Tartans their astonishing triumph over a creaking, groaning Irish machine before a crowd of 57,000.

And it was a lightning forward pass from Quarter Back Angelo Bevevino to Right End Libbus Lewis on the third play of the encounter that brought the only score of the fray and Carnegie's third win out of three 1933 starts.

Climax at Very Start.

The whole story of the game is told in that first feverish moment after the opening whistle blew for Tech's captain, Red Stewart, to kick off to the towering, powerful looking visitors from South Bend.

Half Back Johnny Tobin, of Hunk Anderson's starting "shock troops," gathered in the ball on his own 11-yard line and scuttled to the 27-yard line before a swarm of Tartan tacklers brought him to earth in a resounding crash that knocked the oval from his hands.

Like a flash, Carnegie's right guard, Bunny Burzio, who was to be a pain in Notre Dame's neck

Terrors Crush Georgetown Team, 20-0, as Shepherd Stars

(By Staff Corerspondent.)

MUNICIPAL STADIUM, Baltimore, Md., Oct. 21.—William Shepherd, Western Maryland half back, herded the Green Terrors to a 20-to-0 victory here today over a helpless Georgetown eleven, whose aerial attack failed to function. The one-sided encounter was witnessed by a small crowd of 5,000, whose presence was hardly noticable in the over-sized stadium.

Shepherd, the sophomore whose efforts were responsible for the three touchdowns and two placement kicks chalked up against the Hoyas, was only a half back in the line-up, but in the game he was virtually a whole team. Early in the first quarter, after the ball had been bounced back and forth in midfield from one team to the other with a routine of three downs and a kick, the Terrors suddenly swung into action with a run around left end by McNally, who was downed on the opposition's 20-yard line. The line was bucked for a 5-yard gain, then Shepard applied the master touch to the push by going around right end for a touchdown.

Shepherd Scores Again.

In the second period, the Green and Gold one-man eleven ran around right end to cross the goal line—this time from the 13-yard line. Late in this quarter Georgetown scored its initial first down on its own 20-yard line. They attempted a pass, which was intercepted by McNally as the half ended.

The second half started slowly, with action concentrated in midfield practically throughout the third quarter. Georgetown made abortive efforts to launch an aerial attack, and Western Maryland's attempts in the same direction proved equally fruitless. Western Maryland threatened late in this period, steam-rollering the ball to the shadow of the Hoya goal post. The

By Westbrook Pegler.

PALMER STADIUM, Princeton, N. J., Oct. 21.—A most remarkable development began to develop in earnest at Palmer Stadium, the football arena of Princeton University, this afternoon. Princeton's football team, largely composed of big, limber, ripping, tearing sophomores who made excellent reputations in prep school, licked Columbia, 20 to 0. This was more or less expected, even by the Columbia people, and the outcome, therefore, was routine.

But this game marked the real beginning of the revival of football prestige and glory at Princeton under the coaching of Fritz Crisler, who was brought down East from the University of Chicago, where he had been assistant to old Lonny Stagg, and rather strangely the revival was begun by a lot of boys who just happened to come to Princeton at the same time Crisler came here.

The boys do say that a good coach attracts good freshmen who wish to make his teams in years to come, but it took remarkable foresight in these young men to know that Crisler would be a successful coach.

First Serious Game.

This season was Crysler's first seriously competitive campaign, you understand, after a year of preparatory work, and this afternoon's game with Columbia was his first serious game or shooting match of the new deal.

CLEVELAND, Oct. 21 (AP).—The Army carried the opposing trenches today with a savage early drive, restricted a sensational counter attack from the air and emerged triumphant over Illinois, 6 to 0, in an intersectional football battle waged before 35,000 spectators in the cavernous Municipal Stadium.

The Cadets struck a decisive blow for the Eastern football colors on the neutral shores of Lake Erie with a decisive, brilliantly executed attack featured by the all-around work of Texas Jack Buckler. Going into the fray as the under dogs, the soldiers repeatedly swept their Big Ten rivals off their feet and then staved off a long passing attack that gained 159 yards without producing a point for Illinois in the last half.

Navy Subdues Virginia on Pass, 13-7

Navy Sub Intercepts Aerial in Fourth Period, Runs 95 Yards to Goal.

(By Staff Correspondent.)

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Oct. 21.—A sensational run of 95 yards to a touchdown by Reds Baumberger, subquarter back, brought victory to Navy over University of Virginia today by a score of 13 to 7, in one of the finest gridiron battles staged at Annapolis in years.

Baumberger intercepted a Virginia pass when the Cavaliers were driving deep into Navy territory, and the stage seemed set for another Virginia touchdown. But this was not to be, for, when Munger heaved one of his many passes far out to the right side of his line, intended for Morton, the alert Baumberger picked the ball out of the air. Eluding three Virginia tacklers who were close in, he started dashing on his way. Several Orange and Blue clad gridders took up the chase, but none could overhaul the "fast-sailing Middie" as he tracked his way across one chalk line after another.

Notables See Game.

Official Washington was represented in the throng by the Assistant Secretary of the Navy and Mrs. Latrobe Roosevelt, who were weekend guests of the Superintendent and Mrs. Thomas Hart.

It early became apparent after Navy kicked off to open hostilities that a bristling battle was in the offing. Throughout the first period, both teams gave fine exhibitions of defensive work in the pinches. Forcing the issue, the Cavaliers kept play confined in Navy territory throughout the first period and in one instance made a sustained drive of 70 yards to within three yards of Navy's goal, where the Tars stiffened and took the ball on downs. Virginia again menaced after a poor kick by Clark and as the period ended, the visitors held the ball four yards from the goal line.

Dempsey Partner In New Oil Gusher

Mauler's Well in Texas Finally Comes In.

Gladewater, Tex., Oct. 21 (AP). Jack Dempsey, "Old Manassa Mauler" of Fistiana, was in a fair way of becoming an oil king tonight after the Dempsey-Manziel No. 1 well, owned jointly by Dempsey and Bobby Manziel, his former sparring partner, blew in for an expected potential production of 35,000 barrels daily.

Manziel, a bantamweight fighter and friend of the former champion of the world's heavyweights, joined Dempsey recently in acquiring oil holdings in the Gladwater area—Dempsey's first venture into the oil business. Dempsey was expected to visit the new gusher next week.

ANN Arbor, Mich., Oct. 21 (AP). Ohio's bid for big ten football honors failed to match the desperate effort of Michigan to remain in the title battle today, and the Blue-accountered Wolverines sent the Buckeyes home with a crushing 13 to 0 defeat.

The Wolverines started a march toward the Western conference promised land for the fourth consecutive year before a colorful, surging throng of 93,508 persons, the largest gathering that has ever jammed the Michigan bowl since its construction in 1927.

Youthful Harry Kipke, the Wolverine mentor, reached into his master's time-worn bag of tricks and came out with Fielding H. Yost's "old 83." end around plays and others that were throw-backs to the active days of the "grand old man."

Revised Old Play Effective.

It was "old 83," with a few minor variations to get around the new rules, that led directly to the first touchdown by young Bill Renner in the final minutes of the first half. And it was an off-tackle play, another of Yost's favorites, that accounted for the second and final score by speedy Herman Everhardus in the dying minutes of the game.

The Wolverines outplayed their annual foe during most of the 60 minutes, Ohio accounting for only three first downs as compared with eight for Michigan. The Buckeyes had only one scoring chance, the result of a fumble in the second period, but failed to capitalize.

Behind well-night perfect interference and blocking, Michigan backs scampered around and through Ohio's line, but fell back to the favorite Michigan style of attack, forward and lateral passing, when they needed sizeable gains.

Michigan twice missed scoring

Michigan State Beats Marquette on One Play

Milwaukee, Oct. 21 (AP).—A mud-plastered ball slithered through the hands of a Marquette kicker, a charging Michigan State end corralled it, an elusive half back skidded over for a touchdown and that's about all there was to Marquette's annual home-coming today. Michigan State won, 6 to 0.

Wayland Becker, Marquette's best kicker, was back for a punt late in the first period when the pass eluded his fingers and rolled to the Marquette 10-yard line, where it was pounced upon by Zarza, State end. Only one play was required for the touchdown.

STRIKING back with all the skill and pent up fury at its command after its foe had assumed a 6-to-0 lead in the first few minutes of play, a smooth and powerful George Washington eleven defeated Auburn, 19 to 6, before a riotously happy throng of 16,000 fans yesterday at Griffith Stadium. G. W.'s victory stamped it indelibly as one of the East's major football teams.

'Ere the first stages of despair at the lightning-like thrust of the Plainsmen had gripped the 5,000 students in the sideline stands, Johnny Baker provided the spark for the Colonials' counterattack—a scintillating 34-yard gallop to a touchdown before half the second quarter had run its course.

The G. W. attack that had seemed cumbersome in the early stages was galvanized into a crushing stampede by Baker's beauteous gallop through tackle, a swift, sudden stroke that saw him elude the entire Auburn secondary defense with a sharp reverse play that carried him across the goal line untouched by an enemy hand.

Thus did the Colonials go on to a brilliant victory, amassing 17 first downs to Auburn's 5, and outgaining the Plainsmen from scrimmage by almost 200 yards.

G. W. Stops Phipps.

Heralded as the South's outstanding ball carrier and prospective timber for the 1933 all-American role of honor, Firpo Phipps was closely guarded by G. W. and effectively bottled up. After the first three minutes of the game, when he helped arrange the trappings for Auburn's touchdown, Phipps' value to the team was negligible.

Al Rogers, a mere wisp of a half back, who looked strangely out of place on the field until he went into action, was the most valuable man in the Bengal back field. He it was who skirted right end on a reverse play for a 9-yard gain and the touchdown that gave the Southerners their briefly held advantage.

A George Washington fumble, committed by Don Bomba on the first play following the kick-off, started the blue-jerseyed invaders on their goalward drive. "Tiny" Holmes, Auburn tackle, pounced on the oval as it bounced crazily on the 30-yard line.

McCarver Breaks Nose.

But the victory crazed George Washington players regained their stride in the second period, after performing in haphazard fashion during the first. "Nig" McCarver, whose nose was broken the first time he carried the ball but remained in the game nevertheless, started the first goalward march with a 30-yard run through tackle to his own 57-yard line, where Rogers pulled him down from behind.

Leemans, Bomba and McCarver began a drive through Auburn's for-

Winooka and Equipoise Matched for 7-Furlong Race at Belmont on Nov. 7

Negotiations Are Finally Completed

AnnouncementSurprise; Distance Compromise of Rival Handlers.

United Hunts Meeting Is Scene; Anzac Horse Races Wednesday.

THE off-again, on-again race is on again.

Winooka and Equipoise will meet in a 7-furlong sprint at Belmont Park on November 7. Rufe Naylor, manager of the Australian champion, wired the announcement to handlers of the invader, now stabled at Laurel. Naylor left Laurel several days ago to confer with C. V. (Sonny) Whitney, owner of "Ekky," in New York.

"Race with Equipoise on at 7 furlongs," wired Naylor, and a stable boy pumping for breath brought the telegram straight to the press box. Winooka's handlers wanted to make sure that the news would reach the thick Sunday papers.

It is doubtful whether the news that the race was on again was as much of a shock to the scribes as the distance of the contest. The matching of the stars of two continents came at a time when hope virtually had been abandoned for such a race. Few horsemen believed that Whitney would agree to the contest at this late date and there was none who thought Equipoise's owner would consent to the match at less than a mile.

Held Out for 6 Furlongs.

Negotiations for the race were apparently dropped early last week when Whitney and Naylor could no agree on distance. The Australian's manager at the time held out for 6 furlongs. The seven-eighths race, of course, is a compromise.

It is believed that both horses will carry 126 pounds, which would be a concession by the invaders, who sought lighter weight. Edgar Britt, the Australian boy, will ride Winooka, with Sonny Workman, as usual, aboard Equipoise.

The Whitney star is unbeaten this year in a sprint race. He has suffered two defeats, Dark Secret took his measure at a mile and a half in the mud and Osculator turned the trick at a mile and a quarter. In the latter race, Equipoise equalled track record time, although beaten. Equipoise holds the American record for a mile set at Arlington Park. Inasmuch as his training has only been toned down, horsemen believe Trainer Tom Healy will have no trouble sharpening his charge during the next two weeks.

Holds Many Records.

Winooka holds the Australian records for most distances from 4 to 6 furlongs. Several were formerly the property of the ill-fated Phar Lap. The Australian champion has impressed with his appearance and his form. His lone public workout showed him to have a smooth stride and powerful leg drive. He is reported to have fully recovered from the slight injury which forced to postponement of his debut at Laurel.

Wednesday, Winooka is slated to meet a crack field of sprinters at the nearby course.

throughout the battle, was on the pigskin, and Tech was off.

Steve Terebus, right half, lost a yard at right tackle, but on the next play Bevevino, who once was a Notre Dame freshman quarter back, rifled a pass to Lewis, who pulled it in on the 10-yard stripe and galloped across the line for a touchdown.

Very business-like, Stewart place-kicked the extra point.

It was a dashing bit of play, reminiscent of the work of Howard Harpster himself when he led Carnegie to triumphs over Notre Dame i 1926 and 1928. But it had its drawbacks, for Lewis, Tech's best pass catcher, was injured as he was tackled over the line and two torn muscles in the left leg may keep him out of the game for several weeks.

After that first flash, not a scoring threat developed on either side, Carnegie playing safe and Notre Dame displaying probably the most woeful offensive in Irish history. Their few passes failed to work, and except for a couple of first down-producing line bucks by the giant Elser, there were no redeeming Notre Dame flights.

The rest of the story is written in Carnegie's magnificent line play, a secondary that broke up Notre Dame's few passes, and an Irish utter lack of inspiration.

Army Beats Illini In Cleveland Game

would have doubled its margin, at least. Three points, on a beautiful place kick through the uprights, by Travis Brown, in the second period, were wiped off the scoreboard when officials decided after a lengthy huddle that it was null and void, due to the fact Quarter Back Paul Johnson had both knees, instead of just one, on the ground as he held the ball for Brown's boot from the 15-yard line.

This decision was in direct contradiction to the football code, which specifically exempts the player holding the ball from being affected by the dead-ball rule. Referee J. E. Keegan, of Pittsfield, Mass., told Army officers after the game he regretted a mistake had been made, and admitted Brown's field goal should have been allowed.

The Army's touchdown was scored by fullback Joe Stancook of Balmat, N. Y., on a one-yard plunge through the line, climaxing a 55-yard drive in the first quarter. Johnson's hard running off the tackles and Buckler's passing to Brown and Burlingame contributed to this scoring advance, besides featuring most of Army's other onslaughts.

Starting in the third quarter and continuing into the final period, after breaking up two threatening aerial attacks by Illinois, Army rushed and passed approximately 80 yards. It looked like another scoring drive when Buckler made first down on Illinois 7-yard mark but it was broken up when Stancook fumbled in a drive off tackle and Kuhn, substitute Illinois guard, recovered the ball on his team's 11-yard stripe.

Illinois Goes to Air.

Illinois took to the air after discovering in the first half that its burly forwards could not do a thing to Army's scrappy line, featuring the defensive work of Capt. Harvey Jablonsky as well as the fine end play of Pet Kopesak and Paul Burlingame. The shift in tactics at first caught the Cadets flatfooted and three times put Illinois within scoring distance in the last two periods.

Jack Beynon, Illinois quarter back, completed five of the first seven passes he hurled, with Lindberg, Schustek and Froschauer on the receiving end. His first drive ended on Army's 22, where the Cadets braced and took the ball on downs. The next aerial attack bogged down when Stancock intercepted a short pass, glancing off Illini arms on Army's 15. The third and last big threat ended in the final quarter when Full Back Snook fumbled and Burlingame recovered on Army's 30.

All told, Illinois, although able to penetrate Army's line with running plays for gains of only 37 yards, completed 12 out of 18 passes for 159 yards. Several times only a matter of inches separated Illinois from connection with a pass that had the touchdown label on it.

Line Edge to Army.

Army, although lucky to escape being scored on via the air, had the edge in line play as well as backfield drive and tactics. Buckler's passing, kicking and running made him the standout player of the field. Johnson's returns of kicks were so sensational that he picked up 158 yards altogether on these gallops.

The decisions of the officials appeared somewhat baffling most of the afternoon to spectators and experts alike, besides being to the disadvantage of the Army. In addition to the technical ruling on Brown's place kick, which cost 3 points, the Cadets once lost the ball on their own 30-yard line as the reult of a foul called on an Army punt. At the same time, Illinois was checked frequently by offside penalties.

The line-ups and summary:

Joe Knight Matched With George Nichols

Miami, Fla., Oct. 21 (AP).—E. H. Griffith, manager of Joe Knight, light-heavyweight, today denied that the Cairo, Ga., boxer has been signed as yet for a match with Champion Maxie Rosenbloom early next year, as announced in New York by Matchmaker Lew Diamond.

Mack to Tackle Dougan at Portner's

Match Is Most Promising on All-Star Program for Tuesday.

AN "ALL-STAR" boxing card that is really capable of twinkling is being offered at Portner's Arena Tuesday. Any one of the three eight-rounders sharing the spotlight might well head a more mediocre card.

Perhaps the best bout in the top trio in the opinion of close followers of local fisticuffs is that which brings Jimmy Mack back to the wars against Le Roy Dougan. Mack is the featherweight whose debut was made at Portner's last winter in a hectic affair with Eddie Burl that set a new all-time high for continuous action and thrills. Burl won that fight in the opinion of the judges and referee—an opinion in which many did not concur.

Running a close second in possibilities is the Maxie Koshover-Stumpy Jacobs eight-rounder. Koshover is the perfect type of hit-and-run lightweight, possessed of enough cleverness to make these tactics highly interesting and spectacular. Jacobs is a plodder, but a fast plodder, who wades in shooting punches continuously. Jacobs' best punishment is inflicted to the midsection—an area in which Koshover is believed rather vulnerable.

The Carey Wright-Tommy Bashara feature is interesting mainly to those who like their glove flinging high, wide and handsome. Neither of these two welterweights is possessed of more than a modicum of ring generalship and skill, but they both have fighting instinct and punch. Wright has demonstrated time and time again in the past that he is capable of absorbing the stiffest punishment, and his recent bout with Maxie Koshover proved that he is rapidly gaining the ring knowledge necessary to make him a better boxer.

Shikat Battles Olsen Here Thursday

Latter Makes Bid for Place in "Big Time;" Judson on Mat Program.

WHEN Matchmaker Joe Turner flashes his weekly five-star show Thursday at the auditorium Cliff Olsen, whose heavyweight stock has soared sky high as a result of recent conquests, will step out of the preliminary and semifinal class to oppose Dick Shikat, former world's champion.

The ever popular Frank Judson, fresh from a triumphant tour of the Midwest, returns here to tie up with Orville Brown in the semifinal.

In accepting Shikat as a finish opponent at this time, Olsen has bucked the wishes of Joe Turner, who advised the youthful Swede to participate in a few more build-up shots prior to closing for this go.

After working to a whirlwind 30-minute limit draw with Shikat this past week, Olsen desired the clash.

Casey Berger and Karl Davis are cast in one of the 30-minute limits and Paul Boesch and Tom Alley in another. A third is being added.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—HAPPY GO, $4.40, $3.40, $3.00; ROUND TABLE, $10.40, $5.80; RED JOHN, $6.40.

HAPPY GO sprinted into an easy lead without effort, displayed high speed while strongly restrained until reaching the home stretch, opened up at will thereafter, but swerved repeatedly to win hard held. ROUND TABLE forced to secure racing room on the outside from the start, closed with good courage. RED JOHN, squeezed back soon after the start and in trouble all during the run down the back stretch, came through on the inside during the final drive and closed fast. WHITE CLOUD, closest to the winner for five furlongs, weakened when the real issue came. BLACK FALCON met with early interference. DARE DEVIL showed a flash of early speed. SAUNTER suffered early interference. HERO OLGA was roughed about early.

SECOND RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 2:11. Off at 2:19. Winner, Mrs. A. W. Kowula's b. f. (3), by Court Day or Claptrap—Belphryonia. Trained by L. Murray. Value to winner, $625; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 0:24 2-5, 0:49 2-5, 1:15, 1:42 3-5, 1:55 4-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SISKO, $42.20, $11.80, $4.80; AXENBY, $4.60, $3.00; CHIEF'S TROUBADOUR, $2.60.

SISKO outran his field to the first turn, was steadied in front until challenged, continued strongly after coming wide at the stretch turn and outstayed AXENBY. Latter moved into contention with a rush when approaching the final turn, made a strong effort entering the front stretch and fought it out willingly. CHIEF'S TROUBADOUR weaved his way into a forward position while managing to save ground and came determinedly under punishment. LIGHT BREEZE, a forward factor from the beginning, held on resolutely at the end. CROSS ROADS finished full of run and was in very tight quarters at the finish. GLEN BURNIE weakened after six furlongs. BUSY IKE stopped. BRIGHT SEAS broke down and was pulled up.

THIRD RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $800; allowances. St. Mary's. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 2:51. Off at 2:59. Winner, E. R. Bradley's b. c. (3), by Black Toney—Clonastee. Trained by H. J. Thompson. Value to winner, $625; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 0:23 2-5, 0:47 3-5, 1:12 2-5.

†C. T. Grayson entry.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—BOLD LOVER, $9.20, $4.40, $3.00; CHARACTER, $3.40, $2.40; CURACAO, $3.00.

BOLD LOVER, strongly handled from the start and a determined factor, wore CHARACTER down when reaching the final furlong pole and, tenaciously ridden, came out gradually nearing the finish. CHARACTER met persistent and keen contention from BAND WAGON and HOPE TO DO in the first half mile, saved ground and held on gamely. CURACAO, outrun for the first half mile, swung to the outside and finished resolutely. BAND WAGON and HOPE TO DO were used up forcing the early pace. GLORIFY was unable to enter contention. SIR JAMES went slightly lame and weakened.

FOURTH RACE—One mile. The Selima Stakes. Purse, $10,000 added. For fillies, 2-year-olds, foals of 1931. Start good from gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:31. Off at 3:36. Winner, C. V. Whitney's ch. f. (2), by Sickle—Frilette. Trained by J. A. Healey. Value to winner, $22,175; second, $2,000; third, $1,000; fourth, $400. Time, 0:23 3-5, 0:48, 1:13 2-5, 1:40.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—JABOT (C. V. Whitney entry), $11.80, $7.00, $4.80; HINDU QUEEN, $11.80, $7.00; BAZAAR, $3.00.

JABOT, sent into a forward position, and rated close to the leaders, wore SLAPDASH down when midway of the final turn, was intermittently punished during the closing furlong and just lasted to stall off HINDU QUEEN. Latter forced to race on the outside of her field from the start, finished strongly and was wearing the winner down at every stride. BAZAAR met with interference at the first turn, moved up rapidly while saving ground on the back stretch, but was blocked at the final turn. She came again when clear. RHYTHMIC entered contention with good speed, but weakened after making up much ground. ELF LOCK, sluggish and a trailer early, came with a belated rush in the last half mile. DUSKY PRINCESS passed tiring horses. FLEAM was unable to menace the leaders. SLAPDASH and WILLET stopped badly.

FIFTH RACE—One and one-quarter miles. Purse, $5,000 added. For 3-year-olds. The Maryland Handicap. Start good from gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:07. Off at 4:17. Winner, Glen Riddle Farm's ch. c. (3), by Man o' War—Annette K. Trained by G. Conway. Value to winner, $4,930; second, $1,000; third, $500; fourth, $150. Time, 0:23 3-5, 0:47 3-5, 1:12 2-5, 1:38 2-5, 2:05.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—WAR GLORY, $32.80, $18.40, $9.40; SUN ARCHER, $11.00, $6.40; HEAD PLAY, $3.60.

WAR GLORY, strongly reserved for the first seven furlongs, wore BARN SWALLOW down with a rush, responded strongly when shaken up for the stretch drive and outstayed SUN ARCHER. Latter, in the thick of contention, moved up on the inside of the winner at the final furlong pole, but hung nearing the finish. HEAD PLAY, fractious to delay the start, came with a tremendous rush after being away slowly. POMPOSITY reached the leaders with a bold rush but tired during the late stages. GOLDEN WAY found clear racing room, but was not good enough. SWIVEL was never a factor. BARN SWALLOW stopped badly when put to a drive. BROKER'S TIP was impeded with the break when CAESAR'S GHOST swerved to the inside and was knocked back. INLANDER quit early.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start poor from gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:46. Off at 4:50. Winner, R. C. Watts' ch. g. (3), by Wilderness—Fair Moneta. Trained by owner. Value to winner, $625; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 0:24 2-5, 0:49 2-5, 1:14 3-5, 1:41, 1:54 1-5.

*Field.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—FAIRLY WILD, $9.00, $4.00, $4.00; BUB McFARLAND, $4.80, $4.60; JODHPUR, $8.40.

FAIRLY WILD, taken to the outside of the leaders when moving into a forward position, disposed of JODHPUR and was strongly urged to stall off BUB McFARLAND. Latter, allowed to settle in his best stride, swung to the outside in the final five-sixteenths and closed willingly. JODHPUR, rushed into the lead midway of the back stretch, faltered during the final drive. ROYAL DURBAR showed a good effort. ROCK COVENTRY, as good as left, was hurried to his field and had nothing in reserve when put to a drive. He closed a larger gap than the chart shows. EN PASSANT was held safe after being away very slowly. FLAGEOLET and MADGE'S FELLOW both stopped badly.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 5:21. Off at 5:22. Winner, Mrs. H. L. Ughetta's b. g. (4), by Lucullite—Decree. Trained by J. Hogan. Value to winner, $625; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 0:24 1-5, 0:49, 1:14 2-5, 1:40 2-5, 1:47.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—DEDUCE, $8.00, $4.40, $3.80; SALISBURY, $6.80, $4.80; MODERN TIMES, $5.40.

DEDUCE, away in the first flight and kept close to the leaders, raced into a brief lead midway of the final turn, withstood a drive gamely after shaking off SALISBURY and was slowly moving clear at the end. SALISBURY, prominent from the start, faltered after a bold effort at the stretch turn. MODERN TIMES saved ground wherever possible and finished with good courage. VOTE beat the others away when fully in motion, had good speed, but was unable to stay when put to a drive. MARCASITE could not menace the leaders. PENCADER went wide all the way. BANDERLOG and the others were outrun.

Jabot Winner In Selima at Laurel

tucky Derby. The winner was War Glory. If this Glen Riddle colt has been a disappointment this year, he certainly made good with a vengeance yesterday. The same goes for Jockey Charlie Kurtsinger, who furthered his reputation as a money rider. Beaten a length came Sun Archer, Willis S. Kilmer's hope, with Head Play, Perakness winner, third in a nose battle with Pomposity. Strung out at various distances came the winner of this stake and that stake, with Broker's Tip, the Derby champion, a poor eighth.

War Glory followed Barn Swallow's pace, took command when the Bradley horse faltered and outfinished Sun Archer. Head Play was the only one of the "come from behind horses" that made a menacing move in the stretch run.

Happy Go Wins Opener.

Happy Go, a green Happy Argo colt, with an inclination to run sideways in the stretch, defeated the juvenile maidens that contested in the opening sprint. Coucci hustled him to the top, and it was all over but the pay-off. Round Table came from somewhere for the place, and Red John staggered into third money.

The longshot players had their inning in the second race, when Sisko came out of a struggling mass of horse flesh at the quarter pole to pull away from Axenby and Chie's Troubador. There was cheering only in spots, for Sisko had been neglected in the wagering. The mutuel was one of $42.20 proportions.

Bold Lover, the Clark Gable horse, gave a sprint lesson to some of the best quartered at this track in thethird race. The Bradleyite kept on the coat tail of Character most of the route before moving up at the final furlong pole. However, both had to be ridden out to withstand the closing rush of Curacao, which would have won in a few more hops. Bold Lover paid off at a $9.20 return. The race was run in 1:12 2-5 over a track slightly off.

V. M. I. Cadets Drive to Late Score to Defeat Maryland U. Eleven, 19 to 13

Smith Stars In Thrilling Struggle

Runs 35 Yards to Game-Winning Score in Final Period.

Widmeyer's Fine Play Futile; Old Liners Twice in Front.

LEXINGTON, Va., Oct. 21 (AP). Coming from behind twice in a thrilling home-coming battle, V. M. I.'s Cadets earned a spectacular 19-to-13 victory over Maryland's Old Liners here today.

Billy Smith, the Cadet sensational field general, who had been expected to show a passing attack, led his teammates in a brilliant running game that upset the Old Liners.

Smith twice carried the ball across for touchdowns and played a major part in the Cadets' victory. It was his touchdown dash of 35 yards in the final period that put the Cadets out in front to stay.

V. M. I.'s running attack, although faltering at times, struck on three occasions with a scoring punch. Earl Widmyer, Terrapin back field flash, was the only consistent ground gainer for the visitors, but Smith, Meredith Urick, and Dick Dodson took turns at smashing the heavy Maryland forewall for substantial gains.

Widmyer Maryland Star.

Widmyer's brilliance kept the Marylanders in the running all the way, theratened to wrest a victory for the Old Liners. He opened the game by sprinting 29 yards on a reverse play and was hard to stop throughout the afternoon.

The Old Liners' first touchdown threat was stopped by a fumble, which Straub, Cadet captain, recovered on the 12-yard line, but Widmyer and his mates struck again in the second period with telling effect.

Late in the first period, Widmyer bewildered the Cadets on a reverse play over his own left side that netted 22 yards, and, with the Terrapins displaying a successful overhead game in the second quarter, the Old Liners had the Cadets on the run for a while. Nelson shot a couple of passes to Widmyer that netted 36 yards, and, although a holding penalty temporarily halted the offensive, Benner, a substitute for the tired Widmyer, seized another pass on the Cadet 3-yard line. The Cadets held for two downs, but Nelson scored on a neatly executed underhand pass from Sachs. Yaeger's placement kick was good.

Cadets Take Lead.

Three minutes later the Cadets were in the lead. Smith lofted a 22-yard pass to Watkins, who galloped 25 yards before he was hauled down from behind. Urick picked up 19 yards on a beautifully executed lateral, and, three plays later, skirted the end for a touchdown from the 3-yard line.

When Hancock's try for the extra point went wide, the Cadets again got busy. After Urick had returned the kick-off 25 yards. Billy Smith, in a magnificent exhibition of broken field running, slipped off tackle for 65 yards and a touchdown. Again Hancock's attempted placement went astray.

In the third period the Cadets tried to open up their passing attack, but Smith's heaves found no waiting receivers. But the Old Liners passed to better advantage. Nelson flipped an aerial to Widmyer that was good for 29 yards and placed the Terrapins in position for Ennis to score from the 11-yard line on a reverse play similar to the one Widmyer had used for his big gain.

Yaeger's try for the extra point failed, but Maryland led, 13 to 12.

Urick Runs Wild.

Coming back fighting, the Cadets put the Marylanders on the run with Urick reeling off successive dashes of 30 and 25 yards although the second play was called back.

After a punting exchange, Smith again electrified the crowd by streaking 35 yards down the side lines to score on a punt return. He later broke up Maryland's passing attack by snatching the ball that slipped off Buscher's fingers.

Widmyer starred in a belated rally that netted three first downs as he carried the ball seven times in a row. The Cadets, however, held for downs in midfield as the game ended.

Mohawks Open Season In Baltimore Contest

The 1933 edition of the Mohawk A. C. football team will inaugurate its campaign this afternoon in Baltimore against the Irvington A. C. in a scheduled South Atlantic League game.

Members of the Mohawk eleven will assemble at noon at the clubhouse, 515 Eighth street southeast, and from there will embark for the Monumental City.

Mohawk's back field will include a quartet of seasoned warriors, with "Jumping Joe" Sweeney at quarter back; Snail DeLabre at full back, and Clark and Hedges at the half back posts.

The ends are Eddinger and O'Brien; the tackles, Armstrong and Stite; the guards, Schwartman and Beavers, and the center, Delaney.

34-Yard Dash Nets Florida Victory

North Carolina U. Bows, 9-0, on Henderson's Dash for Score.

FLORIDA FIELD, Gainesville, Fla., Oct. 21 (AP).—A weaving, side-stepping dash of 34 yards for a touchdown early in the game by Jack Henderson, 147-pound Florida half back, paved the way for the Gator victory over North Carolina here today, 9 to 0.

Florida scored 2 points late in the final period as the Tarheels, trying desperately, attampted to pass from behind the goal line. Alton Brown stepped in and knocked down the aerial in the end zone.

While the game was played mostly in Carolina's territory, it was a brilliant display of defense football, with two stubborn lines holding in critical moments and offensive backs being thrown for loss after loss.

Gators Recover Punt.

Florida's touchdown came about midway of the first period when Bill Ferrazzi, Florida center, partially blocked a punt by McCachren and the Gators recovered on the 34-yard line. On the first play Henderson dived off tackle, fought his way clear of tackles and behind perfect interference skipped over the goal line standing up.

Hughes faked a place kick and passed to Goodyear for the extra point.

Only once did the Tarheels show any sustained effort at scoring and that was in the fourth period when they took the ball on their own 25 yard line as a Florida punt went out of bounds. MacDonald tossed a curling pass to Woolen, who was downed on Florida's 48-yard bar. Another pass from MacDonald to MacBell netted eight yards, and Shaffer hit the line for a first down on Florida's 35, the deepest Carolina penetrated into Florida territory from offensive thrusts.

Tulsa Surprises Kansas U. Eleven

Tulsa, Okla., Oct. 21 (AP).—Tulsa University, a little school with a big ambition, passed and plunged to a spectacular 7-to-0 football victory over the ever-dangerous Kansas University Jayhawkers at Skelly Field today.

Anxious to win the popular title of "another Center" by going through a tough schedule victorious all the way, the "Golden Hurricane" decisively outplayed Kansas through three periods, and stopped cold a desperate last-minute rush that carried the ball from the Jayhawkers' 10-yard line to the Tulsa 25.

Bill Volok, "one-man team," who regularly plays guard, but is pulled into other positions for strategic plays, snagged a pass tossed from the Kansas 41-yard line and raced to within 3 yards of the goal on the third-quarter play that opened the way for Tulsa's touchdown. "Tack" Dennis, sophomore full back, scored on the second line play and then booted one between the uprights for the extra point.

Newman, Strong Oppose Passers

Harry Newman and Ken Strong will be the attractions at the Griffeth Stadium, Wednesday night when the Washington Passers meet the New York Giants, national professional football league eleven.

Newman, former Michigan University quarter back, and one of the greatest backs ever to be turned out of the Big Ten, is one of the few stars of the college game who broke into the professional football class without the sojourn of a year or so riding the bench.

Strong, star extraordinary at New York University and a unanimous selection for All-America honors, is considered by pro football experts to be the outstanding back in the Eastern division of the National Pro League.

Pegler Says

Teams Coached by Rockne Went for Touchdowns, Not First Downs.

By Westbrook Pegler.

NEW YORK, Oct. 21.—We are not hearing or reading much about the Rockne system of football play this year and I think it will pass out of mind in another season or two, except as a memory of one man's achievement in the sport industry. The experience of other football coaches who learned the system from the master, himself, and went out to take jobs in other schools is proving that the man and not the system was most important in the success of Notre Dame teams under Knute.

Of course, Rockne, at his best, had his pick of more good football players than any other coach in the country. With very few exceptions, his colleagues in the business would have been glad of a chance to trade their varsity teams for their pick of Rockne's scrubs. He didn't measure his man power by teams or squads. He had a regiment, and there were players at Notre Dame who couldn't ever make the regiment who would have been first string in other surroundings.

Best Kids in Country.

The success of Notre Dame teams under Knute, the newspaper glory that rewarded his players while they were in school, and the prospects of a future in the coaching business brought the best kids in the country a-trooping to South Bend, year after year. They had their courage with them. It took some confidence and resolution in a kid who could have been a small-time star to pass up the certainty of a big position on an inferior team and challenge the best in the land at Notre Dame on a basis of glory or oblivion, but no compromise.

With this sort of talent Knute would seem to have had no excuse for failure. Well, he didn't fail, but many another coach would have, because, even with all those star athletes there still remained the little work of drilling and criticizing until each man not only knew but could execute his assignment on any play in graceful coordination with the work of all the others.

Not by Inching Along.

Rockne teams made very few touchdowns by inching along. Most of his plays were pictured in his imagination as scoring plays. That is, if the play worked, if each man did as he was supposed to, there would be nobody left on the opposing side to interfere with the Notre Dame man who chanced to be toting the ball. So there was your touchdown. But when a team is contending with the sort of teams that Notre Dame met the boys must expect that their plans will be resisted and interfered with.

Consequently only a comparatively few of his scoring plays, which were perfect plays if they worked, resulted in touchdowns. But in theory he and his players generally were playing for touchdowns and not for 5 yards or a mere first down.

In other hands the Rockne stuff will be changed and tinkered with until pretty soon it will not be the old Rockne stuff at all any more. I am not sure that it ever was strictly Rockne stuff. I remember Maj. Frank Cavanaugh, his own fine reputation largely eclipsed by Rockne's, sitting in his dressing room at Fordham one afternoon a few years ago, remarking that his stuff was known by another name out in the Midwest.

"Yes," the major said in the growly, criminal-lawyer voice of his, "I mean that stuff they call the Rockne stuff. That is my stuff. I used it at Dartmouth before you ever heard of Rockne."

Both of them are over yonder now and I expect they will be sitting on the sunny bank of some cloud these autumn afternoons putting down little crosses and circles and arrows on paper and tracing down the origins of this stuff.

Tulane Scores On Dash of 101 Yards

ATLANTA, Ga., Oct. 21 (AP).—The galloping feet of "Bucky" Bryan, 170-pound Tulane half back, slopped through the mud 101 yards from the kick-off as the third quarter opened today to give the Green Wave from New Orleans a 7-to-0 victory over Georgia Tech.

Bryan's great run, all the more remarkable because of the quagmire churned up on Grant Field by a drenching rain just before the game started, came with startling suddenness at the opening of the second half, and provided the only thrill in an otherwise drab encounter marked by frequent fumbles.

The Shreveport, La., half back caught the ball one yard behind his own goal line, plunged and sidestepepd his way through the entire Georgia Tech team, and with excellent blocking by his teammates, galloped the length of the field to lay the ball behind Tech's goal line for the only touchdown of the game. Mintz, Bryan's running mate, booted the ball through the standards for the extra point.

Virtually the entire game, except for Bryan's long run, was played in Tulane territory, and at no other time did the Greenies threaten to score.

Georgia Tech, on the other hand, twice put the ball within Tulane's 10-yard line, each time lacking the

Miss. State Holds Vanderbilt to Tie

Nashville, Tenn., Oct. 21 (AP).—Mississippi State's rugged Maroon eleven turned loose surprising strength today as it fought the favored Vanderbilt Commodores to a 7-to-7 tie in a Southeastern Conference game.

In the leading role of the Maroon's flashy exhibition was Bobby Herrington, diminutive captain and quarter back, whose kicking, passing and running amazed the 7,000 spectators.

It was the first time any Mississippi State team had scored on a Vanderbilt eleven and the deadlock dealt the Commodores a blow in their first Conference competition. Tennessee and Alabama had defeated the Maroons in earlier Southeastern games.

Villanova Hands 40-0 Defeat to Gettysburg

Villanova, Pa., Oct. 21 (AP).—The Wildcats of Villanova clawed out a 40-to-0 surprise win over the hitherto undefeated Gettysburg College eleven today. Six thousand fans saw the Wildcats scratch out two touchdowns in each of the first two periods, and one tally in the third and fourth.

Occidental Pinmen Win.

The crack Occidental team concluded its three-game match with the Lexington aggregation at Baltimore last night, swamping the Monumental City's team by a grand total of 233 pins.

Scores for the teams follow:

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lexingt'n | 578 | 591 | 545 | 556 | 594—2,864 |

Astor Clarke, with a 637 set, and Joe Harrison's 613 set, led the Washington five, while Wilber Robey, with 605, starred for the losers.

Generals Upset Kentucky, 7 to 0

93-Yard Drive Scores in Second Period; Foes' Air Game Fails.

MAHER FIELD, Roanoke, Va., Oct. 21 (AP).—Washington and Lee Generals, outrushing their favored rivals from start to finish, today packed their scoring punch into a spectacular 93-yard touchdown march to defeat the previously unbested University of Kentucky, 7 to 0, in one of the major upsets of the 1933 football season.

Joe Sawyers, fleet and wiry half back and spark plug of the Generals' offense, launched the touchdown march with a 41-yard return of the kick-off at the start of the second half. The thrusts followed in rapid-fire order with Sawyers taking a shovel pass to sprint around left end for the final 10 yards, scoring standing up. Mattox kicked the goal from placement.

25-Yard Sprint in Final.

Pritchard, Kentucky back field ace, drew the stands to their feet late in the final period when he got back from a left end run and sprinted 25 yards. Kercheval fumbled, and Bailey and Smith were on him for an 8-yard loss, but Bach hurled a bullet-like pass to Ruppert who was stopped on Washington and Lee's 40-yard line.

Pritchard and Bach battered through for a first down. Bach made a short pass to Kercheval, but the Wildcat back was thrown for a 3-yard loss. Each was then trapped by three Generals for a 9-yard loss on an attempted pass, and Seitz, substitute for Sawyers, intercepted Bach's next heave to end Kentucky's last opportunity as the game ended.

Washington and Lee gained 128 yards by rushing while Kentucky made 80. The Generals were thrown for losses totaling 22 yards and dropped Wildcat backs behind the line for losses of 29 yards.

The Generals attempted seven passes, completing four for a total gain of 43 yards. Kentucky tried 19, completed eight for a net gain of 72 yards, and had five intercepted.

Boys' Club Issues Bid to Youngsters

The doors of the Washington Boys Club will be thrown wide open to the city's younger sportsmen throughout this week, Director Charles W. Fyfe announced yesterday. Any and all boys will be welcomed at the clubhouse, Third and C streets northwest. Use of the gym, shower baths and all other facilities will be absolutely free of charge.

The Boys Club basket ball space for younger devotees of the sport has been tripled by a new arrangement of courts. More room has been added to the games department and many new and interesting games introduced.

Alexandria High Beats St. John's

Alexandria, Va., Oct. 21 (Spl.). Alexandria High opened its home season, before a crowd of several hundred, soundly drubbing St. John's, of Washington, 46 to 0.

Displaying a powerful line and a great running attack, the Twins ran roughshod over their Washington opponents. O'Brien, Chilcotte, and Nugent threw passes into the arms of Ewald, Birrell, and Jenneir.

St. John's only gains came as a result of passing. Alexandria's line was impregnable.

Momentarily halted in their winning stride in the District League last week, Hokie Smith's kingpin crew, early season sensations, threw all their anguish into battle against the Book of Washington to emerge with a new season record set of 1938 in the National Capital League.

Led by Bill Miller's 410 set, and Lou Pantos' 399, the King Pinners achieved their brilliant three-game victory over C. C. McDevitt's entry.

Sam Simon, Book of Washington, went to the front in the individual average race by boosting his mark to 130 with games of 152, 151 and 120.

Second Defeat In Week Dealt Tennessee

Alabama Tide Rolls Over Volunteers, 12-6, to Ruin Record.

KNOXVILLE, Tenn., Oct. 21 (AP). Tennessee, its long-winning march halted last week by Duke, saw its eight-year record of no losses on Shields-Watkins Field go glimmering today as a smashing Alabama eleven came from behind to pound out a 12-to-6 triumph.

Volunteer supporters, accustomed to successive victories here since Kentucky whipped the Orange shirts in 1924, cheered lustily as Tennessee ran up an early lead, then looked on in apprehension and finally in dismay as the Crimsons drove out in front with a last-half offensive.

This was Tennessee's fourth defeat in eight years under Coach Robert Neyland and the first time in more than a decade that the Vols have suffered successive setbacks. Today's loss virtually threw Tennessee out of the Southeastern Conference title chase.

Penalties Affect Both.

Penalties played a major role in two of the three scores. Tennessee's touchdown and Alabama's winning tally came as a direct result of rules infractions, which placed the attacking team within easy distance of the goal.

Upwards of 20,000 fans, including Gov. Hill McAlister of Tennessee, witnessed the battle.

Alabama threatened at the outset, taking the kick-off and driving in short takes to Tennessee's 23, where Moseley's try for a field goal was wide. Tennessee also lost its first score chance when Mark recovered Walker's fumble on Alabama's 27. Here Vaughn's fourdown pass was incomplete. The Vols came right back to Alabama's 25 after the punt before another long pass was broken up.

The Vols scored in the second period, moving 65 yards and aided by a 20-yard pass from Vaughn to Pounders and a 15-yard Alabama penalty which put Tennessee on the 13, with Feathers racing around end for the score.

Alabama tied the score in the third. Taking a Tennessee kick on the Vols' 32 in the fourth period, Alabama marched to its winning touchdown.

Nebraska Wins Over Kansas State, 9-0

MANHATTAN, Kans., Oct. 21 (AP).—A 59-yard dash by Half Back Hub Boswell which enabled Full Back George Henry Sauer to drive over for a touchdown from the 1-yard mark and a field goal by Quarter Back Bernie Masterson gave the champion Nebraska Cornhuskers a 9-0 victory here today over Kansas State College and sole claim to the top rung in the Big Six Conference football race.

Before a home-coming crowd of 16,000 the Huskers turned from aerial methods to speed and power and put over the touchdown in the third period.

Masterson booted his field goal from placement on the 12-yard line just before the game ended. It was the climax of a great struggle between the rival lines, with the edge to Nebraska's charging forwards. Kansas State's pass attack, however, had Nebraska on defense briefly.

Lehigh Is Swamped By Penn State, 33-0

State College, Pa., Oct. 21 (AP).—Pennsylvania State College's revamped football line-up pounded Lehigh's eleven for five touchdowns and a 33-to-0 victory today before 8,000 spectators in the annual alumni homecoming day fray.

Jumping into a 7-0 lead in the first quarter, State tallied twice in the second period and added another pair of touchdowns in the closing quarters.

North Carolina Staters, Wake Forest Tie, 0-0

Gore Field, Wake Forest, N. C., Oct. 21 (AP).—For the second straight year Wake Forest and North Carolina State battled to a scoreless stalemate here today in their annual gridiron struggle. Both teams showed ability to gain ground in the middle of the field, but neither could muster the punch to score.

Navy Middies at Penn.

Purdue Humbles Proud Chicago, 14-0, in Major Midwest Upset During Downpour

STAGG FIELD, Chicago, Oct. 21 (AP).—Chicago's football hopes, lifted to the highest crest in 10 years, crashed today before a torrent of Purdue backs and rainfall, 14 to 0.

Before 15,000 spectators, all of whom were drenched to the skin as rain swept over Stagg Field, the Boilermakers solved the Maroon football puzzle as Jim Carter and Duane Purvis dashed over with runs of 52 and 21 yards for touchdowns.

The Boilermaker scoring salutes came in the second and third quarters, and it was fortunate for them, too, as darkness and the heavy downpour made football almost impossible thereafter.

Chicago Kept Far Off.

Carter and Purvis led the Boilermaker shelling as they worked behind a vastly improved and superior line and played a brand of defensive football that limited Chicago's closest threat to a march to the Boilermakers' 37-yard line in the third period.

Most of the thrills were crowded in the second period. Carter raced 49 yards down the right sidelines only to be spilled on Chicago's 10-yard stripe on a beautiful tackle by Pete Zimmer. There, the Maroons tossed the "backfield of a thousand threats" for a 5-yard loss.

Recovers Blocked Ball.

As the crowd cheered itself hoarse, Berwanger stepped up to kick. Four Purdue linesmen blocked it, but he recovered and booted to Purdue's 43-yard line. Carter again broke through on a dash of 52 yards to score. Toriello added the extra point from placement.

Purdue easily dominated the game, gaining 282 yards from the line of scrimmage to 61 for the Maroons. Only in the runback of punts did the Maroons, who had piled up 72 points in their first two games against nonconference foes, excel.

Syracuse Tops Cornell First Time, 14-7

ITHACA, N. Y., Oct. 21 (AP).—Syracuse signalized its return to football power today by coming from behind to defeat Cornell, 14-7, in a renewal of a series broken off 33 years ago.

It was not only the first time the Orange ever won from Cornell, but the first time it ever could score.

Cornell took the lead in the first quarter, but Syracuse rallied to tie the score in the third and then won out with only a few minutes to play in the final quarter when Stark's forward pass fell into W. Singer's hands in the end zone.

The Ithacans then scored a touchdown on a sleeper play, Ferraro shooting a 30-yard pass diagonally across the gridiron to Irving in the end zone.

Blanked Until Third.

Held scoreless until near the end of the third period, the Orange opened up. Mammosser shot a 10-yard pass to Tisdale, who passed 20 yards to the Cornell 20, outdistancing half a dozen Red Jerseymen. Mammosser's two bucks put the ball on the 7 stripe; then after Nevins picked up 2, Dinunzio carried it over.

With only three minutes to play, Syracuse got the ball on its 20 stripe. The Orange started a march down the field from that point. Cody fired a short pass to Johnson, who carried it 43 yards. On the next play Stark unleashed a 36-yard forward, which fell neatly into W. Singer's hands in the end zone.

Stanford Indians Beat Frisco, 20-13

Rally After 3 Quarters of Trailing Gives Margin.

San Francisco, Oct. 21 (AP).—Meeting the stubborn defense of a highly underrated foe, Stanford's Indians flashed an aerial attack in the closing minutes today to break a deadlock and defeat University of San Francisco's Dons, 20 to 13.

Stanford was on the short end of a 13-to-7 count as the game rolled into the last quarter and badly outplayed by a lighter and supposedly weaker eleven.

The touchdown that tied the score saw Maentz, left half, stumble over the goal from the 6-yard line after three previous downs had gained only a yard.

Four minutes were left to play when the Indians started on the winning drive. Held on the line 38 yards from goal, Jack Hillman, sub full back, rifled a flat pass over center to Reisner, sub half back, and, just as the latter was about to be tackled, he tossed a lateral to Moscrip, left end, who dashed some 20 yards to score. Moscrip added the extra point with a place kick.

Wildcats Rout Indiana in Rain, 25-0

Safety Starts Deluge of Scoring; Auguston in 52-Yard Run.

DYCHE Stadium, Evanston, Ill., Oct. 21 (AP).—To the accompaniment of forked lightning, blinding sheets of rain, and semidarkness, Northwestern overwhelmed Indiana today, walloping the Hoosiers, 25 to 0.

The rout of the Hoosiers was complete. They failed to make a single first down and threatened to score only once, when they intercepted a Northwestern forward pass early in the first period.

After being held in check for the first two periods, Northwestern's Wildcats ran over the Hoosiers in the third to register 22 points. By this time the rain was falling in a steady downpour, and the playing field was in semidarkness.

Northwestern started the scoring when Indiana fell victim of a safety.

Safety Starts Scoring.

This break marked the beginning of the rout of the Crimson lads from Indiana. Auguston, an Elusive back, substituting for Ollie Olson, broke loose on a 52-yard gallop for a touchdown. Duvall place-kicked the extra point.

Northwestern quickly scored again. Leeper dashed through Indiana's secondary for the touchdown, after a gallop of 23 yards. Auguston added the extra point.

To wind up the scoring in the third period, Olson laid a punt dead on Indiana's 10-yard line. Jones' kick was partly blocked, with Cruice taking the ball on Indiana's 20-yard line. Leeper dashed around left end to the 8-yard line, and Olson ripped through center to the Hoosier 2-yard line. He crashed over on the next play.

In the final period, Joe Chambers, a Wildcat substitute tackle, became a hero, when he booted the soggy ball 35 yards for a field goal from placement.

39,000 See Iowa Flatten Wisconsin

Crowd Sets State Record as Farmers Win, 26-7.

Iowa City, Iowa, Oct. 21 (AP).—Three long years of bitter disappointment were wiped out today by a powerful and deceptive Iowa football eleven, which overwhelmed Wisconsin, 26 to 7, before 39,000 homecoming fans.

The largest crowd ever to attend a football game in the State of Iowa was thrilled as Coach Ossie Solem's charges gave an exhibition that sent old grads into frenzies of joy they had not known since the championship days of 1921-22.

From the opening whistle the hard-charging Iowans dominated the play except for one brief spell in the third period when Wisconsin passes were indirectly responsible for a lone touchdown.

The shifty Joe Laws stole the show. His masterpiece was a sparkling 39-yard run for a touchdown in the second quarter after taking a Wisconsin punt.

HARVARD STADIUM, Cambridge, Mass., Oct. 21 (U.P.).—With a hard-charging line and a smooth overhead attack, Holy Cross came from behind to conquer Harvard today before a crowd of 43,000. The score was 10 to 7.

A field goal by Charlie Harvey, 218-pound tackle, from Harvard's 20-yard line, in the second quarter, represented the Crusaders' slim margin.

Outweighing Harvard some 20 pounds to the man, and presenting an iron line which played the full 60 minutes without a substitution, Holy Cross outrushed and outpassed the Crimson, and proved that its defense was equal to its offense by staging a thrilling goal-line stand in the third period.

Technique Is Better.

Holy Cross made 10 first downs against 7 for Harvard; gained 146 yards by rushing, against 48; completed 7 of 16 forward passes for a total gain of 142 yards, compared with 4 of 18 for a gain of 78 yards for Harvard.

Early in the second quarter, a punt gave Holy Cross the ball on Harvard's 48-yard line. Two line bucks and a pass, Hobin to Reiss, advanced to the 35-yard line. Another smash netted five and Hobin passed to Callan for 15. Two line plunges put the ball on the 12-yard line for Harvey's placement goal.

Before that quarter ended, however, Harvard marched 70 yards to a touchdown on two plays. From her own 45-yard line, Harvard completed two passes, Wells to Locke, for a touchdown, the latter scoring and the former converting.

The winning touchdown came on the fourth play of the last period. After a line buck and an incompleted pass, Britt passed to Reiss for a 15-yard gain, and followed with a spinner which placed the ball on Harvard's 18-yard line. Hobin then passed to Britt who raced across the goal line. Harvey placekicked the point.

Oklahoma Aggies Tie S. Methodists

Dallas, Tex., Oct. 21 (AP).—The Oklahoma Aggies surprised Southern Methodist, of Dallas, by battling to a 7-7 tie here today in a football game played at the Texas State Fair.

Diminutive Robert Wilson caught an Aggie punt on his own 22-yard line and sprinted 78 yards through the Missouri Valley team to open the scoring for S. M. U. in the second period. Briggs added the extra point from placement.

Recovery of a fumbled punt on the S. M. U. 32-yard line paved the way for the Aggie score in the third period, which Rosett made after a 27-yard jaunt. Weber kicked the point from placement.

Wash. State Ties California, 6 to 6

Rodgers Field, Pullman, Wash., Oct. 21 (AP).—Aided by the mighty passing arm of Phil Sorboe, their quarter back, Washington State's Cougars outplayed California's Bears in their conference football game here today, but lacked the drive to give them more than a 6-to-6 tie score.

Thus was upheld Washington State's tradition of never having been beaten on the home field since Coach O. E. Hollingberry took charge in 1926. More than 16,000 spectators, including Washington's governor, Clarence D. Martin, howled themselves hoarse.

Rated as the underdogs, the Cougars opened their sensational passing drive in the first quarter.

Fordham Routs Boston With 32-6 Score

25,000 at Polo Grounds See Tables Turned on Bay State.

NEW YORK, Oct. 21 (U.P.).—Fordham's mighty football machine rolled into the front ranks of Eastern championship contenders today when it hammered out a 32-6 victory over Boston College at the Polo Grounds before 25,000.

Fordham, smarting under a 3-0 defeat at the hands of Boston a year ago, was held to a 6-6 tie during the first half but rallied in the last quarters.

Coach Jimmy Crowley used his first string outfit for three periods and then threw in reserves in the final quarter. The reserves assured victory for the New York eleven by shoving over three rapid-fire touchdowns.

Sarusaky scored first, diving over the goal from Boston's 2-foot stripe in the first period. Boston tallied at the beginning of the second quarter when Freitas passed to Maloney for a touchdown.

Maniaci went over for Fordham in the third from in close after the Rams had punted deeply into opposition territory. Fordham's final quarter march started with Danowski going through center for a score. Bill Curran then made another on a 17-yard run and intercepted a pass that put Pavlicovic in position for a goal.

G. W. Trounces Auburn by 19 to 6

ward wall, boring through to the 30-yard mark. McCarver dropped back and flipped a pass to Bill Parrish for 15-yards, bringing the ball to Auburn's 15-yard line, where the attack again was directed at the line. But three stabs at the line and an attempted pass were fruitless and the visitors took the ball on downs.

Johnny Baker attached himself to one of Phipps' passes early in the second period and ran it back to Auburn's 45-yard line where G. W. took up the cudgel that battered the enemy into defeat. Don Bomba rammed through to the 34-yard line and a first down in two tries, and on the next play—a reverse—Baker slid through a hole at right tackle, reversed his field, and ran the remaining distance to the goal line. He added the extra point with a placement, presenting G. W. with a 7-6 lead, a lead that gradually stretched into a decisive victory.

Scoreless Third Period.

A scoreless third quarter served only to increase G. W.'s determination and aggressiveness. An exchange of kicks gave Auburn possession of the ball on its own 11-yard line, where "Ozie" Wary and Bomba gathered in Phipps' fumble. Bomba and McCarver shared ball carrying duties as the Colonials drove toward the final chalk-mark. Auburn braced and thrust back McCaver's plunge on the fourth down inches from goal. But the local team was benefited by one of the few breaks of the game and won a first down. Bomba made good on the next try at right tackle.

Auburn made a feeble attempt to regain the lost ground and its shattered reputation as the game gradually slipped away, but its efforts were futile in the face of the Buff and Blue's ferocious play. "Zuzu" Stewart, Bill Clark, and Boyd Hickman turned back play after play as the Bengals sought in vain to puncture the line. Frustrated in this plan of battle, Auburn made one last attempt to advance on passes, but, when they were either batted down or intercepted, the Southerners seemed to lose hope.

Colonials Score Again.

The Colonials' third and final scoring drive was inaugurated following an exchange of kicks midway in the final period. Standing deep in his own territory Rogers kicked out to Leemans, who got back to Auburn's 47-yard line before tackled. McCarver burst through tackle for a first down on the 35-yard line and Leemans followed him through the same hole for similar gain and another first down on the 20-yard mark.

Auburn repulsed one thrust into its line before Leemans gathered in the pigskin and hustled around end to the 5-yard line, from where it was comparatively easy for McCarver to punch it over. The game ended shortly after with Auburn in possession of the ball on its own 45-yard line, still vainly trying to locate a weak spot in the G. W. line.

Trojans Tied by Oregon State, Ending String of 25 Victories

MULTNOMAH CIVIC STADIUM, Portland, Ore., Oct. 21 (AP).—A battling band of Beavers from Oregon State College today achieved a startling upset by holding the University of Southern California football team to a scoreless tie and ending a string of 25 successive victories which had been run up by the Trojans.

A shouting crowd of 20,000 saw the Beavers turn back the best the Trojans could offer in the Pacific Coast Conference game without making a single substitution.

The eleven Orangemen to start were the eleven Orangemen to finish, each with 60 full minutes of play to his credit.

Beaver Forwards Good.

Although the Trojans were on the offensive most of the time after the first period, the Beaver forward wall was waiting and ready. Its back field was alert and punishing. Time after time the respected Warburton, slippery quarter back for the Southerners, was stopped for no gain or thrown for a loss.

Early in the third quarter Probst, Trojan full back, smashed through center and dodged his way 27 yards to the Oregon State 23 for the longest run of the game. That drive was halted however, when Franklin, Oregon State's sensational left half, intercepted Clark's pass on the goal line and ran it out to his own 13.

The red-headed half, Norman Franklin, time after time put Oregon State out of danger by booting long spiraling punts out of bounds or returning the Trojan kicks for consistent gains.

Oregon State's most sustained drive toward scoring territory came late in the third quarter after Franklin intercepted a pass on his own 40-yard line and zig zagged down the side line through half the Trojan aggregation to the Troy 37, where he was run out of bounds.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 21 (AP).—Pennsylvania's untried football array outplayed Dartmouth through every period but the last of their thirteenth annual gridiron struggle before 40,000 fans on Franklin Field today, but games are won on scores and the team from the hills of Hanover ran off with the victory, 14-7.

It will be hard to convince loyal followers of the Red and Blue that the game should not at least have ended in a tie, however, as Penn first was awarded a touchdown and then had it taken away from them in the third period when John Pennypacker grabbed a "dead" ball and ran 47 yards across the Green goal.

Decision Changed.

The officials first ruled that Penn had scored and the ball was placed on Dartmouth's 2-yard line for the try for point but they then decided that the ball was "dead" when Wilbur Powers, Green back, touched Bill Shanahan's crazily bounding punt near mid-field and gave it to Penn on the 27-yard line, where they said Pennypacker had "recovered" it.

The decision—which appeared to be wrong, at least, as to the point of "recovery"—brought a gust of boos from the crowd, which were renewed when Penn lost the ball a few minutes later, and with it lost what turned out to be its last chance to score.

Dartmouth had just tied the score four plays before when big Moe Frankel, sub Green guard, recovered Don Kellett's fumble on a punt on Penn's 22, and little George Stangle skipped around the Red and Blue end for 17 yards and a score that matched the touchdown Ed Lewis had scored for Penn on an 8-yard sweep around end in the second period.

Stangle Runs Again.

The decision appeared to demoralize Penn, as the Hanoverians suddenly came to life with a hard-hitting, devastating attack. The play was in Red and Blue territory through the rest of the game, and late in the fourth quarter the same black-haired little Stangle scampered 30 yards for the winning score with a deftly thrown pass from John Dechert, the Green full back, clutched tightly in his arms.

Kellett, spearhead of the Penn attack all afternoon and a fine defensive player with his deftly placed punts, went back into the line-up in an attempt to swing the tide of battle, but Dartmouth was not to be denied and threatened to score twice more before the final whistle.

Texas Aggies Beaten By Christians, 13 to 7

Fort Worth, Tex., Oct. 21 (AP). Texas Christian University defeated the Texas A. and M. Aggies, 13 to 7, in a crucial Southwest Football Conference championship game today.

The Aggies, making their 1933 conference debut, were favored. It was Texas Christian's first conference win in two starts and the victory reestablished the Frogs as contenders to repeat as champions of the conference.

One thing the Aggies did accomplish. They scored on the Frogs for the first time in play between the teams since 1929.

NEW HAVEN, Oct. 21 (AP).—In a struggle featured by brilliant offensive football and flavored by numerous long, extended marches goalward by both elevens, the Yale Bulldogs trimmed their old rival, the Brown Bear, by 14 to 6 before an audience of 24,000 in the Yale Bowl today.

Capt. Bob Lassiter, long-legged Eli half back and captain, scored both of Yale's touchdowns, the first on an 8-yard sprint around end after a 51-yard drive in the initial period; the second on a 2-yard dive through the center of the Brown line in the third after he and the other scampering Yale backs had twisted and squirmed their way 67 yards to put the ball in scoring position.

Brown Comes Back.

Brown, coming back like a champion in the third period, made two desperate attempts to cross Yale's goal, once piling up on the 1-foot line, before Harold Walker fought his way across from the 7-yard line to score in the final quarter. The touchdown climaxed a march of 40 yards.

Clare Curtin left his tackle post to place kick extra points after both Eli touchdowns, while Etchings' attempt to convert for Brown went wide of the posts. By winning today, the Yale avenged a 7-to-2 defeat administered by the Bear a year ago and served notice they "belong" in the select circle of Eastern elevens.

Although Brown, after being hopelessly behind, put on a fine exhibition of fireworks in the second half, it was the Bulldogs who had the punch where it counted. Their offense, revolving around Lassiter and Stanley Fuller, was both polished and powerful when it seemed in the mood to go places.

March Down Field.

The tip-off came almost the first time Coach Root's boys got the ball. Running every play from a shift formation, the Bulldogs ripped Brown's line apart in a mad dash down the field that barely fell short of a touchdown. When Brown kicked out to midfield, Lassiter and his mates did it all over again, and this time they didn't fail.

After that, Root, apparently satisfied, jerked his first string back field and never again let it function as a unit, although Lassiter, Fuller and Gallen went back for another fling now and then. The Bulldogs' quarter back, Walter Marting, was injured in the second period and did not return.

Walker, the sophomore, stood out in Brown's determined effort to come back in the second half.

Iowa State Victim Of Oklahoma Rally

Norman, Okla., Oct. 21 (AP).—A hard-tackling Oklahoma eleven rallied from an impending defeat in a fourth quarter offensive to score two touchdowns and win its first Big Six Conference game from Iowa State, 19 to 7, here today.

A series of fumbles threatened to nullify many of the Sooners' promising drives. A fumbled punt in the second quarter was recovered by Iowa State on the Sooner 4-yard line and the Cyclones took the ball over for the first touchdown of the game.

Cash Gentry and Bob Dunlap led Oklahoma to victory after Iowa State was boasting a 7-6 lead at the end of the third quarter. Two blocked punts by Gentry, aided by Coker, put Oklahoma in position to score in the final period.

Colgate Fights Hard to Beat N.Y.U., 7-0

Barely Able to Hold Foes After Aerial Goal in Second.

NEW YORK, Oct. 21 (AP).—The Red and White Colgate football team was hard pressed today to defeat a fighting New York University team, 7 to 0, before 25,000 spectators at the Yankee Stadium.

Hampered by a loss of 110 yards in penalties—5 of them 15 yards each for unnecessary roughness—Coach Andy Kerr's cohorts struggled desperately during the final half to preserve the margin of victory produced by End Joe Bogdanski, who scored a touchdown on a short forward pass in the second quarter.

Punting Saved Day.

It was Fritts' educated right foot that pulled Colgate out of many tight spots close to her goal line after being pushed back by penalties. Frits punted 14 times, averaging 38 yards.

Colgate's two-year boast of no team being able to cross its goal line seemed headed for the scrap heap several times during the game. In the first period, the Kerrmen found themselves on their 2-yard line, after an exchange of kicks and a 15-yard penalty. But Fritts booted the ball out of danger.

Colgate recovered the ball several minutes later in midfield from where Quarter Back Charlie Soleau, also of Montclair, started his team on a touchdown march. He skittered around right end for a short gain and then caught a pass from Fritts and galloped 15 yards before he was downed On the next play Boglanski caught a short pass over the center of the line, and with six teammates clearing the way, ran 12 yards for a touchdown. Lyon kicked for the extra point.

G. U. 20-0 Loser To Western Md.

Hilltoppers' line held under the threat, smearing McNally for a 1-yard loss on the 9-yard line to gain possession of the pigskin on downs.

Hoya Rally Checked.

The fourth quarter started with Shepherd viewing the proceedings from the bench. After a session of ineffectual play in midfield, Georgetown suddenly launched a man-sized attack when Viskovich passed 25 yards to Chappa to bring the ball to the enemy's 45-yard line for the Hilltoppers' second first down. The Hoyas were unable to complete the rally they had started, however, and the ball returned to the Terrors on an intercepted pass by Ferguson, who ran it back to the 12-yard line. The Green and Gold eleven bucked the line to the 7-yard marker, and Shepherd fulfilled the purpose for which he had been put back in the game by wiggling through for the final touchdown. He scored from placement on this, his third attempt, bringing the score to the ultimate 20-0 proportions. Georgetown scored 6 first downs to 10 for Western Maryland. Four of the Hilltoppers' downs were scored in the final period.

Bucknell Adds Up 21-0 on Lafayette

Runs Roughshod All Over Mild Eastonians.

Easton, Pa., Oct. 21 (U.P.).—A powerful Bucknell University football team ran roughshod, 21-0, over the LaFayette College eleven today before 8,000 spectators.

Bucknell was stronger than the score indicates. The Eastonians showed some offense only during the first few minutes of the game by making three first downs to reach Bucknell's 25-yard line.

Joe Reznichak, Bucknell's left half back, was the star of the game. He ran 27 yards for the first touchdown, scored the second touchdown, and in the final period ran 63 yards to put the ball on the 1-yard line from where Peters scored.

District Golfwomen to Compete This Week for Washington Post Trophy

93 Will Seek 32 Places In Event

Medal Play, With Handicap, Is Scheduled for Tomorrow.

Match Play Rounds to Start Tuesday Over Columbia Course.

CAN a high-handicap golfer beat a low-handicap player in a match play with handicap tournament?

This question will be decided at the Columbia Country Club course this week, starting tomorrow with a field of 93 women from ten District clubs competing in a match play with handicap tournament for The Washington Post Trophy.

A qualifying round—medal play with handicaps—will be held tomorrow morning to determine the 32 low net scorers who will fight it out for the championship in the match play with stroke-allowance rounds, beginning Tuesday. One match each day for five days will be played, with the 18-hole finals scheduled for next Saturday.

Handicap Limit Is 18.

While the handicap limit is 18, any number of District women with higher club ratings have boldly consented to accept the limit, hoping that a good medal score might enable them to make the grade.

In order to encourage those who fail in their first round matches, the tournament committee has decided to place the defeated 16 in a consolidation flight, with a special prize to go to the winner. The winner of the championship flight, in addition to claiming possession of the beautiful Post Trophy for one year, also will take home a replica of it.

The pairings and starting times released by the tournament committee consisting of Mrs. W. F. Holtzman, Mrs. H. R. Quinter and Mrs. Douglas Tschiffely show that virtually every prominent woman golfer in the District is entered.

Mrs. J. Marvin Haynes, of Columbia, entered yesterday. She has the honor of being the lowest handicap player in the field. Her rating is one, meaning that if she opposes a golfer with an 18 handicap, she will have to give away many strokes.

Mrs. David Clarke, of Army and Navy, ranks next to Mrs. Haynes, having a 3 handicap. Mrs. Clarke is paired with Mrs. L. O. Cameron and Mrs. Y. E. Booker, both of Chevy Chase at 9:50, while Mrs. Haynes plays with Mrs. John C Shorey, of Kenwood and Mrs. H. J. Simons, of Manor, at 10 o'clock,, Mrs. Alma von Steiner, Mrs. J. F. Dowdall, of Congressional and Mrs. H. King Cornwell, of Columbia, will tee off at 10:05.

The women have been paired in threesomes, at five-minute intervals. Pairings and starting times follow:

Bridgewater Wins, 8-0, Over Gallaudet

Touchdown and Safety in Second Quarter Give Visitors Edge.

BRIDGEWATER COLLEGE scored a touchdown and a safety in the second quarter of its game with Gallaudet yesterday on the Kendall Greeners' field, winning, 8 to 0.

Capt. Thompson, Bridgewater right tackle, blocked Tucker's kick a few minutes after the start of the second quarter, the ball bounding over the goal line, where Tucker pounced on the oval for a safety.

Around the middle of the same session, King, Bridgewater right half back, knifed his way through center from the 3-yard line for a touchdown, following a concerted drive from the 40-yard line. The scoring march was led by Derr, full back, ably aided by King. During the course of this drive, Derr reeled off an 18-yard run that put the ball on the 5-yard line. On fourth down, King made the touchdown.

Gallaudet made a game bid to score in the third quarter. Hoffmeister, full back, bombed the air with passes, most of which were caught by G. Brown, right end. The home team got as far as the 20-yard line, where Bridgewater's line braced and held for downs. That was the closest Gallaudet got to the visitor's goal line.

Bridgewater made 11 first downs to Gallaudet's 5.

Junior Class Triumphs In Central Swim Meet

The juniors, with a total of 42 points, triumphed in the interclass swimming meet sponsored by the Parent-Teachers Association at Central High School yesterday. With 22½ points, the sophomores emerged second. The seniors tallied 8½, and the freshmen failed to win a point La Salle, of the juniors, was the high scorer, with first places in the 50-yard and 100-yard swims.

Results:

Eagle on 525-Yd. Hole.

An eagle 3 on the longest hole on the Indian Spring course, the 525-yard sixteenth, was the feat yesterday of George Diffenbaugh, professional, while playing in a foursome with Arthur Urban, Capt. K. J. Fielder, and Maj. R. K. Sutherland. Diffenbaugh holed out his niblick approach on this hole from 75 yards. Eagles are rare on the sixteenth.

18 Years' Experience as Showman Has Covered Many Fields.

IN this corner' we have James Erwin, boxer, promoter, manager and wearer of the most flamboyant shirts, ties and suits this side of Hollywood.

For 18 years Erwin has resorted to many means and many businesses, but always with the same basic idea—to make money by coaxing cash customers through the turnstiles. He started as a boxer, but soon we find him promoting boxing, wrestling, automobile racing, bull fights, cock fights, wild west rodeos and field meets, acting as manager for numerous prizefighters—and a troupe of Russian Cossacks.

His experience on the receiving end of the punch exchange was brief and to the point. The end came when he was matched with one James Clabby, then a leading contender for the middleweight title. Clabby did not show up. Having time to consider the matter, Erwin decided he would do better in the more sedentary role of manager, so he abandoned active participation in the nose-remodeling industry. He has always wanted to meet Clabby—to thank him for not showing up.

Helped Chase Villa.

Erwin enlisted in the Punitive Expeditionary Force and helped Gen. Pershing chase Pancho Villa around Mexico. Came the war and Erwin decided he would be much happier riding than trudging along under a 75-pound napsack—so he enlisted in the cavalry, where his promotorial ability earned him sergeant's brevets.

After the war, he promoted boxing at Fort Bliss, Tex., and then drifted into Old Mexico, where he assumed command of the bull ring. Boxing was very well received there, so much so, in fact, that during one of the inevitable revolutions both sides suspended hostilities to attend one of the Erwin cards practically en masse. Pancho Villa, who was heading one side of the revolution, became an admirer of boxing and a friend of Erwin's. Erwin found the swarthy guerrilla a nice sort of person—at a prizefight.

Erwin had a Mexican partner, whose interests lay in promoting bull fights in the "Corrida de Toros." Because of the difficulty in getting the better matadors to appear there and the high price of good fighting bulls, this end of the business was not prospering. Erwin decided to give his struggling partner a hand in an effort to take the bull fighting out of the red.

Providence Steps In.

Providence in the person of a stranded circus, provided the means—two mangy lions which were purchased for $200. For 60 pesos the promoters bought a bull. Then the world was acquainted with the startling news that, under the auspices of James Erwin and Marcello Andujo, a ferocious, man-eating lion—King of the Jungle, would battle unto death a pawing, snorting, vicious bull.

Great was the hullaballoo that greeted the news in El Paso, just across the Rio Grande. Reformers ranted and raved. Buckets of tears were shed over the impending fate of the poor bull. But to no avail. The show went on, before a packed arena and with $4,500 in the box office.

The King of Beasts sprang into action and for 20 minutes of the 35-minute contest it was all lion. Then the feline tired, and it became all bull. To protect their investment, the promoters stopped the contest. The sport was so successful that Erwin and Andujo soon developed a flourishing business renting out their two $200 lions to bull ring promoters throughout Mexico—at $200 a day.

Toured With Langford.

The call of the road pulled Erwin away from Jaurez and for four years he toured with Sam Langford, the great Boston Tar Baby. When Langford finally became too old to fight, Erwin started promoting automobile races on the smaller dirt tracks. From that he went back to Mexico as manager of the Col. Klus troupe of Russian Cossacks. The Escobar revolution drove the Cossacks to South America and Erwin back to this country, where he once again entered the boxing game as a manager.

His stable of fighters has grown to large proportions and includes, among others, Pete Sarron, Les Kennedy, Billy Jones and Corn Griffin.

Howard Rally Beats Virginia State, 20-2

Ware, Back Field Ace, Is Leader in Onslaught of Bison Eleven.

"SHOWBOAT" WARE, Bison back field ace, thrown into the line-up in the second period, electrified his teammates in the university stadium yesterday as he rambled all over the lot and rallied them to defeat Virginia State's Petersburg Trojans, 20-2.

The Virginians' 2 points loomed large at the half, as they led by this narrow margin and luck broke against the Bisons. They started the scoring at the outset, when a bad pass to McDaniel from center was recovered, but McDaniel was thrown by Lewis for a safety.

Howard's initial scoring got under way when Sutler intercepted Courtney's long pass in the third quarter and carried it 20 yards to the Bison 30-yard line, and Holloman, Sewell and Sutler began a march up the field.

Sutler Scores on Pass.

The Bisons reached the midway point for fourth down, when Holloman slammed a straight-line 35-yard pass to Sutler, who took it over his shoulder left-handed going away and galloped 15 yards for the touchdown. Sewell made the extra point.

From State's 43-yard line Howard started its second drive in the final period, Ware ripping off 15 and 25 yards at a clip off tackle. Sewell, with a 25-yard plunge through center, placed the ball within 3 yards of the goal line, and Ware, on successive plunges, scored again, Sewell adding the point for a count of 14-2.

When Courtney kicked to Sutler, who fumbled and recovered the ball in midfield, Sewell followed with a broken field run to State's 200-yard line that might have been a touchdown had he not left his interference. Courtney, giant Virginia back, the only man between him and the goal, was knocked unconscious when Holloman hit him.

Sewell Scores Near End.

Not to be denied, with the aid of Sutler and Ware, the ball was carried over on repeated off tackle plays and Sewell scored the final count with one minute to go. Sutler failed in the try for the extra point.

Tigers Swamp Columbia by 20-0 Score

35,000 Watch Princeton Sophomores Run Wild Against Lions.

The sophs, of whom there were half a dozen in the line-up at almost any given time, made very good indeed.

They brought the 30,000 customers up hollering in great excitement when they scored a touchdown on the sixth play of the game and they presently gave convincing proof that this was no fluke by dealing out a very robust shoving-around to a fairly respectable party of boys who rank as one of the good major league teams of the East.

The first touchdown was facilitated to some extent by a fumble on the part of Sam Maniaci, the Columbia full back, who took the kick off close to his goal and was galloping back at a brisk rate when a couple of the Princeton coincidences hit him so hard that the ball popped out of his arms. There or four Princeton boys ganged the ball as it tried to bounce a bit and Gil Lea, one of the ends and one of the few elders on the team above the rank of sophomore, was given credit for the recovery.

Lea Grabs a Pass.

The Sophs et al. gained only 5 yards on the next three plays, but, on fourth down, Lea came loping across from right end and fielded a pass for himself right out of the hands of Cliff Montgomery, the Columbia captain. He was deterred at the 7-yard line. On the next play, Sophomore Gil Spofford went through Columbia's left tackle for the touchdown after which Henry Nelson, a tackle and another non-soph, missed the placement for the extra point.

A little while later, Sophomore Garry Le Van, the Red Grange and Red Cagle of this precocious lot, came into the game at left half, relieving Sophomore Leslie Kaufman and began to strut the stylish talents for which he had begun to be famous so early in his career on the basis of his doings against Amherst and Wlilams.

This troublesome coincidence, an agile, well-built football type, intercepted a pass and returned a punt 20 yards in the next few minutes and quite presently was discovered slinking down the left side line on a 60-yard run to Princeton's second touchdown. He had caught another punt and, with other sophomores to make themselves a bother to the Columbia boys who would have put hands to him, away he went, ignoring all that which it would be a bit of flattery to describe as the opposition. At the 10-yard line, it looked as though he might be interrupted when Cliff Montgomery, the Columbia captain, quarter back and particular star, came at him with his arms yearning and his face full of determination, tinged with a trace of woe. But Le Van fetched a sinuous wiggle of his hips and faded around Montgomery to cross the line in unhurried nonchalance.

Constable Helps Cause.

Sophomore Pepper Constable, another back, was coinciding very vigorously too, in the Princeton antics and had much to do with the arrival of the ball at Columbia's 12-yard line for a first down, early in the second period. In fact, he took the ball over the goal on a lateral pass in the series of incidents just ensuing, but the play was disallowed and Columbia got the ball on downs.

But they would not stay away from the goal. Pretty soon Le Van intercepted another pass, returning five yards to Columbia's 40-yard line and Constable walked through a gap in the line, provided by some sophomores up there, until his side had another first down 12 yards from the goal. They gained only two yards in three plays, including a grounded pass, and it looked as though the old grads might have to send to some kindergarten for some shock troops to put it over when Le Van tossed the ball to Fairman on fourth down and he caught same, one foot from the goal. This Fairman is a senior and, how he happened to make the sophomore team, is a matter on which I have no data. However, it was Levan class of '36, who bored center for the touchdown on the next play. John kicked the goal for the final score.

The roster of the Princeton team showed 27 members of the class of '36, or coincidental sophs, who just by the wildest chance happened to come to Princeton when Fritz Crysler took over the football recovery program and 28 members of the junior and senior classes. Among these 27 sophomores, showing the fine breaks of fortune that some coaches have, there are ten or eleven who were captains on their prep school teams.

And there are those who say Mr. Crysler has not even begun to show his hand as yet, but will save some for the Navy and the grand slam for Yale-rah in November. They had pleasant, cool weather and a dry field.

Former Golf Kings In Kenwood Event

Farrell, Armour, Burke, MacFarlane Entered.

Four former national open golf champions were among those who sent in their entries yesterday for the $2,000 National Capital open, scheduled November 11-12 at the Kenwood Golf and Country Club course.

Billy Petrolle Wins.

New York, Oct. 21 (AP).—Billy Petrolle, veteran Fargo (N. Dak.) welterweight, easily outpointed Sammy Fuller, of Boston, in a 10-round scrap at Ridgewood Grove tonight. Fuller went down for nine counts in the second round and again in the seveth. Petrolle weighed 142¼, Fuller 140.

Navy 13-7 Victor Over Virginia U.

ter, but Virginia was not to be denied. Getting the ball on the 30-yard line, Munger made a beautiful pass to Morton, who caught the ball on Navy's 20-yard line and sprinted the rest of the way to a touchdown. Harris place-kicked the point. This drew Navy's fire. Willcox made his 25-yard dash after taking a punt from Munger. He was downed on Virginia's 35. With Clark and Chung-Hoon doing most of the ball toting, Navy advanced to Virginia's 5-yard stripe, from which point Walkup went over. Larson, substitute full back, went in and kicked the point for Navy and the teams were deadlocked at 7-all.

The teams fought with even greater desperation in opening the second half. Neither developed a serious threat until the third quarter, though an outstanding feature was a 50-yard dash by Bill Clark, full back, who broke off Virginia's left side and was not brought down until he reached the enemy's 40-yard line. But Virginia recovered on downs after Baumberger was thrown for a 10-yard loss. Going into the final period both teams made frequent substitutions and resorted to passing and punting, seemingly with the purpose of getting a break, and the fates decreed that the break should go the way of the Navy. Play moved up and down the field.

Virginia Threatens.

Virginia made the most serious threat by rushing. Mixing a series of passes with spinners and off-tackle bucks, the Cavaliers drove from midfield to Navy's 22. The Navy was plainly uneasy and the 1,500 Midshipmen in the stands were on their feet calling on their mates to "hold 'em."

But came the fatal pass from Munger that sent Virginia's hopes glimmering. Leys, Cavalier end, went scurrying after the ball, but Baumberger, of Navy, beat him to it, and was off on his thrilling swivel-hipped dash previously referred to.

With five minutes more to play, the Cavaliers made a desperate effort to recoup by calling on their back field resources and filling the air with passes, but this time the Tars were playing alert football and the Virginians were doomed.

"Overgolfing" Causes Sudden Collapse in Games of Several District Stars; Houghton, Nee, Pitt, Peacock Among Those Failing in Tourneys.

By Dave Herman.

IT is no secret that several District players were victims of a dose of "overgolfing" that caused inertia in their games in one big tournament or another this season. It is no secret that these same gentlemen have vowed once and for all never to make the same mistake again.

Overgolfing is something every capable tournament player seeks to prevent. However, the lure of the game is such that few pass up a string of matches and tournaments that lead up to a more important event.

During the past campaign we had a number of striking examples that brought out the glaring evils of overgolfing. I have in mind the cases of Al Houghton, Roger Peacock, Harry Pitt and Maury Nee, by way of mentioning a few.

Within a period of one year Houghton, professional at the Kenwood course, skyrocketed his way to national prominence, but unfortunately he failed to qualify for this year's blue ribbon professional event—the national open. Houghton admitted after his ghastly showing in the sectional trials at Manor last May that he was "stale" and attributed his downfall to a case of overgolfing.

A Sad, Sad Story.

It was just too bad that such a fine shotmaker should fall by the wayside after he had groomed himself for months for this 36-hole test where only five qualifying places were open. It is a sad, sad story, when one considers that he missed being an automatic qualifier by one shot as a result of his splendid play in the 1932 national open.

But Houghton appeared worn out after 36 holes that day of the open trials at Manor. He had to struggle for every shot, and he gave, as I recall, one of his worst putting exhibitions.

The fact remains that Houghton had played too much golf preparatory to the tournament. It was a sweepstakes here, sweepstakes there, a round in the morning, a round in the afternoon. So, by the time he hit the sectional trials he was pretty well worn out.

Houghton instantly realized his mistake and mapped out a different training procedure for future tournaments. We need not go into detail as to the remarkable success he has enjoyed since his unexpected collapse in the open trials. He is today ranked among the 20 leading professionals in the country.

Exhibitions Costly.

After two months of active campaigning in invitation tournaments, during which they distinguished themselves by winning either the championship, the medal or emerging as runner-up for the title, Harry Pitt and Maury Nee concocted the idea of playing exhibition matches. This, they decided, would be just the thing to put them in tip-top shape for the Maryland State Amateur, the sectional trials for the National Amateur, the amateur proper and the District championship.

The exhibition schedule was quite ambitious, and even included a trip to Richmond, Va., for a match with Bobby Cruickshank and Billy Howell. Pitt and Nee played as many as two and three matches a week, in addition to the daily tours of their home courses.

Nee lasted as far as the quarter-finals of the Maryland event at Indian Spring, and Pitt, after holding a 4-up lead on Roger Peacock in the finals, cracked up badly, never regained his stride, and lost.

"Why bring this up?" Nee and Pitt will ask.

But August 8 at Columbia was a sad day in the lives of these two young men. Easy qualifiers the year before in the National Amateur and listed among the big favorites to land places again, Pitt and Nee came to a tragic finish. Apparently sluggish from tee to green, Pitt staggered around for something like 83—82, ten shots too many, and the more youthful Columbia golfer disgustingly picked up in the afternoon after a miserable 80 in the morning.

Neither golfer played in the District championship. Nee decided it was time to quit for the season, and hasn't touched a golf club since his disastrous showing at Columbia. The youngster is an all-around athlete at Georgetown Prep, and it is doubtful if he will play any golf until next spring, especially considering the way he feels now.

Pitt figured he was overgolfed. It was time he, too, took a rest. Pitt went up to the National Amateur at Cincinnati—in the role of a spectator. Harry didn't even defend his Manor Club championship.

The layoff has helped him. In the pro-amateur sweepstakes at his home course last week, Pitt, in his own, easy going manner, shot a subpar 70, displaying some of his old dash and fire.

After burning up course after course in the District, setting new records and falling heir to a couple of championships, Roger Peacock ran into a streak of wildness off the tee in the amateur championship at Cincinnati. Finishing five shots out of the charmed circle of 32, Peacock failed to show any of the brilliance that marked his play in previous tournaments.

Practiced Too Hard.

Peacock, his friends insist, made the mistake of playing too much golf, practicing too hard for such an important event. Anyhow, he showed a decided lack of coordination in his shots at Cincinnati, and also in the District championship a few days later, which he lost by a 1-stroke margin after the playoff with Dick Lunn.

When Roger is hitting his shots true to form, he is a veritable machine on the golf course. It is safe to say that next year the Indian Spring star will slow down his training pace while looking to important competition, such as the National Amateur and District.

We cite the cases of Houghton, Pitt, Nee and Peacock, just to illustrate how too much golf will wreck the games of the best players.

Everyone knows how hard Gene Sarazen trained for the defense of both his British and American Open crowns. Sarazen toured the country with Joe Kirkwood in a huge and handsome aerocar provided by Col. Henry L. Doherty. The exhibition matches may have brought in the money, and evoked widespread publicity, but probably cost Sarazen both of his major championships.

"There are two dangers in playing too much golf. Take the case of the golfer who plays in tournament after tournament, and plays his heart out week after week. By the time he strikes the big test he is worn out and suddenly loses his steadiness off the tee and his putting touch.

"On the other hand, we come across the golfer who knows he has a big tournament ahead and doesn't take his golf seriously until a few days before the event comes off. The danger here is that the golfer doesn't stress the importance of his shots, and by the time the tournament is on it is too late for him to overcome his errors and faults."

To avoid overtraining, Professional Treder gives the following advice:

"A golfer's training should be done ten days before a big tournament, He should devote seven days to earnest practicing, with emphasis placed on every department of the game—driving, approaching—especially the short game—and putting. Three days should be devoted to either light limbering up on the course or a complete rest."

Walter Fletcher Smith is Kenwood's new senior champion. He had to go 18 holes to defeat the affable S. S. Bond, 1 up in the finals, but Bond is out for revenge, and wants another match. By way of convincing himself he can shoot good golf, Bond scored a 41 on the second nine at Kenwood Thursday.

Middle Atlantic P. G. A. members will team up with senior golfers at Chevy Chase tomorrow in a pro-senior tournament. Gen. Robert H. Allen and Bob Barnett would make a grand team, as would Homer S. Pope and George Diffenbaugh, of Indian Spring.

Mixed Scotch foursomes will be the feature today at Congressional, Army and Navy, and Indian Spring. Next Saturday Indian Spring will be host to the District left-handed golf stars who will compete in the annual 36-hole championship. Byrne Curtis is the defending titleholder.

Although it measures only 391 yards, the third hole at Army and Navy is a tough one to play these days. If it's a dry day, it merely adds to the discomfort of the golfers. The green is narrow. In order to reach the green in two one must first traverse two menacing ditches. And you have to hit a good spoon some days to get home.

Dave Thomson, the little pro from Washington Golf and Country Club, has played but three rounds of golf in the last three months. Thomson, it seems, is devoting most of his time these days to manicuring the Cherrydale course, and his untiring efforts are beginning to show pleasing results.

Many members believe the course today is in better shape than during the spring. Which is a tribute to Mr. Dave Thomson, the good-natured Scot.

D.C. Planners Vote Revision Of Waterfront

Washington Channel Work Dooms Noisy Street to Modernization.

Water street, the Capital's picturesque clearing house for watermelons and fish, is doomed to modernization under plans approved yesterday by the National Capital Park and Planning Commission.

Improvement of the noisy thoroughfare was urged in connection with the projected expansion of Washington Channel. Plans acted upon yesterday call for improvement of the north side of the channel between the Army War College and railroad bridge. Such alteration would, among other things, permit accommodation of 300 pleasure boats and make the project self-liquidating.

Replacement of Water streets's cobblestones with pavement was recommended, providing public works funds are allotted.

The commission, concluding a two-day meeting presided over by Chairman Frederic A. Delano, approved plans for improvement of Washington-Hoover Airport and restoration of Francis Scott Key house. Recommended for further study were the proposed stadium-armory in East Capitol street and creation of a Tristate skyline parkway linking Washington with Shenandoah and Great Smoky National Parks.

Road Closing Sanctioned.

Three of the Arlington County board's five members, present with Assistant Secretary of Commerce Mitchell to discuss the airport problem, agreed to the closing of Military road. They stipulated, however, that a substitute highway should be provided by the airport. Harry A. Fellows, chairman of the board, attended with B. M. Smith and Mrs. Elizabeth N. Magruder.

As an immediate step to safeguard motorists using the road which separates Washington and Hoover fields, plans were discussed to establish signal lights. Traffic would be halted when planes crossed the highway at low altitudes.

The Public Works Administration will be asked for $25,000 to establish as a national shrine the home of Francis Scott Key, author of "The Star-Spangled Banner." The structure now is a store. Purchased by the Planning Commission, the land and property are in the jurisdiction of the National Parks office.

Building of a stadium and National Guard armory at the end of East Capitol street was considered favorable because it would be in keeping with the Government's reclamation of the Anacostia River "bad lands," in which the proposed site is located. Allotment of funds is pending.

Avenue Work Ignored.

Cooperation of architects, the Fine Arts Commission and property owners to beautify the north side of downtown Pennsylvania avenue, especially opposite the Triangle buildings, was suggested by Henry V. Hubbard, landscape architect and commission member. The Avenue Improvement program, sponsored by Soterios Nicholson, was referred to Mr. Hubbard Friday at the suggestion of Senator William H. King.

"It is evident," said the Harvard professor and landscape architect, "that the Government has neither the funds nor the intention to spend public money for actual construction of buildings on the north side of Pennsylvania avenue for the sake primarily of appearance."

He suggested that local architects make a sketch for treatment of the thoroughfare, with the advice of the Fine Arts Commission. Following this step, a voluntary association of persons owning adjoining land would be formed.

Scenic Route Studied.

Study of the proposed tri-State parkway in Virginia, North Carolina and Tennessee will cover the possibility of connecting it with the proposed George Washington Memorial Parkway between Washington and Great Falls. This would provide a scenic and historic route from Arlington Memorial Bridge to the Great Smokies via Front Royal, Skyland and the Blue Ridge.

John Nolen, jr., city planner, reported on the recent Baltimore meeting of Chesapeake Bay Authority, which was called to consider means of stopping pollution of the bay and tributaries.

At the November meeting Thomas S. Settle, secretary of the commission, will present drafts of bills seeking congressional legislation on alley dwelling elimination, property condemnation and creation of a Port of Washington Authority.

Ohio Man Pleads Guilty in Shooting

Held to Grand Jury Under $25,000 Bond.

Peter Saqulla, alias Joe Rose, Youngstown, Ohio, pleaded guilty to a charge of assault with a deadly weapon in Police Court yesterday, and was held to the grand jury under bond of $25,000 by Judge John P. McMahon.

Saqulla was arrested Tuesday by detectives after he had shot and wounded critically Antonio Alexander, 60, proprietor of a lunch room at 1106 Fifth street northeast. Alexander received a leg wound.

Washington FratChapter To Plan For Convention

Washington Graduate chapter of Phi Gamma Delta fraternity will be host at a convention here December 29 to January 1, it was announced yesterday by Cecil J. Wilkinson, executive secretary.

Convention plans will be made at a meeting of Washington chapter members Thursday in the Wardman Park.

Police Fume But Admit Little Can Be Done About Epidemic.

You can't keep a good skater down!

So Sixth Precinct police found after futile attempts to put a clamp on school student skaters in the Brightwood section. Yesterday, Capt. Joseph Morgan, precinct commander, modified his previous rulings to keep the kids and their rollers off the streets and to prevent an undue amount of skating on the sidewalks.

The trouble all started when a young girl skated into an Army officer's wife. The children then were told they could not skate to and from school.

Furthermore, police instructed even small children not to ride kiddie cars on the sidewalk, and thereby forcing them into the street in close contact with five-ton trucks. Neighbors of Vance Nessly, 3 years old, of 518 Concord avenue, who was forced off the sidewalk, were indignant.

Parents forthwith set up complaints, along with the children, and the police have altered their stand.

"I don't want to be hard on the kids," Capt. Morgan said, "but, when so many of them get out on the streets, some one generally gets hurt. If they aren't knocked down by automobiles, they skate into pedestrians."

Police Chief Brown issued a memorandum to all precinct commanders advising that certain streets be set aside for skating. He also demanded more rigid enforcement of the District regulations against skating.

Corporation Counsel William W. Bride and Traffic Director Van Duzer have been called upon to assist in solving the problem of what to do about Washington's skaters.

Privately, police admit that they intend to be "good fellows" whenever possible.

Court to Rule On Mayflower

Plea to Delay Hotel Sale Pending Rise in Realty Prices Up This Week.

Efforts of a group of persons holding more than $2,000,000 in second trust notes on the Mayflower Hotel to block foreclosure sale because of default in first trust payments, will come before Justice Jesse C. Adkins, District Supreme Court, this week.

The hotel, now being operated by three receivers, John Lewis Smith, J. Miller Kenyon and Rush L. Holland, was placed in receivership in July, 1931, when interests representing both the first and second trusts asked such action.

The Manufacturers Trust Co., of New York, trustee under the first trust, has now asked that a decree of foreclosure be entered to satisfy the claims of holders of $7,500,000 in first trust notes. The second trust amounts to $2,400,000.

Fears of second trust holders that a forced sale now probably would result in their being wiped out, prompted them to file a petition asking that the sale be postponed until the current real estate depression is ended, in the hope that a better price can be obtained.

Justice Adkins has decided to hold a hearing to determine if he has the power to grant a postponement of foreclosure.

Starlings!

Pests End Mass Flight Here; S O S Due Eagle.

Uncoded, unwanted, unwashed starlings have returned to Washington.

Like the avalanche of bills on the first of the month, the unbidden birds descended on Washington last night, well fed and noisily contented. After circling their yearly roosts in front of the District Building their mass flight ended and with it began winter's threat of disagreeable tenants.

Efforts in past years to rid the city of starlings went unheeded by the birds. The Washington Board of Trade, Greater National Capital Committee and civic associations discoursed sadly on the menace—all unavailing.

This year they may appeal to the Blue Eagle.

District Hits Printing Cut

Protests Budget Saving on Department Reports.

Another appeal from the edict of Budget Director Douglas, limiting to 250 pages the printed annual reports of the various District government departments, will be made by the District Commissioners.

The limit was arbitrarily fixed to save an estimated $2,500 in the next fiscal year, but District officials believe that the "paper" saving will prove more costly than printing more complete reports as has been done in the past. Printing of reports cost $5,645 last year.

Valuable statistical and detailed information must be left out of the reports under the Budget Bureau limitation, it is said. Some of the reports have a rather large, though special, distribution, and it has been suggested the information which can not be put into the limited general report be mimeographed for distribution.

Officials say they fear the cost of making individual answers to inquiries from many official and quasi-public sources will more than offset the estimated saving on printing.

The Public Utilities Commission and the Commissioner of Insurance are required by law to make annual public reports, and these have been excluded from the one-condensed-report ruling of the Budget Bureau.

New Water Line Finish Nears

D. C. Officials Will Attend Laying of Last Pipe Tomorrow.

The last section of a new water main will be laid on Illinois avenue at 2 p. m. tomorrow afternoon in the presence of the District engineer and other officials.

The pipe is of steel, 48 inches in diameter and 36 feet in length. It weighs six tons.

The 36-foot section will mark completion of the 7,000-foot 48-inch main running from Fifth and Upshur street northwest to Georgia avenue and Military road. The main is in three sections, one of the lined steel pipe, another of concrete and the third of cast iron.

Cast iron has been used almost exclusively for water mains in the District in the past.

Illinois Bank Holdup Suspect Taken Back

Zimmerman, Who Fooled Detectives 6 Months, Leaves Capital.

Manacled to a deputy sheriff, Frank Zimmerman yesterday began the trip back to Streeter, Ill., to face a charge of being one of a group that staged a daring robbery in which $58,000 was taken.

Zimmerman was arrested here in August, while working as the manager of an L street garage. The garage had been used by agents of the Department of Justice and also by members of a nationally known detective agency, who failed to recognize him for six months.

Zimmerman's attorneys, E. Russell Kelly and Charles Ford, obtained a writ of habeas corpus to prevent extradition, but the case was carried to the Court of Appeals.

Then Zimmerman unexpectedly agreed to go back. Five men who took part in the robbery are serving sentences.

U. S. Pay Cut Fourth, Union Head Charges

Babcock Says Dismissals Just Mean More Work to Divide.

Instead of a recognized 15 per cent, thousands of Federal workers suffered 40 per cent pay slashes, E. Claude Babcock, president of the American Federation of Government Employes, charged last night.

Babcock declared his office's survey of the effect of the economy act passed by the last Congress, showed the law "handcuffed" the Civil Service Commission and prevented countless merited salary increases.

He predicted the next Congress would restore the 15 per cent wage reduction, and repeal a section of the economy act preventing salary raises through reallocation of jobs, and to abolish furloughs.

"All we are asking," he said, "is payment of salaries on the basis of duties performed. We've had piles of telegrams from men who amount to something on the Hill promising us a fair deal."

Babcock explained his study divulged that in virtually every department when a man retires for age, is dismissed or resigns, his duties are absorbed by other workers, but no one receives any portion of his pay.

"A man in one of the Federal agencies quit a job paying $5,600," Babcock said. "His duties were taken over by two other men and a woman. Not a one of them got a penny more.

"That sort of practice has been so widespread the whole level of salaries has been reduced by 25 per cent in addition to the flat 15 per cent."

Four Seized Here By Liquor Raiders

Two Men, Woman Arrested in E Street Place.

Four persons were arrested as the liquor squad descended on two places here yesterday.

Ray Moore, alias Ray Greathouse, 29, mechanic; Mrs. Anna Helen Moore, 21, and John Byrods, 39, were arrested at 1005 E street southwest by Detectives Deyoe, McEwin, Williams and Schamp, who said they seized five gallons of liquor and a gaming machine at the place. The three were charged with illegal posession.

Detectives Deyoe and McEwen also arrested Jesse Nathaniel Hawkins, colored, 48, of 1255 Wylie street northeast, a laborer, at his home and charged him with illegal possession.

Miss Taylor Improves After Motor Collision

Jean Taylor, 1732 K street northwest, injured last Sunday in an automobile accident near Danville, Pa., was reported out of danger yesterday. She is in Geisinger Memorial Hospital there.

Miss Taylor, daughter of the late Dr. and Mrs. William Taylor, formerly of Laurel, Md., was one of six persons injured in a triple crash. The others, all less seriously hurt, are Antoinette Hardesty, Walter Hardesty and Mrs. Mary Hardesty, Lanham, Md.; W. A. Rice, Washington, and E. L. Buehler, Milwaukee.

Dr. L. B. Tuckerman Honored by Opticians

Dr. L. B. Tuckerman, principal physicist at the Bureau of Standards, was elected secretary of the Optical Society of America yesterday at Buck Hill Falls, Pa. The Frederick Ives medal for distinguished optical work for 1933 went to R. W. Wood, professor at Johns Hopkins University, Baltimore.

Miss Bridge

Couple in Auto Gets Ducking in Old C. & O. Canal.

A bridge that wasn't where they thought it was resulted in a ducking and a scare last night for Sylvester Grimm, colored, and Florence Webb, colored, when the car in which they were riding plunged into the old C. & O. canal at Potomac street, Georgetown, last night.

Attempting to find a bridge to cross the canal, the couple became lost and drove the car toward what they aparently thought was an approach to a crossing. The car went off the bank into 5 feet of water and disappeared, with exception of one hub cap. The couple crawled out and were waiting on the top of the car when the rescue squad arrived and brought them to shore. The woman was taken to Emergency Hospital.

Banks Under Receivers Get First U. S. Aid

Fleming Reveals Plans for Loans to Release Frozen Deposits.

First plans for handling problems of a certain classification of closed banks by the newly created Federal Deposit Liquidation Board were outlined yesterday by Robert V. Fleming, president of the Riggs National Bank and chairman of the deposit liquidation committee for the Fifth Federal Reserve District.

It is the board's purpose at present to assist only those National and State banks which have gone into receivership since January 1, 1933. Banks now being operated by conservators are not affected.

The board aims to facilitate liquidation so that depositors will not have to wait for payment on notes and other slow processes. Loans to be made by the board will be on sound assets and to date no limit has been set.

Two Banks May Qualify.

Although not stated officially, it is understood there are but one and possibly two local banks which theoretically would qualify for assistance from the board under its present limitations. These are the Commercial National Bank, closed February 28, and now in receivership, and Park Savings Bank, which while not licensed to reopen March 14, following the national banking holiday, was placed under a Treasury Department receivership July 13.

Mr. Fleming's committee for the Fifth Federal Reserve District will be composed of Julien H. Hill, president, State Planters Bank & Trust Co., Richmond, chairman for Virginia; Robert M. Hanes, president, Wachovia Bank & Trust Co., Winston-Salem, chairman for North Carolina; A. L. M. Wiggins, president, Bank of Hartsville, S. C.; chairman for South Carolina; C. M. Cohen, president, First Huntington National Bank, Huntington, W. Va., chairman for the portion of that State in the Fifth Federal Reserve District; Heyward E. Boyce, president, Maryland Trust Co., Baltimore, chairman for Maryland; H. G. Hoskinson, a vice president, Riggs National Bank, chairman for the District of Columbia.

The organization meeting of this committee will be held at the Riggs National Bank Tuesday morning. Following it, the State committees for the local Federal Reserve District, will be announced.

Program to Be Pushed.

Mr. Fleming said every effort will be made to further President Roosevelt's program for making available deposits in closed banks in the district with greatest possible speed.

Locally, the closed bank situation finds three classes of institutions to be dealt with. These are banks which have been closed since January 1, 1933, and are in receivership; banks operating under conservators, and banks which were in receivership prior to January 1, 1933.

In the last category are the Bank of Brightwood, North Capitol, International Exchange and Departmental, savings institutions, closed since July 1932.

In the middle group are the conservatorships dealing with unliquidated assets of seven banks, part of the assets of which have been transferred to the recently opened Hamilton National Bank.

Institutions Affected

These are Federal-American National Bank and Trust Co., District National Bank, Potomac Savings Bank, Washington Savings Bank, Northeast Savings Bank, Woodridge-Langdon Savings & Commercial Bank and Seventh Street Savings Bank.

Other banks under conservators are Franklin National Bank, which seeks an independent reopening; Industrial Savings Bank, which desires reopening as a national bank; Mount Vernon Savings Bank, which may join Washington Mechanics Savings Bank, and United States Savings Bank, reopening of which is now sought in the courts.

Bear Facts

Ickes Says U. S. Will Give Cubs to No One.

It's too bad, boys and girls, but your chances of getting a nice fat bear cub from Yosemite National Park for Christmas or your birthday are virtually nil, Secretary of the Interior Ickes said yesterday.

An erroneous report that anyone wanting a bear from the California park could have one for the asking brought a shower of requests.

One read: "I would like a bear cub very much, but I want to know how much the postage would be on it."

11 Will Handle Plan for Group Hospital Care

Solicitation Work Among District's Thousands to Start Later.

Establishment of a corporation to administer group hospitalization was placed yesterday in the hands of three business men, two hospital presidents, two doctors, a prominent Washington woman, a lawyer, a retired Army general and a former Government executive.

The first meeting will be called this week. Officers must be elected and articles of confederation and by-laws drawn before the real work begins, that of soliciting the Capital's thousands of workers to enroll as members.

Joseph H. Himes, president of Columbia Hospital and chairman of the now extinct committee on group hospitalization, is among the 11 incorporators announced yesterday.

Others are Henry P. Blair, attorney, and former president of the Board of Education; Herbert D. Brown, chief of the Bureau of Efficiency from 1915 until it was abolished several months ago; Walter B. Clarkson, vice president of the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co.; William S. Corby, president of Garfield Hospital; Mrs. Joshua Evans, jr., wife of the banker; Brig. Gen. Frank T. Hines, veterans' administrator; Mark Lansburgh, mercantile executive; Dr. Earl B. McKinley, dean of the George Washington University school of medicine; George H. O'Connor, business man and civic leader, and Dr. Charles Stanley White, prominent surgeon.

Mr. Himes said he will recommend designating incorporators as the directorate for the first year.

By-laws will be presented by the second conference, it is expected, and then the organization will launch a membership campaign.

The drive will not be allowed to interfere with the Community Chest campaign, Mr. Himes said. December 1 is the tentative date to start.

Plans approved by the original hospitalization committee, now superseded by the board of incorporators, provide 21 days of hospital care annually for 75 cents per month. Membership would be limited to employed adults. Nine local hospitals will cooperate.

Tool Theft Spurs Police Vigilance

Told to Watch Business Houses Having Safes.

Police last night were asked to watch all business places having safes.

The order was issued by Inspector Frank S. W. Burke after an electric drill and two acetylene torches were stolen from a garage in the Northeast section, near Rhode Island avenue.

Detectives believe expert cracksmen, may be contemplating a robbery.

Policeman Draws Rebuke for Arrest

Traffic Law Enforcement Too Strict, Says Judge.

A District policeman was rebuked by Judge Isaac Hitt in Police Court yesterday for too strict enforcement of traffic regulations.

Warren P. Horner, a runner for the Fidelity Building and Loan Association, 610 Thirteenth street northwest, was arraigned for having double-parked his automobile in front of 1427 H street northwest.

His case was dismissed.

Child Hit by Auto Reported Improved

Francis Harr, 17, injured October 6 when struck by an automobile, was reported "much improved" last night.

The boy is the son of Oliver L. Harr, proprietor of the One Cent Cafeteria, 623 Pennsylvania avenue northwest. He was knocked from his bicycle at Eleventh street and Massachusetts avenue northwest.

Driver, Once Convicted, Acquitted on Rehearing

Reason Farr, giving his address as 2001 I street northwest, Washington, was acquitted at a rehearing on charges of operating an automobile while under the influence of liquor yesterday before Arlington County Judge B. M. Hedrick.

Farr, arrested by county police September 27, was tried October 11 and found guilty. He was fined $100 and given a jail sentence of 30 days. He was represented in court yesterday by former State Senator Frank L. Ball.

Victim of Holdup Left In Rock Creek Park

Charles Jackson, colored, of 205 K street northwest, last night reported to police that he was held up by three men, forced into an automobile and robbed of $8.

The men drove him into Rock Creek Park, Jackson said, took the money and pushed him out on a darkened roadway.

Post Dwelling By Lightbowns Still Attracts

Cottage of English Type Viewed by More Than 1,500 Persons.

Rarely has an exhibit dwelling received such widespread acclaim as that now sponsored by The Washington Post at P street and Foxhall road northwest. More than 1,500 persons have visited this display house built by Cooper Lightbown & Son during the brief period of its presentation.

The home, one of an original group of six, is open for inspection daily from 9 o'clock in the morning until 9 o'clock in the evening. Three homes in this offering already have been sold.

The homes, of English cottage type, are located on a ridge which descends to the Potomac River Valley at the west, and at the east to the U. S. Government Foundry Branch Parkway. This location offers a quiet, suburban-like atmosphere, which is but 10 minutes from the White House.

The homes have a southern exposure and are set well back on terraced and landscaped lawns with a red brick retaining wall.

Front Elevations Described.

Front elevations have been given a varied but harmonious treatment with rich, red sand-finished colonial brick; sloping roof lines of vari-colored and sized slate, stained dormer windows framed in cypress, cream-colored stucco and quaint apple-green shutters. Heavy copper gutters, down spouts and flashings add to the beauty and permanence of the group.

Deep, inviting concrete porches with sturdy iron railings and heavy, rustic posts of Douglas fir offer a real opportunity for pleasant relaxation. Long "steamer deck" lines are used for the first time in porch design on this type.

The corner home has a special separate vestibule entrance, with large double-screened porches on the side of the house, entered through double French doors off the dining room and the upstairs bedroom.

Living rooms have been planned to give the maximum of wall space possible in a well-balanced room.

A log-burning fireplace is the central feature of this room. With a simple, dignified, colonial mantel; a 1-inch black slate facing and a hearth of red and brown shaded tile, this is most effective.

Oak floors have been hand scraped, machine buffed and given a special stainless treatment which preserves their beauty, with a little care, indefinitely.

Studio-Size Window.

A studio-size steel casement window facing the south floods this room with light and air. A heavy, brass stair rail with ornamental iron balustrades gives an unusual touch.

Woodwork is given a warm cream, satin finish. All interior doors are six-panel colonial, with glass knobs and brass fittings. Window shades are heavy washable piquet.

A delicately rounded arch connects the living room with the dining room, well proportioned and typically colonial in decorative treatment with chair rail. Attractive scenic and burlap effect wallpaper, concealed radiation and colonial designed pewter-finish fixtures complete the above rooms.

In the kitchen a cheerful flower and lattice design of washable Sanitas adorns the walls. Colorful "A" grade Armstrong's linoleum cemented down to felt covers the floor. A complete Oxford cabinet unit supplied ample cupboard room, drawer space and broom closet. The 6-foot double drainboard sink faces a wide steel casement, window with deep tile sill.

General Electric equipment is featured with a large G-E Monitor top refrigerator of most recent design with steel cabinet and porcelain finish. The G-E Hotpoint electric range is completely automatic and keeps the kitchen cool and clean.

An electric eventilating fan is used which will displace 800 cubic feet of air a minute—a joy in hot weather. Double electric plugs are placed in a handy location. A G.-E. electric clock is on the wall.

All electric equipment is handled by special power meter giving the consumer a low commercial cost rate.

Splendid Bedrooms Noted.

On the second floor are three splendid bedrooms. All with outside light and ventilation. Spacious closets are provided, fully equipped with shoe racks, clothes rods and extra shelves. Attractive colors and designs of wallpaper are used, with colonial brass ceiling fixtures and many electrical wall plugs. All celings are amply insulated from heat and cold.

Special attention has been given to detail in the bathroom of each home. All have built-in features. The basement entrance off the dining room contains a special clothes closet. A finished oak stairway descends to the recreation room. The basement laundry room is light and airy. The American Radiator Co.'s automatic gas furnace and hot-water storage heater take up little space.

For the last eight years the Foxhall Village section has been the center of activity for several Washington builders. Its success has been due to its limitation to a select class of purchasers, proximity to the downtown section and to a pleasing environment of parks, schools and estates.

Although some homes in this section cost $20,000, this group is priced from $7,650 to $9,450.

Cooper Lightbown, the builder, has had 16 years' experience in Florida construction.

To reach the homes, take the Foxhill Village bus, get off at Foxhall road and walk two blocks south to P street. They may also be reached by taking the Glen Echo street car to Foxhall road and walking one block north to P street.

Boss & Phelps Put 5 Bargains On Realty Mart

Beautiful Residences Set in Finest Suburban Sections.

A renewed desire for home ownership will receive a powerful stimulus today when five bargains are placed on the market by Boss & Phelps.

One, described as the most amazing offer ever presented in Edgemoor, Md., is a beautiful two-story structure at 5319 Moorland lane, on a lot 67 by 237 feet.

This is a built-to-order center-hall brick residence in the midst of large estates. It contains six charming rooms and den, two baths and insulated attic; is equipped with oil burner, brick garage and adorned with flower gardens and shrubbery.

It is two squares from transportation, school and stores and must be seen to be thoroughly appreciated, especially at the sale price, $10,950.

The house is in excellent condition and the offer should not be missed under any circumstances.

The second remarkable buy is at 411 Wilson lane. It is an exceptionally low-priced Dutch colonial house in Edgemoor, Md., situated on a fine lot, 75 by 150 feet.

Third at Chevy Chase.

This is an opportunity that a wise buyer is sure to take advantage of. It is a dainty dwelling for a small family that desires charming surroundings and space for gardening. This house is heated by gas and is entirely modern. Its sale price is $8,500 and easy terms can be arranged.

The third offering is a new home in Chevy Chase, Md., located at 4606 Nottingham drive, opposite the Wisconsin avenue side of the Chevy Chase Club grounds.

In this superb home, everything is found that lends to comfort, utility and contentment. It is an all-brick house, with steel casement windows and natural wood trim.

It contains two complete baths with shower, two fireplaces, one in its recreation room, an exceptionally fine kitchen with automatic refrigeration. There is a garage to match the dwelling in appearance.

This house of sound value is in an

Model Home, Opened by Post Today, Architectural Triumph

14-Room Place on 28th St. Combines Simplicity and Elegance.

Topping the fall season's presentations, The Washington Post announces its up-to-the-minute model home. Edw. H. Jones & Co., Inc., one of the foremost real estate firms of the city, are the presenters of this triumph in home construction.

It is located at 4517 Twenty-eighth street northwest, in the beautiful Forest Hills section. Erected by Carl I. Johnson, builder of outstanding reputation, it stands a structural masterpiece and delight for the thousands who will view it during the exhibition period.

Built from plans prepared by Harvey P. Baxter, noted architect, it will be open beginning today and daily from 10 a. m. until 9 p. m. until further notice.

English Farmhouse Type.

Of the charming English farmhouse type, it contains 14 rooms, including a large clubroom, and 5 baths.

This symphony in brick and stone, three stories in height, has received the approved rating of the Architects Advisory Council of the District of Columbia. Its elaborate grounds with sunken garden and pool accentuate its structural magnificence.

Matching its attractive exterior are its beautiful decorations. These include furnishings by Hutchison's, Inc.; rugs by Manoukian Bros., baby grand piano by Homer L. Kitt Co. and draperies by Thomas T. Johnson.

The home may be visited by driving out Connecticut avenue to Albemarle street; then turn right to Twenty-eighth street and and left to the home as indicated by the road signs.

Three-Car Garage.

The house, situated in the beginning of a fine residential development, is equipped with a three-car garage, two sections of which are under the structure and one at the side on a ground-floor level. The property adjoins the former Senator Gore and the O'Brien estates.

The large first-floor entrance is characterized by an electric Westminster chimes doorbell with a 24-tone range. There is also a convenient coat and cloak closet and a lavatory off the entrance hall.

Living Room Stately.

The living room at the right of the hall is beautified by a stately fireplace and alcove. Left of the dining room is a complete culinary section consisting of thoroughly equipped kitchen, butler's pantry and breakfast room. The kitchen is arranged conveniently with tiled sink, built-in cabinets and stove in an alcove.

The basement space is divided into garage, gardener's storage, laundry room, servant's toilet and lavatory. The subbasement contains the heating plant, oil burner, gas storage equipment, hot-water service, chauffeur's quarters and bath.

Predominant in this division is the immense clubroom, two stories in height. This wonderful room is 30 by 20 feet in dimensions and is furnished with open fireplace and decorated with ornamental ceiling and cornice and imported Swedish steel chandelier.

The second floor is apportioned into four large and well-ventilated bedrooms each with cedar-lined closets. Two have private baths, one with shower. There is a private bath for the master bedroom, which has a fireplace, and one for the guest room. There is another hall bathroom. Two large closets of entirely new arrangement add to the convenience of the prospective dwellers.

Storage Space Ample.

The third floor is wisely arranged for ample storage space. It has three rooms for general service purposes, two for storage and a complete bath.

The interior decorati by Mr. Johnson is tasteful and distinctive. The plan is exceptional. But a few of its many high lights may be recounted. For example, the hallway is in the popular scenic paper suitable to this type of house and its sylvan surroundings. Hallway

2 Sides Given On Ownership Of Dwellings

Expert Advises What to Do Before Investing in Homes.

By James S. Taylor,
(Chief, Division of Building and Housing, Bureau of Standards, Department of Commerce.)

The institution of home ownership has thrived in the United States in spite of many handicaps. Although not quite half of all families in this country now own their homes, many of those now renting will eventually become owners.

There are many different reasons that influence a family in deciding to own its home and they are of varying force for different families. Sometimes the matter is determined on a dollars-and-cents business basis, but in nearly every case the ideals and aspirations of the family for a high type of family life play an important role.

It is easy to claim too much for home ownership, and it is just as easy to "knock it" or to look at it from too narrow a point of view. For example, it is evident that something vital is left out when some one tries to reduce the whole affair to a matter of arithmetic.

The whole story is not told in a computation purporting to show that the hypothetical John Jones who bought an imaginary house 20 years ago and now owns it free and clear is the gainer by several thousand dollars as compared with his equally hypothetical brother, Samuel Jones, who paid rent over the 20 years and invested his savings safely at 5 per cent.

What of the altogether desirable distribution of wealth and increased economic stability of our families that would be implied if virtually all of our families were to own, with little or no debt, the homes in which they live?

Census Shows More Owners.

From still another angle, we may consider the possibility of changes in our system of land tenure that might do away with some of its speculative evils.

The present practice of having scattered independent owners of prevent the owners in a n shrdlu small lots frequently serves to prevent the owners in a neighborhood from uniting in a sance program, either for keeping up its character or for shifting the neighborhood to other profitable uses in an orderly manner.

The consequence of such lack of unity is the all too frequent blighting of an area, with severe losses to most of the owners.

A brief review of some of the facts relating to home ownership is helpful. The census of 1930 showed that nearly 48 per cent of all families in the United States owned their homes. In Washington the figure was about 38½ per cent in 1930 compared with 31 per cent in 1920.

Such an increase, which was paralleled in many other cities, is striking in view of the large construction of apartment houses during the 10-year period. Evidently a large number of families took advantage of the opportunity afforded by automobile and bus transportation to acquire homes in suburban areas and thus to move away from congested residential areas near the business centers.

In general, the percentage of families owning homes increases as the value of the home becomes greater. Thus, statistics support the view that home ownership is one of the incentives that lead families to seek economic advancement.

Many families have found their way to substantial financial independence through their purchase of a home and paying off the debt upon it.

Home ownership affects nearly every phase of a family's life and of its general outlook. A former colleague of mine was fond of saying that you are likely to spend more for an owned home than for a rented one, but that you get more out of it.

Investments That Went Wrong.

When a family sets out to make a careful job of buying or building a home, it at once starts to learn more about a great many subjects. The family learns something about budgeting, about business transactions and about the details of house design and construction.

As the venture proceeds, it fixes its attention on means of saving so that it can pay off the debt rapidly. It finds new uses for spare time in maintaining and improving the structure.

A home-owning family develops a just pride of ownership and feeling of stability as it cuts down and finally pays off the mortgage. Usually an owned house is regarded as a permanent dwelling place and is thus more likely to command the attachment and devotion that make it a real home.

On the other side of the picture, we know that altogether too many families have paid a heavy penalty for trying to buy houses that were beyond their means. Many homes that were structurally unsound have required large expenditures for repairs, and others were in neighborhoods that rapidly lost their character and became unsuitable for residence.

Values Cut in Depression.

Many persons who bought homes during the years prior to the current depression find that the value of their investment has depreciated. Many others, owing to unemployment or curtailment of income from other sources, have been unable to retain their homes and have lost all or part of the savings that were invested in them, as well as the titles to their houses.

Fortunately, home ownership had a fine positive side to its credit during the depression. Many a family has been able to keep together and weather the storm because of owning its home free and clear, or with only a small mortgage. Such a family could go on occupying a home worth, say, $6,000, with a charge of perhaps no more than $10 a month for taxes, a dollar or two for insurance and $6 or $8, or maybe less, for maintenance and upkeep. Another family of comparable means might have had to move from quarters renting at $60 a month to those renting for around $20 or else have gone into debt, or have had to "double up."

Besides, many types of investments depreciated considerably more in value during the depression than home properties, and an investment in a home is probably less subject to dwindling on account of day-to-day needs or the requests of relatives or friends for help than are funds invested in other ways.

Experience during the depression has strongly reinforced the advice of those authorities who, during prosperous times, advised careful consideration of quality of design and construction and neighborhood trends, and who cautioned against buying on a very small down payment or on the basis of unreasonable estimates of future income.

A few items serve to show that

Supply Firm Takes Leases On Two Stores

Charles Auto Co. Will Handle Accessories and Hardware.

Weaver Bros., Inc., report they have leased two stores to the Charles Auto Supply Co., Inc., of Pennsylvania.

Jacob A. Charles is president of the company, and Herman Wiener is secretary and general manager. Mr. Wiener will be in charge of the local stores. The main store here recently was leased at 730 Thirteenth street northwest and a branch store at 801 H street northeast.

The Charles Auto Supply Co., Inc., is a chain handling auto accessories, including tires, batteries, sporting goods and hardware.

E. A. Cogswell, handling men's and children's furnishings and women's apparel, leased 1827 Columbia road.

Gabriel Villeneuve leased 1019 Connecticut avenue, where a beauty shop will be opened.

Elias Tragas and Michael Psarakis, restaurant proprietors, leased 1722-24 Pennsylvania avenue.

I. C. Cox and C. B. Cuppet, restaurant proprietors, have leased 1801 L street northwest.

Flat Coats of Paint Help Enamel Finish

When an enamel finish is desired on an unpainted surface, it first is necessary to build up the proper foundation with flat coats of paint. All enamels, particularly white, are more or less transparent and imperfections in priming coats are likely to show in the finished result.

That this is the most distinguished exhibit home shown in the Capital in recent years will be the unanimous opinion of every one who sees this new Forest Hills residence today.

Architecturally and structurally it is the masterpiece of a leading builder who specializes in the construction of the larger better class homes.

ITS UNUSUAL SPACIOUSNESS will surprise you—as will the many innovations in interior plan, finish and decoration.

The home is of the English Farmhouse type, of stone, brick and timber construction with Tudor entrance and heavy variegated tile roof.

First floor has reception hall 11 ft. by 15 ft., living room 28 ft. long with bay window; dining room 20 ft. long, lavatory, knotted pine panelled front study, butler's pantry and kitchen. There are four bedrooms (master bedroom 28 ft. long), and three colored tile baths on the second floor. On the third floor there are three service rooms, two storage rooms and bath. Immense cedar closets.

THE OUTSTANDING FEATURE OF THE HOME is a spacious clubroom 20 FT. by 30 FT., with 18 FT. CEILING and immense open fireplace.

Of particular interest is the artistic decorative treatment of the home. The entrance halls are done in scenic wall paper. Living room walls are painted. Upstairs paper selections are appropriately colorful and in exquisite taste.

There are, of course, oil burner and largest size electric refrigerator.

The spacious grounds, in the rear, are terraced, are beautifully landscaped and heavily wooded. Centered in the rear yard is a large playing fountain.

There is a three-car garage.

Among the finer homes in exclusive, close-in Forest Hills, this luxuriously appointed home is truly outstanding and, at the price offered is a value that it is no exaggeration to state, is amazing.

28th Street Model Home Offered Today

Furnishings by Hutchison's Are in Exhibited New Dwelling.

The work by Hutchison's, Inc., in the furnishing of the newest Washington Post model home at 4517 Twenty-eighth street northwest, will be presented for the first time today by Edward H. Jones & Co., Inc. Its arrangement received the personal supervision of F. W. Hetzel, manager of the corporation.

As you enter this home through a vestibule, you will find a Duncan Phyfe console table, over which hangs a Chippendale mirror. There are two upholstered occasional chairs and two Chippendale chairs artistically arranged in the vestibule. On the floor is a small Chinese rug leading to a larger rug of the same type and design. There are some very unusual lamps on the floor and a console table.

Living Room Has Fireplace.

To the right of the hall, one enters a spacious living room facing a fireplace of the Adams period. On one side of the fireplace there is a Georgian wing chair; on the other side, an English lounge chair. These two pieces are upholstered in a very unusual striped fabric of a woolen frieze.

To one side of the fireplace there is an antique reproduction Duncan Phyfe lyre table. Immediately to the side of this table there is a beautiful Sheraton secretary desk with marquetrie inlay, surmounted with an American eagle and two urn finials in antique brass, a genuine Eighteenth Centry reproduction.

On the other side of this room along the wall there is an authentic reproduction of a Virginia sofa, a replica of one furnished by a Grand Rapids concern for the Colonial Exposition of Mount Vernon, held in Paris recently. This is a solid mahogany sofa, with the top rail inlaid with marquetrie on rosewood. It is upholstered with an old Empire fabric in black, with little sprays of flowers. On each side of this sofa are little occasional tables. The tables are of a Sheraton design.

Eighteenth Century Setting.

As you cross the threshold, facing to the front of the house, you may look into a semicircle bay window, which has a settee in the bay, flanked by small occasional tables, oval shaped, of rosewood, with marquetrie inlay. A little to one side of the bay there is a Pembrook table of solid mahogany, with a table lamp.

Next to this there is an occasional chair of a Sheraton reproduction, a small, comfortable chair upholstered in a genuine Italian antique velour.

In the far right corner, opposite the bay window, there is a Knabe grand concert piano. There are several end and coffee tables in front and alongside of each upholstered chair and settee.

The rug is a very large, genuine Royal Sarouk. The entire atmosphere is an early eighteenth century setting, combining the finest of our early American and English homes.

Dining Room in Mahogany.

From the center hall you enter the dining rom. This room is furnished with an eighteenth century Sheraton and Duncan Phyfe combined all-mahogany suite. The table of this group is a Duncan Phyfe double-lyre pedestal.

The chairs are of a Hepplewhite design upholstered in genuine haircloth. The sideboard as well as the china are true Sheraton reproductions.

There is also in one end of the room a cellarette equipped with old hobnail punch bottles and cocktail glasses. This piece matches the finish of the dining room suite. Over the buffet hangs an American Victory mirror.

The rug in this room is a roomsize Persian Keshan. Over the glass curtains are deep red valances with tie-back drapes.

Library Is In Walnut.

As you go down the hall to your left, you discover the library. This room is furnished in walnut. The essential piece is the desk, a beautiful flat-top Serpentine front with a ball and claw Chippendale leg. This is a knee-hole desk with drawers running down both sides to the floor.

In the center of this room, in front of the windows, there is another walnut piece, an oval occasional table. In one corner there is located a walnut console radio speaker. This radio is a new Philco model with a remote control operated from an end table. The chair is upholstered in an antique corduroy velour with down cushions.

Description of other rooms will be published later.

Spatter Floor Finish Method Is Explained

The spatter floor finish, widely used in Colonial houses, especially in New England, is obtained by painting the floor in a dark shade and spattering it with contrasting color in lighter tones.

Spattering is done by dipping the brush into the lighter color and then striking the handle of the paint brush sharply, continuing until a uniformity of spatter is obtained.

Final Coat of Varnish Utility Explained

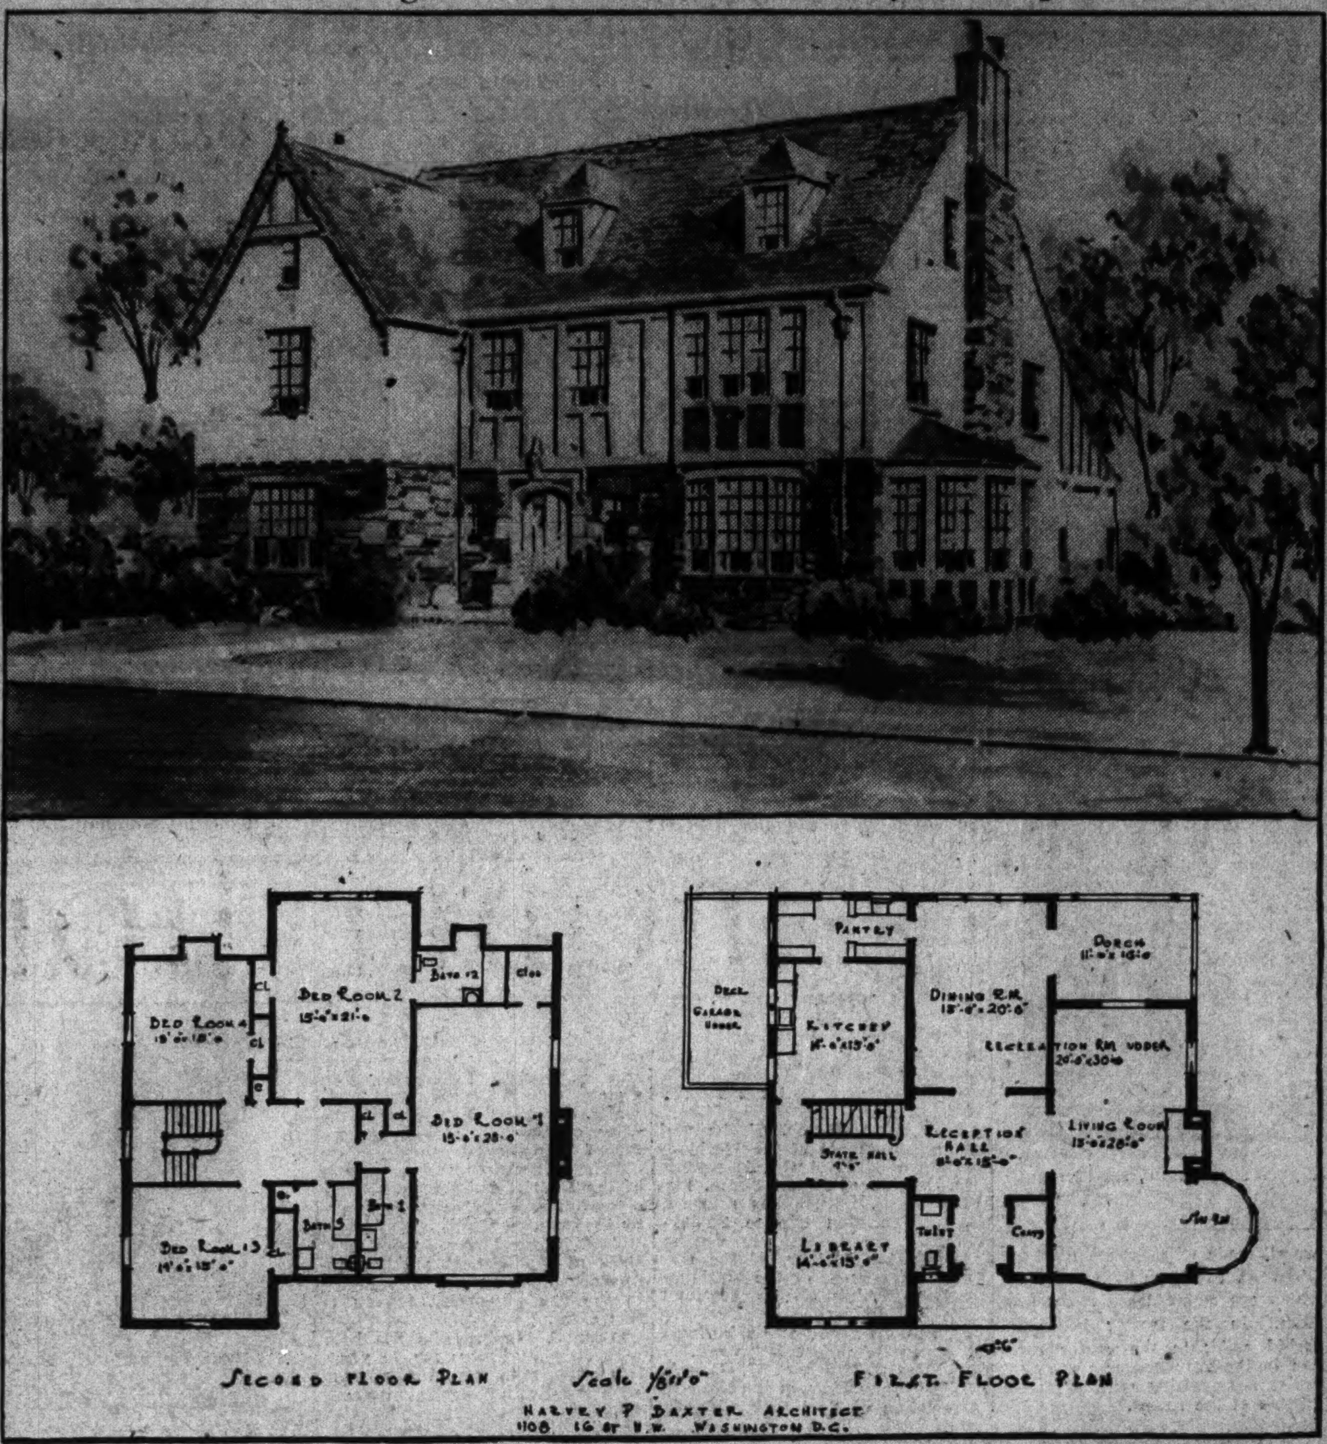
It is sometimes advisable to use a final coat of varnish over some types of interior paint and always over stain. Varnish protects the finish, makes a harder wearing surface and simplifies cleaning.

Care Needed in Using Paint-Drying Agents

The addition of "driers" to paint should be carefully limited to practical necessities, since the final destruction of the protective paint film is due to oxidation. Anything which hastens oxidation shortens the life of paint.

Latest Washington Post Model Home Ready for Inspection



*Latest Washington Post model home opening for inspection today at 4517 Twenty-eighth street northwest, in the Forest Hills section. Built by Carl I. Johnson, it is presented by Edward H. ## Home Paint Job Suggestions Given

Value of Using Reliable Products Stressed.

A handy check list for the home paint job follows:

Repaint the exterior with a reliable product whenever the surfaces show signs of weathering; repaint interiors, using washable paints; paint the bathroom, kitchen and laundry ceilings, walls and floors; paint or calcimine other ceilings; refinish trim, windows and doors with paint, lacquer, enamel, or stain and varnish; scrape, clean and refinish floors; paint exterior wood floors and thresholds; paint inside the garage; repaint dark basement stairs in a light color as a safety precaution; paint the cellar to keep out moisture and cold.

"Bargain" paint, it is pointed out, always is an unwise investment in the long run. Paint which is cheap because of inferior manufacture or because its ingredients are diluted with water, does not cover as much surface as a better quality product, gives little protection to the structural material it hides and does not last.

Paint Seals Kitchen Walls Against Grease

Kitchen walls and ceilings, if new or unpainted, should first be coated with a good, non-penetrating primer. This is followed by a coat of flat wall paint. If the surfaces have a final coat of gloss paint, they will be durable for kitchen wear—resistant to moisture and grease, and easily washed with soapsuds and ammonia.

Revarnishing Advised On Unbroken Surface

Maintaining a varnished floor need not be expensive—but it requires watchfulness. A fresh coat of varnish should be applied before the old coating is worn through at any place. If this precaution is neglected, it will be impossible to produce an unbroken surface without removing the entire original coating.

"Pay-for-Self" English Home Opened Today

Eight-Room Structure in Foxall Offered by Waverly Taylor, Inc.

A home of picturesque English architecture and so planned that it can be made to pay for itself is being presented today by Waverly Taylor, Inc., realtors and builders, at 4410 Volta place northwest, in Foxall. There are eight rooms and two baths, including the studio suite on the third floor, which may be rented separately without inconvenience to the owner and his family.

This interesting home is semidetached and is built for economy of maintenance and upkeep, being all brick, with slate roof, cypress woodwork and oak lintels. It is beautifully situated on a high elevation, to command a view over the Potomac toward the hills of Virginia.

The entrance to the first floor is through an entrance hall with tile floor, a coat closet being part of the hall. An arched opening to the living room presents a vista through the living room, stair hall and dining room, then through double French doors to the living porch.

Wood Fireplace.

There is a wood-burning fireplace in the living room and three windows to provide abundant light and air. The dining room as well is provided with cross-ventilation, good wall space and charming decoration.

In the kitchen one finds a modern double-drainboard sink, with cabinets built in above and below; a table-top gas range, with oven-heat control and automatic lighter, cabinet base and combined pantry and broom closet. The floor is inlaid linoleum and the walls and ceiling covered with Sanitas.

The master bedroom, at the front of the second floor, is large and well proportioned. There are two cedar-lined closets and a full-length mirror door.

Two More Bedrooms.

In the rear of this floor there are two other bedrooms, each with cedar closet, and each with door leading to the sleeping porch.

The bathroom is equipped with modern fixtures. All exposed metal is chronium plated. There is a towel closet and built-in laundry container, razor-blade slot and one-piece medicine cabinet with Venetian mirror.

On the third floor there is a large room at the front with interesting dormer windows and sloping ceiling. This room is suitable as either a studio or a bedroom. At the rear is another large bedroom and private bath with tile shower. With ceiling insulated against heat penetration in summer and heat loss in winter, this suite is most desirable for Georgetown University students or young business men.

In the basement there is a built-in garage, a maid's room and space for recreation room.

Foxall is so well known that little comment is necessary on its many advantages. While only ten minutes by motor from the White House, it is surrounded by parks and wooded estates and is further safeguarded by protective restrictions to maintain its desirability. There is a new graded school just completed on Foxhall road and the Gordon Junior High School and Western High Schools are nearby.

A visit to this budget-balancing home will be well worth your time, and will convince you of the great convenience and enjoyment of a modern home within the range of income of the average family. It is reached by driving out Q street and Reservoir road to Forty-fourth street, then left three short blocks to Volta place.

Picturesque Semidetached Home in Foxall

Attractive "budget balancing" home at 4410 Volta place northwest, in Foxall, built by Waverly Taylor, Inc. This home contains eight rooms and two baths, including a third-floor studio suite, maid's room and built-in garage.

Lightbowns Exhibit Attractive Draperies

The draperies in the model home of Cooper Lightbown & Son at P street and Foxhall road northwest are furnished by John Fulton Lignon. At the large steel window in the living room hangs a monk's cloth draw curtain. All glass curtains through the home are widely woven nets. The first-floor draperies are most attractive, colonial designed chintz being used in the living room and colonial ship pattern used in the dining room.

The draperies on the second floor are all made with French pleats of green satin, finished with ruffles, on which are embroidered clusters of roses. In the master bedrooms, orchid satin; in the center room and in the rear bedroom are draperies harmonizing with the color scheme of the rooms.

Scientist Gets Refrigeration Honor Award

Dr. William Hainsworth Cited for Perfection of Gas Machine.

The announcement of Dr. William R. Hainsworth, scientist and director of the Electrolux Gas Refrigerator Laboratory in Evansville, Ind., as this year's recipient of the Charles A. Munroe award, granted annually for the most outstanding contribution by an individual to the advancement of the gas industry, was made yesterday through the Washington Gas Light Co.

This honor was granted Dr. Hainsworth for his scientific research work in perfecting the new, air-cooled Electrolux refrigerator and for his work in bringing gas refrigeration to its present state of usefulness.

The award, made at the fifteenth annual convention of the American Gas Association at Chicago, adds an interesting sidelight to the activities of the association in bringing to the public through its members the need for household refrigeration in the winter as well as in summer.

Collaborating with the Electrolux manufacturers, the American Gas Association, through its refrigeration committee, recently inaugurated a sales campaign in view of the fast developing demands for refrigerators among consumers of gas.

New Sales Campaign.

The success of this campaign, in which the Washington Gas Light Co. cooperated, was so encouraging that the company has enlarged its refrigerator sales activities and with an increased advertising appropriation, has set out to sell more Electrolux gas refrigerators during October, November and December than have ever been sold in a like period in the company's history.

In the past women have not associated winter with the need of protecting food by refrigeration, but the Electrolux dealers point out that the kitchen in which food is stored is a part of the living quarters of the home and as such is kept at a temperature of about 70 degrees. It is always summer in the kitchen and foods will spoil if kept unprotected very long at this temperature. Even food kept in cellars is not properly protected, for although the cellar is usually cooler than the kitchen, its temperature is rarely as low as 50 degrees, refrigerator dealers say. Often dust, ashes or other conditions make food storage in such places insanitary.

Ordinances and health measures require that certain foods be kept at low temperatures until sold to retard bacterial action and prevent spoilage. The same precautions are essential in the home and the Electrolux gas refrigerator provides these low temperatures continuously for the protection of food.

Improved Equipment.

The Electrolux gas refrigerator added a brilliant page to automatic refrigeration in the introduction of a new principle of freezing whereby a tiny gas flame does all the work. Constant research has made many improvements in this equipment and the new Electrolux air-cooled gas refrigerator is absolutely silent because it has no moving parts.

This means lack of vibration and longer life, for there is nothing to wear out, with little need of service and its low cost of operation finds favor with the efficient home manager. The Electrolux gas refrigerator is air cooled. No water is needed and a harmless refrigerant, hermetically sealed in steel, is used. Its operation is constant and cold remains steady and crisp, protecting food.

The wide acceptance of the air-cooled gas refrigerator is due to its inherent advantages as a modern, efficient and useful household aid. It satisfies the demands of users of gas for a refrigerator simple in construction with no moving parts, absence of noise and vibration, carefree service and low cost of operation.

Miss Ruth Sheldon, director of home service for the Washington Gas Light Co., and her staff extend a cordial invitation to the public to visit the scientific test kitchen at the main office of the company. Miss Sheldon is widely known among cooking school and community gatherings, women's clubs and countless homes in bringing to housewives the results of her work in the scientific test kitchen of the company. There is available for distribution menus and literature of interest in the preservation of food. The staff will also advise on individual problems.

2 Coats of Paint Applied Every Four Years Best

It is less expensive in the long run to apply a sufficient number of coats when painting.

Tests have shown that two coats of paint applied to a frame siding every four years give better service than one coat applied every two years.

Harmony in Colors Makes Pretty Kitchen

Harmonious color schemes enhance the beauty of the kitchen. It is not difficult to transform dustpans and broom handles into attractive additions to the kitchen color scheme.

Painting the back walls of cabinets, cupboards and shelves also produces attractive results.

Chandeliers, drapes and wall decoration have been carried out according to a unified plan. The living and dining rooms have antique, ivory backgrounds with two-tone cornices and unusual crystal chandeliers. The dining room decoration is most suitable to English interiors.

In the living room, there are wide brackets of Engilsh brass and the alcove's sunlight can be softened by drapes. The library selection includes homespun drapes and rustic chandelier in harmony with the study type and, its frieze depicts a German hunting scene, a replica of an old print.

Clubroom Drapes Beautiful.

Downstairs drapes are suspended from traverses and substitute for window shades. The clubroom with its high ceilings and paneled walls is done in four different shades of tan with heavy, red and blue antique cornice. This blends with real moire damask drapes, forming an unusually pretty treatment for arched windows.

The upsairs decorative plan is executed with careful selection as to respective values. The master bedroom will be admired greatly for its new and unusual paper, marking the first use of paneling of this decorative nature in the city. The drapes are ruffled, silk tissue blending with the papered background.

The guest bedroom is slightly more elegant, with its full length, blue taffeta drapes to the floor. All drapes have been lined to protect them against sunlight and to give them a uniform external appearance.

There is an early American room in curly maple, the window shades of which are simply treated. In the mahogany bedroom there are blue-figured, glazed chintz drapes hanging straight from the ceiling. This makes this room unique in its simplicity. The spreads have been made in the same material as the drapes.

Dining Room Drapes of Satin.

The French doors of the first floor are treated with silk bris-bia of three-quarters length. These hang loosely with a festoon treatment. They are embellished with a center filet medalion and are edged and weighted by silk tassels. The dining room drapes are in antique satin of cedar hue.

There are a number of especially exquisite hand-made Oriental rugs throughout the dwelling.

Other noteworthy features of the home's construction are its insulation of mineral wool, concealed radiation, weather stripping throughout, marble fireplaces, copper gutters and downspouting. It's beauty is enhanced by a slate roof with random width shingles of variegated coloring.

Good Material Vital For Painting Results

Good painting, like any other job, depends upon good material, properly used. A general working knowledge of brushes and their care is essential, since worn-out or poor-grade brushes are often the cause of dissatisfaction with the finished paint job.

Recoating Porch Floors Necessary Each Season

Because porch floors are subjected to such hard wear, and are constantly exposed to all kinds of weather, it is advisable to recoat them every season with porch and deck paint.

Realtors Seek Unity on Code Negotiations

System of Regulations Sought, Association Head Says Here.

In the negotiation of its proposed general code affecting real estate and five supplementary codes, the National Association of Real Estate Boards is seeking to bring together for common action, so far as possible, all groups and associations in the general field.

"We are seeking to arrive at a system of codes," W. C. Miller, of Washington, president of the association, states.

The association has had conferences with the two deputy administrators of NRA concerned with the proposals it has filed, Philip Kemp, in charge of the real estate code, and Malcolm Pirnie, in charge of the construction code. The Government has indicated it is ready to set a hearing on all real estate codes as soon as the real estate groups are ready. It has indicated in general that it hopes to see a close affiliation of all codes in the real estate field, including construction.

Such coordination and the stabilization it should bring was the objective which moved the National Association of Real Estate Boards to propose initially a general code which might be the basis for eventual unification. To the end that eventual coordination of code action may be reached, the association is seeking the cooperation of the National Association of Building Owners and Managers, the Mortgage Bankers Association of America, the recently formed National Association of Apartment House Owners and all others in the field.

Warrington Adds To Motor Field

Company to Deal in Dodge and Plymouth Cars.

Joseph B. Trew, president of the Trew Motor Co., Dodge distributors in this territory, yesterday announced the appointment of the Warrington Motor Car Co., 2035 Seventeenth street northwest, as a city dealer for Dodge and Plymouth cars.

This firm, the oldest dealer in gasoline cars in the District of Columbia, was founded in 1912 by C. H. Warrington, who is still at the head of the organization and for the past several years distributor of Auburn and Cord passenger cars which the concern will continue to handle along with their new lines.

Mr. Warrington, in addition to being one of the three oldest dealers in automobiles in Washington, is the only dealer to have an aeroplane sales agency and is himself a licensed pilot.

Building, Loan Firms Report Gain for 1933

The report of William S. Quinter, secretary of the Building Association Council, for the first three-quarters of 1933 shows a business improvement for the building associations of the District of Columbia, which are cooperating with the President's program, both as to the NRA and Home Owners Loan Corporation.

The report shows total assets in building and loan associations of $88,521,000, a gain for the nine months of $1,233,000. There were 2,610 loans made during this period for a total of $8,166,000. There were 6,936 new accounts opened in building and loan associations. As loans are made principally on owner-occupied homes, it shows that associations are helping the home owner solve his financial problems as far as the home is concerned.

Virginia Haven Invites Weary D. C. Dwellers

New City Growing Across Potomac, Beckoning Home-Seekers.

A new city is growing across the Potomac.

It is a metropolis of beautiful homes and happy neighborhoods. Fine roads traverse this thriving section. Stores, churches, schools and recreation areas are serving a satisfied citizenry.

The rapidity of growth in the past five years has been nothing short of marvelous. More than 10 rapidly expanding developments have been started there since 1928. The history of each has been successful. Persons who have gone there to live and build have prospered.

Blessed with every natural feature that could endow a residential project, these home-building undertakings are meeting success. People see in this beautiful and healthy country just over the river the ideal place to live.

Its convenience to the city commends itself to hundreds each season. Every month brings 15, 20, even 30 new houses. Completion of the great Memorial Bridge gave impetus to the centralization of a satisfied humanity in this delightful country.

No area possesses a greater future than this land with its stately woods and rolling hills, its green meadows and healthful climate. It has been estimated that in the past five years more than 3,000 homes have been built in this part of the Old Dominion.

Builders everywhere are realizing the opportunities it presents and are planning constructional efforts there. Contractors of long experience have brought to this fertile field all of their skill and talent.

Native sons of this bounteous area also have recognized its worth. They made their homes there and built for their neighbors on the District side of the river. The latter saw in this locality a cool, refreshing place to rest after the dirt and noise of the city. They began to buy homes there.

Its proximity to the city's sights, pleasures and opportunities, yet its rural remoteness and restful environment make it desirable for homes. Each week more and more homeseekers are realizing this. The future is bright for nearby Virginia, land of happy homes.

Bungalow Put On View Today

Westenberger Shows Home on South Milton Ave., Ashton Heights.

A beautifully designed bungalow is open for display today by F. E. Westenberger, builder and developer, of Clarendon. This charming new home, constructed of skintled brick, is at 361 South Milton avenue, Ashton Heights, a community of attractive homes adjoining Clarendon.

Situated on a large well-shrubbed lot, the house is architecturally appealing to the eye and it has advantages of convenient location and select environment. The rooms are well proportioned and arranged. A spacious screened porch adjoins the living room, which has a handsomely designed fireplace.

One of the many features is the modern-to-the-minute kitchen that will delight and please the fancy of every woman. It is equipped with gas range, electric refrigerator and other appurtenances to be found in a modern home.

A beautifully finished tiled bath is on both the first floor and the second. All closets are cedar-lined and electric convenience outlets are in abundance throughout the house. The basement is light, ample in space and contains a large storage room. A garage to match adjoins the house with a cemented drive leading to the street.

It will be open for inspection today until 8 p. m. and each day and evening throughout the week, and may be reached by driving over the Key Bridge, out Wilson boulevard to Clarendon. Milton avenue is four blocks past the monument in Clarendon, where signs may be followed to the property.

English Oak Imitated With Umber and Sienna

An English oak effect can be produced on white or red oak by first staining the wood with a mixture made from burnt umber and raw sienna and a touch of drop black. After the stain has dried, the wood, if filled with paste filler tinted the color of the stain, may be finished with wax or varnished, rubbed and polished. A dull surface can be produced with a flatting varnish.

A grained surface should be rubbed or mossed with pumice and water before varnishing.

Northern Virginia Sites Developing

The progress and opportunities of northern Virginia for a number of years have been studied by W. S. Hoge, jr., realtor. Mr. Hoge has shown his interest in its development and constructive enterprises by concerted effort.

Worthy of note is Country Club Grove on Glebe road. In September, 1932, ground was broken on a large wooded lot for an attractive bungalow which sold for $6,500. This was the beginning of Country Club Grove, which now has ten owner-occupied homes, four brick homes under construction and others proposed.

Country Club Grove, served by the Arnold Bus line, is only 20 minutes out by either Lee highway or Canal road and Chain Bridge to Glebe. Here all city improvements are offered with the advantage of a high, rolling scenic countryside and well appointed, artistic homes at moderate prices.

An unusual parcel of 7 acres having excellent surroundings and lying beautifully to the sun. High ground with view both to front and rear. This property is at the top of Chain Bridge Hill.

It borders on the highway at the front and on Pimmett Run to the rear.

Improvements: Small brick bungalow and fine driven well.

Colonial - Type Home Opened By Brumback

Woodlawn Village House on Exhibition at 107 Glebe Road

T. J. Brumback, pioneer Virginia builder, announces the opening of a beautiful Colonial-type home, which is on exhibit at 107 Glebe road, in Woodlawn Village.

This delightful home has a large living room with open fireplace, a spacious dining room and a model kitchen on the first floor, and two exceptionally large bedrooms and beautifully colored bath on second floor. A large, screened living-porch, opening off the living room, adds to the livability of this home.

The Brumback homes are noted for their appointments and special features not found in other houses of a similar price-range. Some of them in this home include an automatic-lighting gas range, an electric fan, clock and refrigerator, and bathroom scales are provided.

Mr. Brumback also has one of his popular apartment-type bungalows open for inspection at 1206 Oak street, in Woodlawn Village, having five cheerful rooms and bath on the first floor. It, too, is equipped with all the latest modern features found in Brumback homes. These homes are located on large wooded, beautifully landscaped lots, and if you are interested in a moderate-priced home it will pay you to inspect them.

Woodlawn Village is one of nearby Virginia's newest home communities and is being developed by Mr. Brumback. This latest Brumback development has sewers, city water, gas and electricity and is restricted in a way to make it an ideal community of moderate-priced homes of distinction and individuality, location and accessibility.

It is near the intersection of Glebe road and Memorial drive. There are two bus and one car lines within one square of the development, which offers large wooded lots in the country-club section, the Washington Golf and Country Club being located nearby. It is an ideal environment and a section strictly residential.

The development features Brumback-built "Small Homes of Character," at a price range of $4,500 to $6,500, having all the charm and livability of much more pretentious homes, but at a price Mr. Average Man can buy and pay for.

The most direct route to Woodlawn Village, at present, is over Key Bridge, out Lee Highway to Glebe road; then turn left or south, to the development.

Ashton Heights Home Is Open For Inspection

P. W. Sharpe & Co. Offer Outstanding Value in New Community.

In the restricted wooded section of Ashton Heights, now gaining popularity as a community of homes, P. W. Sharpe & Co., builders and developers of Clarendon, offer for inspection today one of the year's outstanding home offerings.

From an architectural standpoint the house is ideally arranged. A spacious living room extends the full width of the house and features a wood-burning fireplace, the latest type of electric fixtures and hardwood floors and trim. Entrance is provided to the living room from a spacious screened side porch.

The kitchen provides a feature of the home. Equipped with electric refrigeration, it contains what is said to be the first Monel Metal sink and drainboard in northern Virginia.

The house contains six rooms and two beautifully finished tile baths.

Open for inspection every day, this charming home is reached by motoring on Wilson boulevard to Clarendon, where signs have been erected to point the way.

J. G. Beitzell's First Showing Goes On Today

Sample Dwelling Offers Latest in Home Construction.

J. Garrett Beitzell, long and prominently identified with excellent residential projects, is giving a first showing today of the ultra in home construction. It is presented at 501 Quackenbos street northwest and priced to meet the reduced income.

These offerings, open daily, have all that such houses need in the way of construction, convenience, beauty, location and environment. This combination always sought but seldom found, is achieved in this beautiful group of thoroughly modern homes.

The sample dwelling is of semi-detached type. It contains six extra-large rooms, an unusually attractive clubroom, three master bedrooms, two colored baths and an unusually spacious kitchen. The kitchen has fine Oxford built-in cabinets and electric refrigeration.

The home is featured further by an apartment dinette, two real wood-burning fireplaces, a rich, wood-paneled recreation room with colored tile lavatory adjoining and built-in garage. It is built on a large lot completely sodded and planted.

Marietta Park, locale of these offerings, is a most desirable community of detached and semidetached homes, where even the oldest dwellings appear new and pretty.

It is a restricted section where one's neighbors are selected with utmost care and it is convenient to schools, churches, stores and transportation. The environment provides a proper place to rear children. It is a delightful and healthy place in which to live.

To view this offering today, drive out Fifth street to the intersection of Quackenbos, or take the "Takoma" Fourteenth street cars or Georgia avenue cars to Quackenbos street. Mr. Beitzell's offices are in the Tower Building.

Durability of Stucco Enhanced by Painting

Painting, according to authorities in the industry, enhances the durability and charm of stucco.

Paint not only protects stucco against the ravages of weather and accumulated dust, but improves the exterior appearance and decreases the moisture absorption of a home of this construction.

Means of Obtaining Old Ivory Finish Told

An old ivory finish may be had by tinting light ivory paint with a little raw sienna and burnt umber. Over this ground finish, a glaze coating of raw sienna mixed with burnt umber is applied.

Damp Brick Houses Improved by Painting

The painting of a brick house that is damp and difficult to heat will aid greatly in keeping out moisture and sometimes results in a substantial saving in fuel bills.

Gruver Homes Prove Popular With Visitors

Brick Residences Shown to Large Groups of Callers Daily.

The latest Gruver residential presentations are exciting favorable comment. They are drawing groups of home-lovers daily to their location in the 2400 block of Thirty-ninth street northwest.

Spaciousness and durability are marked features of these homes offered by B. H. Gruver.

Of all-brick construction, with concrete front porches and terraced yards and brick retaining walls, the homes are 18 by 20 feet in width and contain eight rooms, two baths and a recreation room. The kitchens have complete cabinet equipment, including quality insulated ranges and Westinghouse refrigerators.

Well Equipped.

The homes are beautified with natural trim throughout. They are outfitted with cedar closets, colored tile baths and large recreation rooms with stippled walls. They are thoroughly screened, metal weather-stripped and equipped with built-in garages.

Successful Builder.

Rapid sales are forecast for these homes as they are "B. H. Gruver Built." This term means excellence in construction and planning. Mr. Gruver's successful career as a builder of thousands of homes backs the trademark. The remaining reasons are to be found in many details of refinement and equipment.

Mr. Gruver has been one of the foremost builders of homes for more than a quarter of a century and has established entirely new standards of value. He has produced substantial savings to the purchasers in these homes, surpassing the long-established standards of his organization.

Ordway Street Home Is Sold

Home at 2904 Ordway street northwest, sold to Byron H. Webb by Shannon & Luchs Co.

How to Clean Chassis Before Painting Told

To clean the wheels and chassis of an automobile prior to painting, saturate the greasy parts with crude oil and turpentine or with kerosene, and allow these softeners to work for some hours.

Then, with a scraper, with brush and cotton waste, rub off the grease and finish by washing the surface well with turpentine.

Energy Saved In Attractive New Kitchens

Boss & Phelps Offerings Are Compact, Yet Not Cramped.

Boss & Phelps, recognizing the great importance of modern home planning, have given a great deal of thoughtful attention to this, as is shown in the exceptionally well-designed and equipped kitchen of 5709 Third place northwest.

Ingress and egress may be had to the kitchen from three points—the front entrance hall, with two doors inclosing a passage way to the recreation room and basement below; from the dining room and from the big screened rear porch. The door from the front hall is paneled with a full-length mirror.

In the days of long ago, mother, when engaged in culinary preparations for the family, added many unnecessary footsteps during the day in the big, old-fashioned kitchen. She had the unpleasant task of emptying the water pans of the old-time ice box and mopping up the floor when it spilled.

Energy Now Preserved.

She lost plenty of time in finding things in the dark old kitchen closets and had her daily struggle in feeding the maw of the hot kitchen coal range.

Modern thought and ingenuity has done away with all of this uncomfortable waste of energy, but it has only been possible during the past year or so to include all of the most modern features in a moderate-priced home that have only been found formerly in the more expensive dwellings.

Boss & Phelps kitchens are a revelation in time-saving, modern devices. They are immaculate and easy to keep so. They are compact, yet not cramped. The old kitchen often served the family for breakfast and sometimes dinner purposes to save steps, but here we find a neat breakfast alcove or dinette, furnished with table and chairs and two built-in china closets. Two large windows admit plenty of air and sunlight. And here is where mother scores again.

Unmixed Varnishes Give Best Results

Varnishes should not be mixed, reduced or thinned if the best possible results are to be obtained. Any sort of dilution effects the quality of the product and the success of the finished varnishing job.

Follow Directions In Mixing Varnish

In mixing varnish, lacquer, enamel, shellac and stain preparatory to using, the directions of the manufacturer, as outlined on containers, should be followed with care to insure the best results.

Builder Sees House Bargains Offered Now

Slumped Prices Present Buyers' Opportunity, Leon Hurley Says.

Leon S. Hurley, vice president of the Custom Construction Co., speaking of the unusual activity on the part of home buyers, attributed it to "the fact astute buyers, realizing the inevitable rise in prices of homes and house sites, are taking advantage of their opportunity and putting themselves in position to capitalize inflation, whether it be a monetary inflation or credit inflation.

"History has shown that the most successful men were the men who dared to buy at the bottom of the depression," he continued.

"Most of our present day great fortunes were laid during the bottom of the depression of 1873. The fortunes of tomorrow are being laid today.

Chance for Home Owner.

"Real property, of which the home is the outstanding example, increases in terms of the inflated dollar. The recent German inflation debacle is an outstanding example. Home owners paid off mortgages with cheap money and came out with a clear home.

"After the Civil War, Confederate money became worthless but land values in the Southern States have steadily increased in value. A house can't run away; it can't be stolen; it can't be tied up in a closed bank; it can't be dissipated by poor management on the part of a board of directors. It is perpetual.

"As more people learn these facts more houses will be acquired and more young couples will lay the foundation of future wealth, happiness and security.

Families Benefit.

"Think success and determine that you will have a better home; that your children will receive the education that will prepare them to take their proper place in business and social life, then you can enjoy with your family the leisure and comforts of living.

"Life should not be a mere existence, where you get up in the morning and go to work, and then come home in the evening to sleep. Men and women were born to live and contribute to the enjoyment of others and to do this you require a home which reflects your personality.

"When you come to a decision in this matter of home building—and you should act today—you need not fear the project because of your lack of construction experience, as many organizations, expert in every home building detail, are available to you at small cost."

Gas Devices For Home Seen In All Forms

Displayed at Exposition by Washington Firm Through Week.

Visitors to the ninth annual industrial exposition of the Washington Chamber of Commerce, to be held at the Washington Auditorium, beginning tomorrow and continuing through Saturday, will be interested in viewing the attractive display of the Washington Gas Light Co.

Occupying almost the entire rear of the first floor and comprising an area of 3,000 square feet, this exhibit features all gas appliances for the home, demonstrating in a colorful way how the home manager of today can modernize with gas for greater comfort, convenience and economy.

The exhibit is laid out in the form of an arc with a central refrigerator display and a modern basement at one side and a completely equipped kitchen at the other. The Electrolux gas refrigerator unit is arranged on a stepped platform showing the different styles, with a skeleton model mounted on a mirror base to demonstrate the new and exclusive features of this refrigerator.

On each side of this display, mounted on the wall are pictures of some of the apartment buildings equipped with these refrigerators and letters from their owners expressing the satisfaction of their tenants with this equipment from the standpoint of proper food preservation, noiseless and carefree operation and economical usage.

Kitchen Demands Met.

Modern gas ranges, styled to today's demands for a colorful kitchen occupy the floor space on each side of the refrigerator display. Spot-lighting with the blue paint on the floor design leads the eye from a central point to each feature of the exhibit.

The model basement shows how the compact gas house-heating unit has made available extra space for use as a recreation room, due to the elimination of dust, dirt and fuel storage. There is also an automatic gas hot water heater. In the all-gas kitchen, with monel metal working surfaces and built-in cabinets finished in green and cream color scheme, one notes the fully automatic gas range with time and temperature controls and a smart Electrolux refrigerator.

Fifteen million American housewives have found in gas fine cooking fuel. It gives instant heat at any time. The fully automatic gas range, with four burners and automatic lighting, has a roomy oven with temperature control; utensil drawer equipped with compartments for cooking accessories; salt and pepper containers, recipe file and knife sharpener. There is also a broiler and utility drawers. Time clock control makes possible the complete preparation of a meal in the absence of the housewife.

The Electrolux gas refrigerator introduces a new principle of freezing whereby a tiny gas flame does all the work. No water is needed; there is no vibration or noise and a harmless refrigerant is used. Inexpensive to operate, with long life, it provides constant, steady cold and has many new features, consisting of temperature regulator, trigger-release trays and two-temperature chilling unit.

Temperature Maintained.

The automatic gas storage water heater provides an abundant supply of hot water for laundry, bath and kitchen. Even temperature is maintained by a thermostat and its operation is marked by the utmost economy. The efficient, house-heating gas boiler, completely insulated, has a thermostat pilot, protected from moisture and dirt, keeping the gas supply closed unless the pilot is burning. This unit is quiet, economical and automatic with a constant supply of fuel, eliminating all inconvenience and care. Room temperatures are controlled by a thermostat.

The all-gas home has been successfully featured by many builders in Washington's outstanding new home communities for the modern housewife appreciates the advantages of gas appliances as efficient household aids. Miss Ruth Sheldon, director of home service for the Washington Gas Light Co. and her assistants are in attendance daily to demonstrate the features of gas equipment and to distribute recipes and menus for balanced meals and special occasions. Miss Sheldon is well-known to Washington women through letters and demonstrations of the results of her work in the scientific test kitchens of the Washington Gas Light Co.

Home Exhibit Draws Throng Of Admirers

2,000 Visit the Furnished Model Residence in Three Weeks.

The 1933 furnished model home at 3412 Garrison street northwest continues to please admiring hundreds. More than 2,000 persons have visited this handsome dwelling since it was opened to the public three weeks ago by Levin P. Handy.

The home is furnished by Hutchison's, Inc., and the draperies are by John F. Ligon. It is of all-brick construction with slate roof. It is arranged on the popular center-hall plan.

The living room is furnished with a Charles of London sofa and chair to match. Both pieces are covered with a very fine grade of green tapestry. In contrast to the green suite you will find a fireside wing chair, covered in gold damask and of solid mahogany.

One finds a Duncan Phyfe tilt-top table in solid mahogany, bound in satin wood; also a solid walnut coffee table by Duncan Phyfe. A secretary desk of Gov. Winthrop period and mahogany is in the center of the room. The radio is of the latest type Philco model with remote control.

There are several novelty end-tables worth notice, as well as an assortment of lamps. Over the mantel there is an American Victory mirror which is a replica of a convex mirror given to George Washington by his soldiers. The rugs are domestic Oriental of deep rose.

In the dining room there is a very beautiful mahogany suite, consisting of a Duncan Phyfe table, chairs with blue haircloth seats, a Sheraton buffet with a tilt-top server to match. Over the buffet hangs a round Venetian mirror with a beautiful scroll frame in gold. The rag is a domestic Oriental of Persian design.

The master bedroom contains a very handsome six-piece twin-bed suite, finished in walnut. There are a bureau, a vanity dressing table and a bench. The floor is covered with handsome hooked rugs of shade and color to match the general color scheme of the draperies.

The guest room contains a five-piece curly maple suite, consisting of a double bed, dresser and chest of drawers. The rugs are oval and of colonial, woven chenille, corresponding with the draperies and general color scheme. The lamps are of hobnail type with parchment shades trimmed with blue tassels.

The third bedroom is a colonial reproduction in mahogany, consisting of a four-piece solid suite. There are a four-poster bed with open-end footboard, a lowboy of the knee-hold type with a Chippendale mirror hanging over it; a tall, narrow chest with a portable mirror on top.

Home Ownership Told in Two Sides

every family thinking of buying a home and in a position to do so now should weigh the matter carefully. Prices of houses are much lower, as a rule, than they were in the years immediately preceding the depression, and this fact warrants attention.

But not every home that appears to be low in price is a good buy.

When a house is bought as a place to live in, the family should be assured that the neighborhood is one in which it will want to live over a considerable period of years, and that it is not definitely on the down grade.

Books on Subject Available.

The family should satisfy itself that the house structure is sound and that plumbing and heating are in good condition. Otherwise, it may be faced with heavy bills for maintenance or replacements. It should not hesitate to obtain the advice of a competent independent builder or architect or both.

It is well to consult officials of a good savings institution or bank as a check on the reasonableness of the whole proposition—proportion of income to be devoted to payments, conditions of the loan and conditions of the purchase contract—before anything is signed. These, and a great many other points which ought to be duly weighed when such an important transaction is contemplated, are discussed in the Department of Commerce publication, "How to Own Your Home," and in the report on home ownership and leasing, of the recent conference on home building and home ownership, which is available in libraries.

Gutters and Spouting Need Paint on Inside

Gutters, spouting and water conductors should receive a coat of paint on the inside, as well as on the outside. These inner surface, like outer ones, are subject to rust damage and should, if conditions permit, have paint protection.

Coat of Paint Needed When Shingles Weather

At the first sign of weathering, shingles should be given a fresh protective coating of paint or stain.

Neglect causes nails to rust, and as a result shingles become loose and blow away during severe weather.

Paint Cans Require Lid; Ingredients Are Volatile

Paint contains volatile ingredients which evaporate and should not be left in an uncovered can over night.

If cans are left open the solvents evaporate, skinsform on the paint, and thinning becomes necessary before the paint can be used.

Home owners everywhere praise the superior qualities of the gas refrigerator—its silence—its lack of machinery—its economy and long life. But the final test of an automatic refrigerator is shown in apartment buildings, where satisfaction means perfect service from large numbers of refrigerators under one roof, pleasing tenants by convenience and owners by economy and freedom from repair.

The gas refrigerator meets these exacting requirements in many of Washington's largest apartments, and its exclusive features have brought forth such statements as the following from prominent local representatives:

Mrs. Elizabeth Cohen, Manager, The Riverside, 2145 C Street, N. W.: "Five years ago this summer, we purchased one hundred and seventeen Electrolux Refrigerators. We continue to be enthusiastically delighted with the absolute silence, savings, and service of this marvel of the refrigeration age. The Electrolux has been a real asset in the renting of our apartments at the Riverside."

B. F. Neason, Vice President, Annapolis Management Corp., Agents, Annapolis Hotel, 11th and H Streets, N. W.: "The reaction of our tenants on the appearance, silence, and general efficiency of your gas refrigerators has been most favorable without exception, and the unusually low cost of operation has been a most pleasant surprise to us."

Mark Winkler, Manager, Fidelity Storage Company, Real Estate Department, for the Monmouth Apartments, 1819 G N. W.: "The absolute silence and constant dependability of the gas refrigerator is the pride and joy of all of our tenants and their satisfaction, together with the unusually low cost of operation, is a source of real satisfaction to us. As the years pass, we are convinced that the constant, absolute silence of the gas refrigerator will make it the most favored type of automatic refrigerator."

Frank O'Connor, Simmons Properties, Saint Nicholas, 2230 California Street, N. W.: "The results we have obtained thus far in satisfactory automatic refrigeration have more than substantiated the claims you made for your equipment. Without exception, our tenants have unqualifiedly stated that the Electrolux is far more efficient (than former types used) and that they are delighted with the absolutely noiseless operation."

Whether you own an apartment, rent an apartment, or live an a home, if your interest involves refrigeration, insist on the gas refrigerator.

Stocks Decline 2.4 Points on Selling Drive

Speculative Issues Lead in Break; Sales Rise to 1,260,160 Shares.

New York, Oct. 21 (AP).—Stocks began the day in fairly good spirits, but lively selling that centered around issues which have had greatest speculative appeal promptly squelched the improvement before it had gone very far.

Heavy liquidation of alcohol stocks and of metals, though to a lesser degree in the latter, sent the list spinning downward around the turn of the first hour and prices ended an active Saturday market with many net losses of 1 to 7 points.

The average decline was 2.4, which more than canceled Friday's recovery. Sales totaled 1,260,160 shares; it was the busiest week-end session since July.

Break by Alcohols.

The break by "repeal" stocks appeared to have been prompted by a report that the Government planned to place a limitation on profits which these companies would be allowed to make after prohibition repeal.

Long accounts were thrown overboard hastily and severe reactions occurred in some of the more active favorites of this description. With liquor issues and metals weakening, other groups lacked stamina to do much resisting, and the market declined actively late in the final hour. Closing prices were somewhat above the lows.

Forecasts of imminent Russian recognition encouraged moderate buying of farm implement and a few other industrial stocks, the theory being that Russia was a good prospective customer of certain American companies.

Volume Begins to Dwindle.

However, the market did not look particularly robust during this demonstration and volume dwindled before the break developed.

Many observers felt that unrest in the agricultural middle west had had a rather depressing effect on sentiment. Wall street's guess was that President Roosevelt would have something to say about the farm price situation in his radio address to the Nation tomorrow night. Perhaps in anticipation of such a development grains rallied, but by the close wheat had lost most of its advance.

With the slump in stocks focusing on volatile favorites, it was apparent that large speculative holdings, presumably of the group variety, had been dumped, for one reason or another.

Distillery Stocks Drop.

National distillers products flopped 8½, closing about a point above the low. U. S. Industrial Alchocol, American Commercial Alcohol, Commercial Solvents and Schenley closed 2⅝ to 7¼ lower.

Celanese and Johns-Manville lost more than 4 and U. S. Smelting slumped 6⅝. Allied Chemical struck an airpocket that gave it an extreme loss of 10 points. Two of which were recovered.

Declines in U. S. Steel, General Motors, Chrysler, American Can, Bethlehem, General Electric, Sears Roebuck, Southern Pacific, Baltimore & Ohio, Santa Fe and Standard Oil of New Jersey ranged from fractions to about 1½. American Telephone yielded nearly 3 net, while Case, National Biscuit and Union Pacific had slightly larger losses.

Trade Trends.

(Associated Press.)

Rayon—It is reported in the trade that producers are substantially booked through December and will not open their lists for January until November 1.

Hides—There are indications of moderate improvement in the spot market, which recently has been very quiet. Tanners' inquiries are appearing more frequently and prices hold firm.

Gasoline—Active jobber buying, sporadic at the start a few weeks ago, has spread over a considerable part of the country, it is reported by market observers. The movement is said to be especially strong in the Midwest. Although quotably unchanged, prices are firm.

Salt—Predictions of an advance in the prices of fine salt have stimulated wholesale buying. Leading grocery interests are said to be well covered against future requirements.

Tin—Prices lost more than a cent a pound last week and fell to levels 3 cents below the recent high. Consumer buying became slightly more active on the decline.

Structural steel—September bookings totaled 38,692 tons and shipments 40,375 tons, according to the American Institute of Steel Construction, Inc. The former were off approximately 30 per cent from August while shipments were 20 per cent smaller.

Molasses—The market for blackstrap holds firmly at 6½ cents a gallon, North Atlantic ports, according to trade interests. Demand is said to be fair.

Flour—The price structure has shown considerable improvement in connection with Government wheat buying for emergency relief purposes.

Metal Prices Unchanged.

The Farm Revolt and Recovery

Is Time to Reappraise the Basis of Present Program.

By Ralph West Robey

Of the various serious aspects of the current farm revolt the one deserving most consideration from the long term point of view is the evidence it provides on the problem of creating prosperity by legislative fiat. The administration has assumed, and currently is working on the thesis that this can be done. Its whole recovery program, in fact, rests upon the idea that by establishing the proper organization in Washington we can exercise omnipotent control over the economic forces of the country and drive ourselves back at almost any speed we like to any level of prosperity we select. The farm revolt indicates that this is not possible. It should be convincing proof to even the most ardent upholders of economic planning and governmental manipulated prosperity that there are limits beyond which their ideas will not apply in a system of private property.

There is little reason to believe, however, that the revolt will be interpreted in this manner. Judging by the first statements of administration officials, especially those connected with the recovery drive, it appears that the disturbance is simply to be credited to temporary factors which will be ironed out in due time. None of them has reflected any recognition of the fact that the revolt is ample reason to question the fundamental theory upon which the recovery program is based. It appears probable, therefore, that instead, of reappraising the underlying theory with a view of making any needed changes, an attempt simply will be made to patch up the difficulties by putting more driving force back of various phases of the program.

Could Be Only Temporary Aid in Meeting the Problem

It should be obvious, however, that if the underlying theory is fallacious such a procedure will be of no permanent help. The best that it can do is temporarily to quiet the farmers and make them willing to wait a little longer for the fulfillment of the promises made to them in regard to the elimination of their distress. From the point of view of getting a lasting solution, it will accomplish nothing.

On the contrary, it will create greater problems for the future. The present disturbance is wholly the result of disequilibria caused by our attempts to create prosperity by artificial means. Through this we have made some parts of the economic system move faster than others, especially insofar as prices are concerned. Should we succeed in eliminating such of these disequilibria as necessary in order to appease the present demands of the farmers, accordingly, while continuing the same old policies, it would be only a matter of time until new stresses and strains would develop and there would be a new revolt at some place or other.

Our problem, therefore, is not one of trying to get the farmers quieted down while various phases of our recovery program are driven ahead with more force. Rather, the task is to overhaul our whole approach to the needs for recovery in order to devise a means for preventing the development of further such disequilibria within the economic system. If this is not done, it means that the future will be characterized by disturbances first at one place and then at another, with the result that our economic system will get more and more out of workable balance.

This Method Would Necessitate More and More Panaceas.

If there are such disturbances the pressure for greater and greater panaceas is certain to increase. We gradually would be in a position, in other words, comparable to that found in a country following the road of currency inflation. Thus every time one "solution" was devised it would create a dozen other problems for which there would have to be another "solution," just as in the case of printing paper money, every issue causes some people to fall behind in their attempt to keep body and soul together so that another issue becomes increasingly necessary.

On the other hand, if we will face the facts frankly at this time we may be able to prevent the development of future disturbances. To select this route, rather than going the way of currency inflation and price fixing as proposed by the farmers, will require a high order of courage. In the long run, nevertheless, it is certain to get us back to a reasonable level of lasting prosperity. Starting the printing press, or going into price fixing will merely lay the foundation for later trouble.

Bonds Display Firmness in Spite of Drops

Prices Slip Back in Wave of Selling; Trading Cut to $5,012,000.

New York, Oct. 21 (AP).—The bond market displayed a firmer trend in early trading today, but prices slipped back when the sharp selling wave hit the stock list.

Enthusiasm was low in most departments and sales totaled only $5,012,000, par value, considerably less than last Saturday's aggregate.

The average for 60 domestic corporate issues eased one-tenth of a point at 74.9. This average, at the beginning of the week, stood at 76.

Effect of Soviet News.

Dealers reported that announcement of forthcoming conversations with the Soviets looking to the establishment of trade and diplomatic relations between America and Russia was received cheerfully but with some reservation.

The unrest in the agricultural districts, however, was said to have been somewhat disturbing to investment sentiment.

Small gains were held by bonds of American Telephone, American Smelting, Canadian Pacific, Central Pacific, Cincinnati Gas, Goodrich, New Haven, Shell Union Oil and Union Pacific.

Losses of Fractions.

Losses of fractions to around a point included some lines of Alleghany Corporation, Baltimore & Ohio, Chesapeake Corporation, St. Paul, Chicago & Northwestern, Rock Island, Erie, Great Northern, Hudson & Manhattan, International Telephone, Missouri Pacific, New York Central, Nickel Plate, Pennsylvania, Postal Telegraph, Southern Pacific, Southern, Utilities Power & Light and Warner Bros.

United States Government securities eased moderately and foreign obligations were again irregular.

Bonds of France, Dutch Eeast Indies and Germany firmed a point or more. Swiss government 5½s lost 2⅝ points.

Colorado Valuation Is Down.

Denver, Colo., Oct. 21 (U.P.).—Valuation of the State of Colorado showed a decrease of 76.9 per cent for the year 1933. The valuation for 1933, upon which the 1934 taxes are based, was officially set at $1,178,967,503, as compared with $1,280,563,890 last year.

53,036 Pigs Bought by U. S.

Denver, Colo., Oct. 21 (U.P.).—A total of 53,036 pigs and sows have passed the Government's hog-buying program. A ratio short of the Government's original plan of buying one sow to every four or five pigs, failed, however, with the total number of animals having passed into the Government's hands including 1,083 sows.

Curb's Prices Sag Slightly in Alcohol Break

Losses Held to Moderate Bounds; Sales Total 163,000 Shares.

New York, Oct. 21 (AP).—Selling again flared up on the curb market after initial steadiness today. Several sharp drops were recorded in alcohols and metals but otherwise losses were kept in moderate bounds.

Hiram Walker fell 5½ points while the recently firm National Distillers New, sagged more than 2. Newmont Mining lost nearly 3 while other metal trades eased fraction to arount a point. General Tire & Rubber and Aluminum Co. of America suffered major declines in light dealings, but Singer Manufacturing was up 8½ points net on a few transfers.

Utilities and oils conceded fractions to a ponit or more lower included, Electric Bond & Share, American Gas & Electric, Axton Fisher, Gulf Oil, Dow Chemical, Pittsburgh Plate Glass and Technicolor.

Transfers approximated 163,000 shares compared with 125,000 for last Saturday.

Wall Street Briefs.

New York, Oct. 21 (AP). — Wall street hears that directors of Simms Petroleum Co. may consider the declaration of a small dividend at their December meeting. Last year a dividend of 25 cents was voted; it was paid early in January, 1923.

Dun & Bradstreet says production, distribution and consumption in the dry goods trade have continued so much above the level of last year that many firms are counting on ending the year with a fair profit. An outstanding feature of production is the rayon division, where manufacturers have been forced to allot their output to insure satisfactory deliveries.

For nine months ended September 30, Gannett Co., Inc., publishers, and wholly owned subsidiaries, report combined net profit after depreciation, but before interest, amortization and income taxes, of $859,906, compared with $778,662 for the same period last year.

Engineering News-Record reports highway contracts let during the week ended October 16 aggregate $19,279,000, the highest weekly award in over two years. Highway contracts of over $1,000,000 each were let in Texas, California, New York, Ohio and Missouri.

Accountants Hear Bane on Security Act

At their October meeting, held last Wednesday evening at the Mayflower Hotel, the salient features of the 1933 securities act was explained to the members of the Washington chapter of the National Association of Costs Accountants by Baldwin C. Bane, chief of the securities division of the Federal Trade Commission.

Mr. Bane said:

"The securities act of 1933 is one of the few pieces of permanent legislation passed at the last session of the Congress. The States have for years regulated within their respective domains the sale of securities.

"The more advanced European countries have had laws regulating the issuance and sale of securities, but until the passage of this act there was no legislation directly regulating the sale of securities in interstate commerce.

"The chief purpose of this law is to give to purchasers of securities the material facts about an issue they are asked to buy. It stands upon the principle that an investor whose savings are solicited is entitled to know just what he is being asked to do."

Uruguay Trade With U.S. Cut In September

Although Uruguay's export trade with the United States in September of the current year registered a decline of 20 per cent compared with August, it was markedly in excess of the total for September, 1932, according to a report from Vice Consul H. B. Wells, made public by the Commerce Department.

Declared exports through the American Consulate General, Montevideo, show that shipments to the American market in September, 1933, had a value of $304,197, compared with $388,025 in August and $74,212 in September, 1932.

Exports to the United States reached their peak in June-July, the following two months showing continuing declines, although the September total is still above that of May, in which month the first marked increase occurred.

The following products showed decreases in September compared with August: Canned beef, salted cattle hides, frozen partridges, beef extracts, pickled sheep and lamb skins, wool and fur skins. Linseed oil shipments registered the greatest increase in September, amounting to $108,014, or 50 per cent above the figure for August.

Foreign Markets.

(Associated Press.)

London—Very quiet conditions prevailed on the stock exchange today and there were few important price changes. German bonds and international issues improved, while the market was otherwise steady. The closing was quiet.

Berlin—After opening dull, prices on the boerse recovered owing to the strong demand for Reichsbank shares. The market closed well sustained.

Paris—Closed.

Reserve Chief May Join Body Of World Bank

Reports Say G. L. Harrison Is Expected to Be Active With Institution.

New York, Oct. 21 (AP).—The New York Times says the Federal Reserve System is expected to participate actively soon in the affairs of the Bank for International Settlements through the election of George L. Harrison, governor of the Federal Reserve Bank of New York, to the board of the world bank. Arministration and Federal Reserve officials have under consideration the advisability of Harrison's becoming a world bank director to succeed Gates W. McGarrah, recently resigned.

The world bank charter calls for the selection of the governor of the New York Reserve Bank as a director but the governor has never assumed the post because of a ruling by Secretary of State Stimson in 1929 forbidding it.

Cotton Spining Capacity Cut In September

Plants' Volume Decreases to 99.6 Per Cent During Month.

(Associated Press.)

The cotton spinning industry was reported yesterday by the Census Bureau to have operated during September at 99.6 per cent of capacity, on a single-shift basis, compared with 106.7 per cent during August this year, and 94.6 per cent during September last year.

Spinning spindles in place September 30 totaled 30,827,726, of which 26,002,148 were active at some time during the month, compared with 30,781,802 and 25,884,704 for August this year, and 31,545,832 and 23,883,948 for September last year.

Active spindle hours for September totaled 7,057,744,489, or an average of 229 hours per spindle in place, compared with 7,942,027,549 and 258 for August this year, and 6,866,031,482 and 218 for September last year.

Statistics for cotton-growing States follow:

Spinning spindles in place September 30 in cotton growing States totaled 19,081,940, of which 17,724,880 were active at some time during the month, compared with 19,034,376 and 17,719,278 for August this year, and 19,109,940 and 16,701,442 for September last year.

Active spindle hours in cotton-growing States totaled 5,250,796,417, or an average of 275 hours per spindle in place, compared with 5,835,279,902 and 307 for August this year, and 5,327,328,942 and 279 for September last year.

Active spindle hours and the average per spindle in place by States follow:

Alabama, 476,778,452 and 255; Georgia, 912,294,409 and 278; Mississippi, 53,184,400 and 242; North Carolina, 1,603,298,460 and 261; South Carolina, 1,797,335,887 and 314; Tennessee, 157,870,068 and 251; Texas, 58,610,701 and 216; Virginia, 152,038,978 and 235.

Argentine Imports Of Textiles Boosted

Argentine imports of textile products in the first eight months of 1933 were notably higher than those of the corresponding period of last year, both in volume and value, according to a report to the Commerce Department from its Buenos Aires office.

Total receipts in the eight-month period of 1933 amounted to 103,942 metric tons valued at 75,478,614 gold pesos against 85,637 metric tons valued at 60,692,647 gold pesos in the corresponding period of 1932.

From the standpoint of value, the report points out, textiles and textile products constitute the most important item in Argentina's import trade. During the first eight months of the current year the volume of Argentine import trade was slightly below that of 1932 while the valuation showed an increase of 11.2 per cent.

Power Production Declines in Week

New York, Oct. 21 (AP).—Reversing the trend of the past few years, electric output last week was lower than in the previous week. The gain over the 1932 period was narrowed to 7.4 per cent as compared with a rise of 9.3 per cent in the week of October 7.

The outturn, as reported by the Edison Electric Institute, was 1,618,948,000 kilowatt hours against 1,646,136,000 in the preceding week and 1,507,503,000 in the like 1932 period.

In the New England territory output was up 5 per cent from last year as compared with the previous week's gain of 8.4 per cent; Middle Atlantic, up 4.6 against 4.5; Central Industrial, up 9.9 against 10.5; West Central, unchanged against a gain of 1.3; Southern States, up 8.2 against 14.8; Rocky Mountain, up 22.1 against 22.8; Pacific Coast, up 0.4 against 2.7.

Detroit to Start Paying On Its Defaulted Bonds

New York, Oct. 21.—The first payment of interest on funded debt of the City of Detroit, exclusive of water and street railway bonds, since the city defaulted on its bonds last February, has been made possible through the collection by the Bondholders' Refunding Committee of $1,118,730 for this purpose. The City of Detroit has continuously paid maturing interest on its street railway bonds and it resumed interest payments on its water bonds on July 1, 1933.

The committee, of which B. A. Tompkins, vice president of Bankers Trust Co., New York, is chairman, announced today that funds collected together with additional collections which it expects to make, will be distributed pro rata to holders of bonds and notes who have deposited with the committee on or before December 15, 1933. Bonds and notes not deposited by that time will not be eligible to share in such distribution.

Cigarette Men to Pay 17 Cents for Tobacco

Bristol, Va., Oct. 21 (Spl.).—Under a marketing agreement which Secretary of Agriculture Wallace has signed with leading processors of cigarette tobacco, the processors have obligated themselves to pay at least 17 cents a pound for bright, flue-cured tobacco and to buy as much of this years' crop as they bought of last year's crop.

Tobacco for export is not included in the agreement, since tobacco costing 17 cents a pound could not be disposed of in foreign markets, but exporters have agreed to pay a higher price than they have been paying.

Oyster Market Slow.

Leonardtown, Md., Oct. 21 (Spl.). There is much complaint from the oystermen in this section of the low price of oysters and the slow market, the supply at this time being greater than the demand. It is hoped cold weather will bring about an increase in price.

Mexico Offers Openings for U. S. Lumber

Rehabilitation of Tampico and other Mexican areas devastated by hurricanes and floods should afford an excellent opportunity for the sale of American lumber, according to Assistant Commercial Attache R. C. Glover, in a report to the Commerce Department.

Early last month, Glover points out, an official decree removed import duties on building materials destined for the reconstruction of buildings damaged or destroyed by storms and floods. Because of this development, he declares, American exporters, notably in the Gulf States, should be able to participate in a large part of this business, especially in view of the existing shortage of seasoned stocks of native manufactured pine lumber.

Wooden structures in Tampico and adjoining villages, the report states, are either totally destroyed or so badly damaged that most of them will have to be rebuilt. While some lumber can undoubtedly be salvaged, requirements for the construction of the better type of wooden residences will have to depend on new stocks.

In addition to the destruction of residences and business buildings, heavy damage was also done to the oil-producing companies around Tampico, and these also will be in the market for various types of lumber, it is pointed out.

Furniture Maker Finds Model Chair in Virginia

Fredericksburg, Va., Oct. 21 (Spl.). An antique chair which the Grand Rapids Furniture Manufacturing Co. has been searching for throughout the country as a model for thousands of reproductions, has been found in the Fredericksburg Antique Shop. R. Lee Southworth, who is disposing of his entire stock at public auction on October 27, sold this chair to the furniture company as his first sale.

River Landowners Get Million.

U. S. Relief for Virginia Cattle Called Urgent

Bristol, Va., Oct. 21 (Spl.).—News that the Federal Relief Administration will buy $15,000,000 worth of beef and butter is good news indeed to cattlemen of southwest Virginia and east Tennessee, said Farm Agent G. C. Baker, of Sullivan County, yesterday.

It is, however, urgent to an extreme, he said, that the administration move at once; that unless cattle prices are quickly boosted many graziers will be beyond relief. "There is no grass, pastures are burned up and men are feeding their cattle just as though it were January," he said.

Dried Fruits Steady.

U. S. Building Rises Sharply In September

New York, Oct. 21 (AP).—F. W. Dodge Corporation today reported that September construction contracts in States east of the Rocky Mountains amounted to $122,615,700, an increase of nearly 16 per cent over the August total of $106,131,100 and but slightly below the September, 1932, total of $127,526,700.

The largest gain was made in public works, which had a September total of $57,323,800 against $32,002,500 for August.

Nonresidential building amounted to $37,977,300, compared with $32,796,600 for August; residential construction started in September totaled $23,889,900, compared with $21,937,000 for August; public utilities contracts for the month were $3,425,300 against $19,395,000 for August and $4,522,700 for September, 1932.

The corporation reported new construction projects planned in September amounted to $846,726,700, the largest monthly total since April, 1930.

Disposes of Crop in One Day.

Cedar Springs, Mich., Oct. 21 (U.P.). Clinton Middleton, Cedar Springs farmer, set a new record for disposing of his bean crop this year. He pulled, hauled, threshed and marketed the crop in one day.

Repeal in St. Louis Booms Breweries

St. Louis, Oct. 21 (U.P.).—Prohibition's apparent failure is adding much to this city's industrial scenery.

Beer, which legally made its appearance last April, has become a leading industry here. And beer has stimulated the output of pretzel factories.

Now, with the eighteenth amendment nearly removed from the Constitution, distilleries are coming into the industrial horizon.

In recent weeks 13 new breweries have come into existence. Four distilling companies have been organized recently.

Pretzel factories, running on part-time schedules for many years, now are functioning at full capacity.

Paris Autograph Mart Offers Rare Bargains

Paris Oct. 21 (U.P.).—Signatures of past Kings have been collected for the Paris market and autograph collectors now may bid for some of the rarer relics of their fancy.

Letters and parchments of famed Henry IV may be had for 175 to 200 francs; Louis XIV for 2,000 francs; Louis XVI for 350, showing that some Kings wrote more letters than others did. There is a love-letter by Catherine de Medici offered for 400 francs. The same price is asked for a note of apology by Charles Dickens.

Wheat Climbs On Prospect of Roosevelt Aid

Prices Shoot Upward After Setback; Corn Joins in Advance.

Chicago, Oct. 21 (AP).—Grain prices took a strong upward course early today. Optimism regarding an address by President Roosevelt tomorrow night had a decidedly stimulating effect. Opening 1 to 2 cents up, wheat afterward wavered a little, and then rose higher than before. Corn started at ⅝ to 1¼ gain and continued to mount.

Wheat quickly scored 2½ cents advance, chiefly on account of general belief among traders that President Roosevelt would talk of agricultural conditions and also that he might give a more definite outline of the administration's monetary program. Notice was taken, too, of Liverpool dispatches saying United States farmers' strike news was attracting attention overseas, and had contributed to price advances in Great Britain. On the other hand, cables reported cooler weather in Australia and rains in Argentina.

Selling pressure in wheat broadened late, and at one stage more than wiped out early gains. The increased selling was partly due to profit taking, but was also attributed largely to sharp setbacks which were witnessed in securities. United States Government purchasing of wheat today was chiefly apparent at around the start. Corn and oats displayed relative strength, as compared with wheat. Weather conditions were unfavorable for corn movement.

Provisions averaged higher with grain and on possibilities of trade arrangement between United States and Russia.

Bank Clearings Rise Slightly As Week Ends

New York, Oct. 21.—Bank clearings, with the holiday intervening, again show somewhat mixed results, with a little better trend indicated in the late returns. The total for the five days this week for all leading cities in the United States, as reported by Dun & Bradstreet, Inc., of $4,410,420,000 was less than the amount for the week of last year by 11.3 per cent. At New York City, clearings were $2,973,532,000 and by the same comparison were below those of a year ago by 13.1 per cent, while the aggregate for centers outside of New York of $1,436,888,000 was 7.3 per cent lower.

The two weeks' record, thus eliminating the difference caused by the Columbus Day holiday, shows clearings 2.8 per cent higher than those of last year. The small increase was divided between New York City and many of the cities outside of New York. Only 7 cities of the 21 included in this week's return show an increase, these gains appearing for Pittsburgh, St. Louis, Kansas City, Minneapolis, Atlanta, Richmond and Dallas; at some of these, the holiday was not observed. This week for the five days, clearings exceed those of the preceding week by $253,699,000; a year ago for six days, the amount was $1,618,457,000 larger than for the short week before. Average daily clearings for the first half of October now are larger than for any other month this year excepting only July.

Figures for leading centers, compared with those of last year, are printed herewith; also, daily bank clearings for the year to date:

The New York Wool Top Service reports further seasonal slackening in the pace of wool goods purchasing as buyers complete their selections of men's wear fabrics for spring. Some mills, it says, are sold up for weeks ahead, while others report that they are "not sufficiently well booked to sustain operations on a double-shift basis."

Frederick Laist, vice president of the Anaconda Copper Mining Co., was elected president of the Copper and Brass Research Association today. He succeeds the late R. L. Agassiz, former chairman of the Calumet & Hecla Copper Co.

The American Beet Sugar Co. has made to holders of its 6 per cent debenture bonds, due February 1, 1935, an offer providing for payment of $200 in cash on each $1,000 bond and an extension of the remainder to February 1, 1940, at the same interest rate. Upon deposit of debentures, the coupon due February 1, next, will be paid immediately.

Trade Forces Policy Change, Bab Says

Financial Expert Points to Slower Upturns in Need of Adjustment.

By Roger W. Babson.

Babson Park, Mass., Oct. 21.—A decided change in sentiment is taking place in Washington today. This is the natural result of the change in economic conditions since President Roosevelt assumed office.

At that time business was stagnant. Since March average business activity has increased 27 per cent. Operations in some industries are at normal. Others, however, have shown only a slight revival.

This unbalanced improvement necessitates a change in the administration's economic program.

Consumer Industries Prosper.

Last March practically every branch of business was at a standstill. It was absolutely essential at that time to adopt drastic measures to revive activity immediately.

Going off the gold standard and the threat of devaluing the dollar frightened people into buying goods for fear the value of their money would depreciate; while the NRA made an effort to raise public purchasing power quickly. Naturally, industries engaged in producing consumer goods benefited most from these measures.

In other words, companies making shoes, clothing, automobiles, furniture, cigarettes, electric refrigerators, and similar products have enjoyed the best business in many months.

Producers' Goods Slower.

On the other hand, companies making capital or producers' goods, as they are called, did not experience a corresponding pick-up in orders.

These companies manufacture goods such as electric generators, railroad locomotives, steamships, construction equipment, and farm machinery. Measures which were adopted to stimulate activity in the "light" industries were just reverse of those necessary to revive activity in the heavy industries.

In order to show how much greater the improvement has been in consumer lines than in the capital goods group, we need only to examine the records of the various industries.

Recovery Reaches New Stage.

Since March, shoe production has advanced 30 per cent and textile activity has increased about 100 per cent. There were 63,000 more automobiles produced in September than in March. Employment in the radio industry is 77 per cent greater.

In contrast, there was only one locomotive ordered in September against none in March. Employment in the farm machinery industry has increased only 9 per cent. Construction volume, as measured by an index figure, is only 18 per cent greater than in March.

These figures clearly show that the sharp rise in consumers' goods activity has scarcely been reflected in the heavy industries. The business revival has reached a new stage. Since March 1 it is estimated that 2,800,000 workers have returned to their jobs—but around 10,000,000 remain jobless. Employment in industries making and distributing consumer goods is excellent. In fact, operations of the latter are nearly normal. The bulk of unemployment is in those industries making heavy machinery and other capital goods. Naturally there is a limit to the increase in employment in the "light" industries. The only further source of employment is in a more extensive share-the-work movement, but this will not increase the total purchasing power of the Nation. Accordingly, I believe further progress toward recovery depends upon a revival in the "heavy" industries.

Need for Courage.

The new program emphasizes reflation through credit expansion rather than inflation through currency expansion. Such measures as closed bank liquidation, Government loans to industry, mortgage relief to farmers and home owners alike, and the public works projects are all part of the new program. The securities act must be modified in order to coax private funds back into industry.

These steps are all laying a sounder foundation for restoring confidence in the gigantic industries which create both capital goods and prosperity. American industry has not passed out of the promotional era into the operating period. The pioneering spirit in the United States is not dead! I can not emphasize too strongly, however, the need today for courage, initiative, and, above all, faith and confidence on the part of all groups—rich and por, employer and worker alike.

Business, as estimated by the Babsonchart, now registers 18 per cent above a year ago, and 25 per cent below normal.

Baltimore Grain Prices.

Baltimore, Oct. 21.—WHEAT—Prices Friday were: No. 2 red winter, garlicky, spot, domestic, 85; October delivery, domestic, 85; November, delivery, domestic, 85¾. Receipts of wheat running light and demand limited.

CORN—For yellow and high-colored mixed there is a fair demand. Cob corn quoted at 3.00@3.25 per barrel for carloads prime nearby yellow on spot. Offerings light. Western yellow corn arriving here by car quoted at 54@55 per bushel with transit billing.

OATS—Demand fair in a jobbing way. Good, heavyweight oats are relatively scarce and such command a good premium. No. 2 old white oats, 39@42 per bushel, as to weight and position.

Note—On all sales of oats to the local trade, excepting those on track, there is an additional charge of 1½ cents per bushel for storage and elevation, which is paid by the buyer.

RYE—Stock in elevators, 22,738 bushels.

HAY—General hay market is quiet. No surplus of good timothy. Prices range from $12 to $15 per ton, as to grade and kind. The poorer grades of hay are hard to sell at any price. Market irregular on everything below 3 timothy.

Japan's Drive In Cotton Trade Hits America

U. S. Textile Exports Cut By Indian Tariff War; Benefits Seen.

New York, Oct. 21 (AP).—A quiet and determined drive by Japan for world-wide trade in cotton textiles has brought joy and grief to American business.

The joy comes from the possibility of increased sale of American cotton to Japanese manufacturers to replace boycotted Indian cotton.

The grief comes from what exporters say is a demoralization of the American export business in finished textiles caused by underselling tactics of the Japanese coupled with the higher prices that American exporters declare they must ask partly as a result of the operation of NIRA.

Japan Leads Britain.

Great Britain's century-old leadership in cotton cloth exporting has been usurped by Japan, whose exports for the first eight months of this year exceeded those of England, statistics of the Japanese Federation of Cotton Textile Manufacturers show.

And now American merchants are wondering whether our export business will be reduced tremendously by Japanese expansion with low-priced textiles. Walter S. Brewster, president of the Textile Export Association of the United States, says: "Japan has recently and enormously increased its sales of cotton goods to many Latin-American markets which have heretofore been depended upon to take a large percentage of such goods from this country.

"It is, however, absolutely impossible (for the United States) to retain this export business at prices to cover present costs of cotton goods."

Indian Tariffs Raised.

India offered England, which lost a great part of its textile export business during the war, a fertile field for sales. On non-British textiles, Indian tariffs recently were raised from 25 to 75 per cent.

Statistics announced by Shingo Tasuda, president of the Kanegafuchi Cotton Spinning Co., show that last year Japan exported 645,000,000 yards of cotton fabric to India, more than Britain herself sent to her possession. In retaliation for the Indian tariff, which Japan said she could not hurdle, Japanese spinners declared a boycott on Indian cotton.

Normally Japan took 25 to 30 per cent, about 1,100,000 500-pound bales, of the entire Indian production, figures of the International Federation of Master Cotton Spinners and Manufacturers Association indicate.

Today Japan finds herself with a tremendous potential surplus of finished textiles and at the same time faces a possible low-priced raw cotton shortage. Partly as a result of the first situation she expanded sales of her products in world markets at prices which American exporters declare they can not meet.

Export houses are appealing to Washington for aid. A subsidy, a bonus, rebates, trade agreements—all are among relief plans suggested.

After the problems of the exporters are viewed, there comes the brighter side of a possible 1,100,000-bale sale to Japan of higher quality American cotton to replace the lower quality Indian cotton.

American Cotton May Be Helped.

Alston H. Garside, economist of the New Yerk Cotton Exchange, says: "The boycott declared by Japanese spinners against Indian cotton * * * may prove important from the standpoint of foreign consumption of American cotton. * * * If the Japanese mills keep to their pledge to use no more Indian cotton until India lowers her cloth tariff, they will have to use American cotton in place of most of this."

Japanese manufacturers seem to be considering the possibility seriously. "If we buy American low-grade staple, our gross loss for the year will be about 6,000,000 yen," says Sanji Muto, president of the Japanese newspaper, Jiji Shimpo, and former president of the Kanegafuchi Spinning Co.

"This is no small sum, but it amounts to less than 1 yen per working spindle per year."

CHEESE—151,277. Firm and unchanged.

SUGAR—Raw, was quiet today. No sales were reported, although the undertone was easier with offerings liberal.

Spot prices were unchanged at 3.20, but it was believed that bids of less would have been accepted. It was reported that a local refiner has contracted for 40,000 tons of Louisiana raw sugar for delivery from November to February on a date of arrival price basis.

Futures were irregular and after recovering early losses, eased off partially and closed at 1 point decline to 1 point net advance. Sales were 20,300 tons.

Reports that the United States might recognize Russia and renewed talk of inflationary possibilities created some demand in the early afternoon and increased covering and new buying prices made net gains of 1 to 3 points. The failure of the spot demand to improve discouraged holders and full advances were not maintained.

Refined was quiet and unchanged. Refiners continued to list at 4.60 for fine granulated, but second hands were available at from 4.50 to 4.55.

Spot coffee dull. Santos 4s, 8½@8¾; Rio 7s, 7. Cost and freight offers included Santos Bourbon 3s and 5s at 8.00@8.70.

[illegible] cotton textiles has resulted in a boycott of Indian raw cotton by Japanese spinners and an effort to expand Japan's market for cotton cloth. As a result of this and other factors, say exporters, America's cotton textile market has been curtailed seriously. The map shows Japan's widespread textile market in 1932, the size of the circles indicating the relative volume of exports to each section. The boycott on Indian cotton some believe, may result in increased sales of the American product. A Japanese cotton spinner (top) and cotton loading scenes in the United States (right) and India (left) are pictured here.

Reserve Bank Reduces Acceptance Buying Rate

New York, Oct. 21 (AP).—The New York Federal Reserve Bank has reduced its buying rate for bankers' acceptances in the open market to one-half of 1 per cent for maturities up to 90 days, it was announced today.

The rate had previously been 1 per cent. The action was taken to bring the bill-buying rate more in harmony with the rediscount rate, which yesterday was lowered from 2½ per cent to 2 per cent.

Retail Distribution Encourages Brighter Outlook in Business

Fluctuating Wholesale Buying and Static Conditions in Industrial Activity Expected to Be Replaced by Improvement as Autumn Trade Reaches Peak.

By Dun & Bradstreet, Inc.

New York, Oct. 21.—Retail distribution held the spotlight in the favorable developments of the week's trade movements, as wholesale buying fluctuated from day to day with the vagaries of the weather, and industrial activity emerged slowly from the grip of strikes which had held many divisions prostrate for nearly a month.

More reports revealed a static condition of commercial conditions than for any week since the early part of May, with an attitude of expectancy replacing one of action, which now should be attaining its peak for the fall season.

The best returns were received from country districts where the larger movement of staple products, the receipt of Government bonus money, and prospects of higher prices for late crops have built up the largest distributive totals recorded for some time since 1929. Trade generally, however, reflects the relapse from the swift expansion during June, July and a part of August, and now awaits a major stimulus with Nation-wide repercussions to dispel the wavering confidence.

Change Is Expected.

While full cognizance is taken of the disappointment over the slow rate at which merchandise has moved into actual consumption thus far this fall, acting as a brake on general business expansion, this obstacle may be obliterated entirely as the holiday season approaches, with its spending-increasing tendencies.

On the whole, the general business situation is better than it was last year, and the slack reported in some lines may be attributed more to the absence of favorable weather conditions than to any uncertainty over the monetary policy of the administration.

The abrupt reversal of commodity price trends at midweek, under the aegis of the Government's broad buying plan, with funds provided by the Agricultural Credits Corporation, just at a point when declines had reached the largest total recorded for any single week in the last decade, had a bolstering effect on confidence which was faltering under the long strain of waiting for a resumption of the progressive movement which was interrupted suddenly in August.

Trade Hope Revives.

Encouraged by this unexpected move by the administration to repair one of the basic sources of current dissatisfaction, the growing realization of the manifold benefits which will accrue from repeal, and the determination to release funds long tied up in closed banks, hopelessness again is on the ascendency in most trade circles.

Reliance on future constructive developments are founded on the close watch now being maintained by the President on NRA accomplishments, and the strict observance of provisions which it has specified. Besides, a stabilizing influence on trade movements is potentially present in some of the momentous plans to be announced shortly as features of the administration's economic recovery program.

The nation-wide slowing down of productive operations appears in the leading industrial indices, the gain in electric power output over last year's comparative figure being reduced to the smallest percentage that has appeared on the record since the second week of June, although it has risen above the 1932 total for the twenty-fourth consecutive week.

Steel Yield Loses.

Steel ingot production lost more than it gained last week, the rate being at the lowest point touched since the end of May. Automobile production tapered off, as plants are making preparations to start on their new models.

The favorable indicators were confined to car-loadings, which reached a new high for the year, and to bituminous coal output, which rose abruptly, with the return to work of a majority of the miners after a strike of five weeks' duration.

The Business Activity Barometer, compiled by Dun & Bradstreet, Inc., has turned sharply downward, now standing at 62.2, as against 64.5 in the week preceding, which marks the lowest level recorded since the week of June 14. The barometer now has lost more than one-third of the gain registered between the end of March and the first of August. The current figure compares with 53.0 for the corresponding week of 1932, a gain of 17.4 per cent.

Food Prices Lose 4 Cents During Week

New York, Oct. 21.—The drastic liquidation and widespread declines in many commodities during the past week are reflected in the Weekly Food Index, compiled by Dun & Bradstreet, Inc., which dropped 4 cents from the previous week to stand at $1.88 for October 17. This marks the lowest point in this series since the week of June 17. This week's index likewise shows a decline of 20 cents, or 9.6 per cent from the peak of July 18. Comparison with the week of 1932, however, still reveals a fair gain, the increase amounting to 8.7 per cent.

The changes in individual commodities are mostly on the down side, with very few items showing increases.

The Dun & Bradstreet Weekly Food Index of wholesale prices (the sum-total of the price per pound of 31 articles in common use) compared with preceding weeks and years is given herewith:

U. S.-Canadian Wheat Exports Drop in Week

New York, Oct. 21.—Exports of wheat (including flour as wheat) from the United States and Canadian ports, as reported to Dun & Bradstreet, Inc., for the week ended October 14, 1933, totaled 4,120,238 bushels, as compared with 5,094,680 bushels in the previous week and 7,458,256 bushels in the corresponding week of last year. For the season, July 1 to date, wheat exports aggregated 56,005,639 bushels, as against 86,368,124 bushels for the same period a year ago.

Corn exports for this week were nil, compared with 1,000 bushels in the preceding week and 1,494 bushels last year. For the season, corn exports totaled 23,000 bushels, as against 604,228 bushels for the like period in the previous year.

Cotton Advance Is Trimmed to Small Losses

December Sells at 9.21 as Market Closes 3 Points Down to 2 Up.

New York, Oct. 21 (AP).—An early advance in cotton on trade and commission-house buying or covering, which was thought to be based on expectations of constructive developments in Washington and reports of a tightening spot situation in the South, was followed by reactions today under hedging and scattered selling.

December sold off from 9.37 to 9.20 and closed at 9.21, with the general market closing barely steady net 3 points lower to 2 points higher.

The opening was barely steady at an advance of 10 to 14 points, with active months showing net gains of 15 to 16 points.

Buyers seemed to be encouraged by reported Russian discussions and a possibility that further development was in prospect in the administration's agricultural program. After the early buyers had been supplied, however, prices eased off under week-end realizing and scattered selling, which was believed to include a little more hedging.

May Reacts to 9.52.

May reacted to 9.52, and while fluctuations in the late trading were rather erratic, closing prices were within a point or two of the lowest on most positions.

There was some comment on rather less favorable week-end reviews of general business activity, while the evenning up of commitments for over the week-end was probably increased by the action of the stock market and a tendency to await further developments in Washington. The amount of cotton on shipboard awaiting clearance at the end of the week was estimated at 176,000 bales, against 122,000 last year.

Cotton Seed Oil.

Bleachable cotton seed oil was quiet and after showing early gains of 4 to 5 points on active positions on covering and Southern buying prices reacted under liquidation with the market closing net unchanged to 3 points lower. Sales, 11 contracts. Bleachable spot closed 3.90, October 4.00, December 4.25, January 4.33, March 4.50, May 4.72.

Britain Plans Increase Office Supplies Duties

The United Kingdom import duties advisory committee is considering applications for increased import duties on typewriters and parts (including ribbon spools of metal and parts thereof), cash registers, adding and calculating machines, and other similar machinery now dutiable at 20 per cent ad valorem, according to a cablegram from Commercial Attache Lynn W. Meekins, London, October 12.

Applications to place diatomaceous earth and solid insoluble quebracho extract on the free list and to convert the existing general ad valorem duty of 10 per cent to equivalent specific rates on eggs not in shell, dead turkeys, pepper, raw onions, flower bulbs and raw guano are also under consideration by the committee.

Hockey Team Takes Lesson From British

Injury-Ridden Americans Rally Too Late in First 2 Tilts.

By Ware Torrey and Janet Owen.

With the United States Touring Field Hockey Team, London, Oct. 4 (by mail). — England has taken the all-American field hockey team to its hearth and heart in hospitality, and given it a sound licking in hockey. Out of a round of theaters, motor trips, splendid sights and festive dinners, the team has emerged twice to the field, and been twice beaten.

The South of England entertained the team at a perhaps too handsome luncheon at Worthing, and then ran them out 3-0 in the first half, though in the second the stalwart English were nailed down by Americans fast learning to a 1-0 gain for a 4-0 total.

This afternoon, after the most moderate of lunches, all-America met the all-English touring team of 1928. The first half might at minimum have been called a stiff lesson in aggression. It ended 8-0 for the Cardinal Red.

Memories flew back to the 230 goals that team scored on its United States tour five years ago, and to the total 2 American points scored against them. The team and spectators took heart. The team, moreover and more importantly, took its lesson. In the second half they held that same England 3-1.

Casualties Hurt U. S.

Three more English games await the team within the coming week. One will be played against the East, at Cambridge; the second against the Midlands, at Bourneville, near Birmingham, and the third at Durham, against the North, on the way to Scotland.

Three casualties have kept three good players out of the line in the trying English matches. Kitty Wiener, center forward from Philadelphia, strained her ankle in the North Wales match, but her actions in the match today proved her thoroughly recovered. Barbara Black, New York's representative in the back field, appeared on the sidelines in tweeds and an arm sling. Strenuous efforts to keep the South from doing too well afforded her a minor shoulder dislocation. Another player benched by the doctor, Virginia Bourquardez, of New York, is still recuperating from an ankle sprain which has kept her out of all matches since Copenhagen.

Anne Pugh, the team's valuable half back from Baltimore, who suffered the sharpest playing accident of the tour in the match against the South, was back at her usual decisive heady game this afternoon. Struck so violently in the mouth by the ball at Worthing that it took 5 minutes to stop the blood flow, Miss Pugh won cheers and applause for going on with the game at the end of the time out.

Schooling for Team.

The fifth sufferer of the week, Betty Richey, of Boston, has had a different sort of ailment—Virgil, Shakespeare, the Bible and Sophocles—college exams in the middle of a hockey tour. In the past week Boston's all-American forward has been spending two to three hours daily on the exams which were sent her by Radcliffe, to which she returns at the end of this month to become a senior. The exams were finished today.

Loss of the second half of the match against the South, 0-1, and of the all-England match, 1-3, after respective first halves of 0-3 and 0-8, tells much of the story of the two English contests. The team came over to win as many matches as possible, a matter of question, and to learn as much hockey as possible, a matter of certainty.

In Worthing, America's back, Anne Townsend, Barbara Strebeigh, of Philadelphia; Pugh, Black and Geraldine Thaete, of Philadelphia, again and again cut the ball away from the South and pressed past the center line. The fowards thereupon carried to the 25-yard line, or sometimes the circle, and there the attacks would crumble. England had fast running pass work, and their play throughout was organized. They scored three times to the United States' none.

Second-Half Rally.

The South passed deftly and hit hard and fast in the circle. In the last 10 minutes of the 35 the South finally broke through to score its fourth point.

The formidable English at East Dulwich ran away with the first half by means of their fast, sure passes and grilling pressure of shots on the goal. Frances Elliott, Philadelphia goal keeper, highly praised by the English sidelines, did what she could, but the shooting was too rapid and too clever to wall off without closer assistance from the backs.

Too late once more to show in the total score, the Old Blue proved itself a good student in the second half. Cardinal and Blue alternated attacks for 5 minutes. Then Albright and Lingwood carried from the 50-yard line in perfect form, and after two fine saves by Elliott the ninth English goal was scored.

Three minutes later America had its goal. A scrimmage at the English goal, with America's thickest shooting of the game, was climaxed by a perfect angle pass from Wiener, as she was tackled, to Vanderbeck, who put to use her newly strong shooting and achieved the feat of surprising the English goal keeper by cracking the ball past on an exact acute angle.

The English scored just twice more, once after five minutes, the last point after ten minutes, not at all in the last ten. Cross and Cadbury effected a number of excellent interchange plays and America kept up its new strong pace throughout. They could not score again, but the English had not walked away with a single moment of the second half, and the American touring team is better than it was before.

Playground Brings Joy High Above City Streets

Close Defense By Et Ceteras Beats Eagles

Hockey Game Score 6-0; Colonials Vanquish Websters, 6-1.

Air-tight defense and strong team-work enabled the Et Ceteras to shut out the Eagles with a 6-0 score on the Ellipse yesterday morning. Mrs. Charles P. Lukens, jr., put through all six points for her team. At no time was the ball in Et Cetera territory.

Playing on the Marjorie Webster school field, the Colonials defeated the Webster club by a 6-1 score. Counters were made as follows: For the Colonials, Miss Sproule, 2; Miss Hobson, 1; Miss Rodgers, 3. For the Websters, the lone point was shot by Miss Gwynette Willis.

The results of last Saturday's two games are herewith reprinted at the request of several followers of hockey who were unable to find them in these columns.

The Et Cetera and Marjorie Webster clubs played to a 1-1 tie at the Webster School field. Although the Et Ceteras were short four regular players, they held the excellent forward line work of their opponents to a minimum of scoring. Miss Jeanne Pearson and Mrs. Charles P. Lukens, jr., of the Et Ceteras, were the outstanding performers of the game at their respective positions.

The Colonials outplayed the Eagles, 8-0, in their game on the Ellipse in a fast game in the morning. Miss Agnes Rodgers scored seven of the Colonials' counters, and Miss Mary Sproule shot the lone point for her team.

The extent to which interest in the game is increasing in other cities is shown by an article on women's sports written by Lincoln A. Werden, in the New York Times. He says:

"Although field hockey adherents in this country and specially those who play the game in the metropolitan district have been watching the progress of the all-American team on tour in Europe, they have not limited their interest in the sport to observation.

"Field hockey is in full swing as far as the New York Field Hockey Association is concerned. Hereafter the Saturday games will consist of six contests, with all 12 member clubs taking part. With the addition of the Chelsea Club this year the roster has been increased to nine groups.

"Those who officiate at games must receive a new rating each year and all applicants must pass a written examination. Miss Yeend, of New York University, is receiving applications from those who wish to revise or renew gradings; also from members of school teams or faculties who are automatically eligible to receive ratings, whether or not they are members of the local association."

At the Chess Table

By Willard H. Mutchler.

The date for the appearance of Isidore Horowitz at the Jewish Community Center has been set for Tuesday, November 7. Ergo, ye chess fans, prepare to dust off the chessmen and hie them to the center to encounter the famous New York State and Manhattan Club champion in simultaneous play. Reservations for boards should be made by telephoning I. S. Turover, District 6796, or writing to him at 3909 Jocelyn street northwest. Since Horowitz is one of the ranking players of the United States, his exhibition should be worthy of attention. The fee per board for playing the master has been set at $1, with no charges for spectators.

Alekhine at Folkestone.

On his recent visit to this city, world champion, Alexander Alekhine, furnished your editor with several of his games at the Folkestone. As he called off from memory his game with Mikenas, played in the tenth round, I was impressed with his mental retentive powers and began to understand the ease with which he can conduct as many as 32 games blindfolded at simultaneous play. For the game in question was one of purely positional play, with no combinative landmarks to fix the score in his memory. Before he encountered Mikenas on this occasion, the Lithuanian informed him that he was going to undertake a Fianchetto del Rei, with the purpose in view of discovering how the champion would proceed with the building up of an attack against defensive maneuvers. And the game which follows shows that Alekhine did so by pyramiding minute theoretical positional advantages until they aggregated the required total.

Solutions to Problems.

The key to No. 550, two-mover by J. J. O'Keefe, is Kt-Q2. Among those submitting corect solutions were J. W. Harris, Fred T. Hafelfinger and Jacob Frech. The latter writes, "Problem 550 generates about 300,000 series. Its relevant syllogistic middle term is: A problem in which white can force one of the following only series of quickest forced mates: 1 Kt-Q2; 2 Q-Q7 or B4 or 6 or R-K5 or B-B3."

Hockey Schedule Here Made Public

Contest Games Played Next 3 Saturdays.

To encourage further interest in field hockey for women, four allied members of the Washington Field Hockey Association have drawn up an interesting schedule of 12 contest games to be played on the next three Saturdays. From the most outstanding players in these games will be chosen in November an honorary inter-private-school hockey team, according to Miss Miriam Spaulding, publicity director of the association.

Color teams, not varsity, representing an alliance of the National Cathedral, Holton-Arms, Mount Vernon and Madiera Schools, will compete in these games. On each of three Saturdays—Oct. 28, Nov. 4 and Nov. 11—four games will be played—a total of 12.

Two teams have been formed representing each school in the alliance, and one of these will play at home and one elsewhere on the game days; thus each school will have played three times. Since the Holton-Arms School has no hockey field, there will be double-headers on their opponents fields the days they are scheduled to compete.

South Wales To Make "Gas"

New Oil Plants Will Aid Idle Miners; Coal to Be Utilized.

Cardiff, Wales, Oct. 21 (AP).—South Wales' unemployment burden will be considerably alleviated if a new gasoline-from-coal crystallizes.

The scheme, which was discussed at a conference of the South Wales Industrial Development Council, provides for construction of one hydrogenation plant and ten 1,000-ton low temperature carbonization plants in the South Wales coal district at a cost of £7,000,000 (about $35,000,000 at par).

The hydrogenation plant would produce 100,000 tons of gasoline a year, using 365,000 tons of coal, and give permanent employment to 1,000 miners and 1,500 process workers. Fifteen thousand men also would find temporary employment for a year.

In addition, ten 1,000-ton low temperature carbonization plants producing oil from coal would find permanent employment for 5,400 men and temporary work for 12,000 for a year.

Hitler Gains If Hindenburg Resigns Office

Move Would Force Out Nationalist Leaders Now in Cabinet.

By William Harlan Hale.

Whether the coming German elections, scheduled for November 12, will result in the resignation of President von Hindenburg and the appearance of more Nazi characters on the scene, is a question that is being asked widely throughout Europe.

The retirement of the field marshal at this time would perturb few persons; but it seems clear that if he goes, the rest of his group of Nationalists, Junkers and conservative diplomats may go, too, thus leaving only Nazi leaders in government posts.

Three key posts in the German cabinet are still held by non-Nazis: The foreign minister, Von Neurath, is a Nationalist, and so is the finance minister, Von Krosigk. The third of the trio is Von Papen, former chancellor and now vice chancellor. These men represent the conservative financial, business and agrarian interests.

Lean Toward Diplomacy.

Although disciples of militarism, they lean more to the use of diplomacy than to the use of force. They are opposed intrinsically to the program of anti-Jewish terrorization, and tend to be more moderate than the Nazis in regard to political opponents.

If Von Hindenburg goes, Von Neurath is almost certain to accompany him. There would be little reason for the others to remain. All three Nationalists became cabinet members on January 30, when Hitler was not at all sure of his power and needed the support of the Nationalist party.

Hitler's power is now complete, the Nationalist party is dissolved, and the presence of its three members in the cabinet seems like a diplomatic hangover.

Nazis to Gain Power.

The important question for the outside world is, what sort of men will take the central positions now held by the Nationalists? If these three resign, it is not probable that obscure Nazis will be shunted up into their posts; but it is clear that some of the Nazi leaders already near the top will assume much greater importance. Several Nazi names will become more distinctly heard beyond the German borders.

Two Nazi names already are known widely outside of Germany: Gen. Wilhelm Goering, premier of Prussia, minister of aviation, &c., and Dr. Paul Goebbels, minister of popular education and enlightenment. They are the Dino Grandi and Italo Balbo of German Fascism.

Goering carries out the Balbo parallel even to the extent of being the country's most prominent flier, with a high war record as a member of the Richthofen escadrille to his credit.

Known Through Photos.

Americans know Goering best through pictures, in which his colossal physique, his bundles of decorations and his ever-changing uniforms (designed by himself) show up to best advantage. They know him, also, through the recent revelations made from the records of a Swedish psychiatric clinic in which he was locked up for most of 1925 as a dangerous morphine addict.

Goebbels is best known for his recent press law, his edicts on the Nazification of schools, and his brilliant handling of his party's propaganda machine. Both men, of course, are widely mentioned as the authors of the Reichstag fire plot.

These two names are firmly established, and will not grow much in glamour unless some of the cabinet portfolios now held by Nationalists are turned over to them.

But there are other Nazi figures near the top; to wit, Alfred Rosenberg, Wilhelm Frick, Ernst Hanfstaengl and Ernst Roehm.

Records Unusual.

All of these men have very unusual records.

Alfred Rosenberg became known through his diplomatic mission to England this spring, when his tactics were so bold as to arouse from Lord Hailsham, in Parliament, the threat that England ought to use "sanctions" against Germany.

Blunt and intractable, he offened the British press and nation by his armament demands. Rather inadvisedly he laid a wreath with a Nazi swastika on the London Cenotaph, and made a bitter statement to the press when he was told that someone had tossed the wreath into the Thames.

He is one of the party intellectuals, with several books on the Nazi "racial purity" program to his credit. He is known in Germany as the Judenfresser—"the Jew-eater." Born in Esthonia, he had an obscure career with counter-revolutionary groups, and is now the confidante of "White Russians" and their like in Germany.

War on Liberals.

Wilhelm Frick is at present minister of the interior and not yet out in the international limelight. But he is the man who stands most emphatically behind the program of purging the country of liberal writers, professors and other "un-German" individulas.

He distinguished himself by being the first Nazi to come to power. As early as 1931 the Province of Thuringia elected a Nazi government and Frick became premier. His first important public service in that state—the historic haven of German arts and letters—was to remove some modern paintings from the Weimar National Museum.

Then he established a professorial chair in the University of Jena for the purpose of conducting researches to prove the superiority of the Teuton race over all others. He went into the public schools and tried to make the children say Nazi prayers. He is a gentleman to be watched.

Ernst F. S. Hanfstaengl is America's contribution to the Hitler movement. Scion of the great Munich art dealers' family, he was graduated from Harvard in 1909 and spent the war years here. During his internment he learned all there was to know about American publicity methods, and on coming home to Munich became the propaganda expert who advised Hitler from the very start.

Known to many Americans abroad, he has always been considered as a curious and amusing, but highly erratic, personality. He now is in charge of the foreign press relations of the Reich and is the rival of Goebbels in the field of publicity stunts. He, too, may be due for a rise—especially if more of the Goebbels stunts turn out to be international boomerangs.

Among the chiefs of the Hitler "brain trust" are Gottfried Feder, the original promulgator of official Nazi doctrine, and Leopold Pleichinger, the man who is supposed to have organized the "Burning of the Books." They, too, may no longer be satisfied with their comparative obscurity.

Heads Storm Troopers.

The last figure in the inner Nazi circle is Capt. Ernst Roehm, the chief of staff of the vast army of storm troopers. Some years ago an enemy published some correspondence which Roehm had exchanged with one of his storm troopers. Its dubious nature was obvious. Roehm never attempted to deny the fact, and several other moral charges were brought up against him.

Despite the fact, however, that his reputation has given the entire Hitler movement a certain taint among foreign people, Roehm has continued in his exalted position at the head of all Nazi men and boys.

All these names are less known now to the foreign world than are those of Neurath and Papen. But it may not be long until they come to predominate. It is interesting to know in advance what kind of people they are, since we may have to deal with them.

Prestige of League Helped By Nazi Bolt, Morley Says

Geneva's Political Power Damaged, but Moral Position Strengthened by Firm Stand; Kellogg Pact Receives Greater Importance.

By Felix Morley
(of the Brookings Institution).

Germany's notice of secession from the League of Nations, even though likely to be canceled long before elapse of the two-year notification stipulated in the covenant, is the most serious blow the post-war system of international organization has yet received. But it would be highly premature to call this action fatal to the Geneva system.

The decision of the Hitler government to withdraw from the Disarmament Conference would by itself have been damaging to the league. Coupled with the intimation that this refusal to participate will extend at least temporarily to all other league undertakings, the injury becomes much more disastrous.

Earlier in its sessions Germany temporarily withdrew from the Disarmament Conference. She could have left this time, making the valid point that it is up to the other great rowers to do some disarming themselves, without closing the door to constructive compromise permitting her return. But the coincident resignation from the league weakens the German thesis. It indicates that the policy of Berlin is directed against the whole machinery of international cooperation and is not merely a reasonable protest against the failure of others to fulfill their disarmament pledges.

Rebuke Nettled Nazis.

An underlying reason for Germany's secession is the rebuke which the Nazi regime received at the recent assembly sessions. It was there decided that the league should assume a responsibility for the protection of Jewish refugees from Germany. No amount of diplomatic wording could make this decision anything but an international condemnation of Nazi policy in this particular.

Naturally the German delegation to tthe assembly did not associate itself with this concerted rebuke, any more than the Japanese delegation associated itself with the forceful assembly condemnation which led to Japan's withdrawal from the league last March. But in each case the results were the same—resignation of the nation which had been unanimously denounced at the one effective bar of world opinion.

The league survived, and in some ways gained strength from the resignation of Japan. It can scarcely rally with equal facility from the German defection. The immediate international complications to which the latter gives rise are too grave. But at thi smoment of extremity for the organization which an American President helped to create, it should be noted that in facing Germany, as in facing Japan, the league demonstrated fundamental strength rather than fundamental weakness.

Courage Shown by League.

In both cases the assembly squarely confronted a great nation which had offended the moral judgment of mankind. In neither case was the offender, regardless of its importance to the league as an organization, allowed to get away with the assumption that power and pride justify transgression. So, if the league should be broken by withdrawal of two of its five permanent council members, both resigned within this fateful year of 1933, it will at least be in the record that there was no surrender of principle; that the flag was nailed to the mast at Geneva and was not lowered.

Accepting the German withdrawal as a definitive action, it becomes important to estimate its effects on existing international organization, and, in particular, on the relations of the United States with that organization.

The resignation of Germany does nothing to terminate the importance of Geneva as a central mechanism for international technical cooperation in such matters as public health, interstate commerce, narcotics control, economic and financial cooperation. In this technical field our participation in League work is pronounced, and doubtless will continue.

But as a political instrument League effectiveness is on the decline. The articles of the Covenant which provide for punitive action against an aggressor state seem practically valueless. They did not restrain Japanese aggression in China and they can scarcely be relied upon to restrain Germany, which means that the Disarmament Conference is seriously jeopardized.

Kellogg Pact Stronger.

With the League Covenant weakened, the Pact of Paris, developed and sponsored by our Government, immediately assumes increased importance. Under this treatly the signatory powers renounce war as an instrument of national policy. Though backed by no machinery, of enforcement, the Pact of Paris has been more universally accepted than the League Covenant and can not be denounced by those who have signed it. The United States, Russia, Japan and Germany, as well as the great powers which remain League members, are all signatories. And the United States has appropriately taken the lead in invoking this treaty whenever world peace has been seriously threatened.

Any demonstrated unreliability of the League Covenant, it follows, will intensify American responsibility in the cooperative effort to preserve world peace. If the first line of defense against war is broken, the second line, intrenched by our Department of State and approved, with only one dissenting vote, by the Senate, becomes more important. The likelihood of American consultation with other nations, in the event of emergency, is strengthened rather than diminished.

This probability is possibly increased by the interesting national line-up revealed by Germany's rebuff to the League. With a single exception—that of the United States—the great powers which have not joined, or have withdrawn from, the Geneva organization are dictatorships. This is true of Russia, of Germany and, in effect, of Japan.

Democracies Aligned.

With a single exception—that of Italy—the important remaining League members are democracies. That the League ideal is a loose federation of democratic states is shown in ways other than the wording of its Covenant. There is the fact that the last three nations to join up at Geneva have been Mexico, Turkey and Argentina. All of these stayed outside the League while dominated by individual dictators, becoming members coincident with the development of a democratic, parliamentary system of government. Another case in point is that of Spain, where fidelity to League ideals has greatly strengthened since the establishment of a liberal republic. Indeed, it is not easy to name exceptions to the rule that the further a country is from dictatorship the closer it is to the cooperaive program of Geneva.

It would therefore seem premature to assert that events in Europe will make American cooperation with what remains of the League more difficult. The balance of evidence is the other way.

If the League is tending to be confined to those nations which believe in democratic institutions, and is at the same time limited in its ambitions to consultation and non-military cooperation, it will be with League members rather than with those who refuse membership that American policy will most naturally find alignment. In a world divided between dictatorships and democracies the leanings of this country are fairly certain.

U. S. Closer to League.

The chief arguments against close American cooperation with the League have been: First, that we can not afford to risk surrender of a wholly independent national policy by subscribing to the Covenant; second, that the wording of the Covenant and the ideas of some of its sponsors seemed to lead toward the creation of a war-making superstate; third, that the Geneva organization is primarily designed for, and of utility to, the European nations.

Reflection will show that insistence upon complete independence of action in no way prevents extensive cooperation with Geneva in international issues of concern to our own well-being. It will show that the fear of a dictatorial League, if ever at all valid, is now utterly fantastic. And very little consideration is needed to indicate finally that, while of world-wide utility in a limited field, the League has no valid claim to particular effectiveness as a strictly European organ.

Stripped bare of pretense and of the misleading adulation lavished on it by too enthusiastic admirers, the League now stands forth as a fragile experiment in world-wide intergovernmental cooperation, in which present weakness and potential promise are about equal. Recent events carry no indication that there is likely to be less American support for an internatinonal organ of this character.

Associated Charities Aids Attend Session

Members of the staff of the Associated Charities attended the regional conference of the Family Welfare Society recently at the Strath Haven Inn, Swarthmore, Pa. An active part was taken by Miss Louise O. Beall and Miss Mary Porter, members of committees, and Miss Helen P. Story, reporter for one of the sections.

The speakers were Karl DeSchweinitz, executive secretary of the Community Council of Philadelphia; Linton Swift, executive secretary of the Family Welfare Society of America; Miss Ruth Hill, personnel director of the Family Welfare Society of America, and Miss Betsey Libbey, executive secretary of the Family Welfare Society of Philadelphia.

Chest Teams Preserve Unity Among Groups

Associates in Agencies Assigned Together for Campaign.

Organization of teams, each composed of board members of one particular chest agency or of some particular club, is one of the specialties of the Metropolitan unit in preparation for the Community Chest campaign November 20-29, according to Joseph D. Kaufman, chairman of the unit.

At present there are entire teams composed of members of the board of the Y. W. C. A., Christ Child Society, Girl Scouts and Florence Crittenton Home, among the chest agencies, and of the Junior League and Twentieth Century Club, among organizations outside the chest.

"We feel that there is especial advantage in getting an entire team composed of the board members of one organization," Chairman Kaufman said yesterday. "They know each other and also know the needs of the organization which they represent which, in most instances, is one of the more than 60 agencies supported by the chest. Teams composed by organizations outside the chest are formed through intense interest in the chest, giving them an esprit de corps superior to that found in a team made up of presumable strangers."

Workers Enlisted.

Organization of the Metropolitan unit is practically completed. All the area chairmen, area secretaries, division chairmen and most of the team captains were enlisted by noon yesterday. The workers enlisted to date are:

Area 1—J. B. Wyckoff, chairman; Miss Edna Schneider, secretary.

Division 1—J. S. Gorrell, chairman, and team captains: W. H. McCarty, Miss Emily Mackall, Mrs. L. P. Shippen, J. Leo Kolb, jr., Mrs. George F. Gebhart, Col. W. R. Pick and W. A. Snell.

Division 2—Mrs. John C. Freeland, chairman, and team captains: Mrs. John H. Davis, J. Austin Stone, Miss Bertha Marsh, Mr. Russell Selk, Mrs. William D. Harris and J. C. Freeland.

Division 3—Mrs. Casenove Lee, chairman, and team captains: Edwin N. Lewis, Mrs. Verne Simmons, Mrs. Ira Shantz, Mrs. Harrison E. Howe and Mrs. John Hagerty.

Division 4—Mrs. Thomas E. Robertson, chairman, and team captains: Joseph R. McAndrews, Mrs. Wright Clark, Mrs. F. G. Mitchell and F. S. Sanford.

Division 5—Lee D. Butler, chairman, and team captains: Mrs. Harry Hull, Mrs. C. Willard Hayes and Mrs. A. Staton.

Division 6—Mrs. Lewis W. Douglas, chairman, and team captains: Mrs. O. Howland Chase, Mrs. Cary T. Grayson, E. Cortland Parker, and Mrs. L. Corrin Strong.

Area 2—Frank Birgfeld, chairman; Page McK. Etchison, secretary.

Division 1—Mrs. J. V. Brownell, chairman, and team captains: Mrs. Allen S. Wolfe, Mrs. Pierre Bealer, Mrs. Ethel Lamond, and Mr. and Mrs. Roger Gallagher.

Division 2—Clark W. Stoddard, chairman; team captains yet to be named.

Division 3—E. E. Berney, chairman, and team captains: Mrs. Harry Spigel, Arthur O'Dwyer, Alfred K. Wimer, Amy Hunter, Alice B. Coleman and M. Reichaut.

Division 4—F. E. Rogers, chairman, and team captains: Charles Krey, Roy J. Klockinbrink, Dr. Raymond B. Hutchinson, and W. F. Studdiford.

Other Leaders Named.

Area 3—Allen V. DeFord is chairman and Capt. W. H. Bartlett is secretary.

Division 1—Dr. William M. Devins, chairman, and team captains: George L. Gee and Wilbur S. Finch.

Division 2—Julius B. Gay, chairman, and team captain: Elian Weinstein.

Division 3—Mrs. Harry Roller, chairman and team captains: William J. Toomey, Mrs. Martin Baum, Mrs. Carl Linker, Mrs. Edward Cafritz and Capt. Kenneth Howarth.

Division 4—M. L. Sperry and Henry M. Brundage, jr., chairmen, and team captains: Granville Gude, William Dyer, E. A. Sholl and Darrell P. Aub.

Area 4—George E. Keneipp is chairman and Boyd Hinds is secretary.

Division 1—J. L. Gelbman, chairman, and team captains: Adelbert W. Lee, Paul J. Dallman, J. M. McDonald and Mrs. Lincoln Roberts.

Division 2—Col. William O. Tufts, chairman, and team captains: George A. Simonds, Julius T. Richards, Mrs. W. Krechting and Theodore Mudd.

Division 3—Charles W. Pimper, chairman, and team captains: Edward D. Merrill, George Harris and Grant Leet.

How to Keep Well

By Dr. W. A. Evans.

Strychnine Poisoning.

Drs. S. Stalberg and H. S. Davidson report a case of strychnine poisoning which is of great interest from two standpoints. The patient, a woman, while in an automobile, took by mistake nearly two grains of strychnine in pill form. Becoming restless as a first effect of the poison, she started up the machine and drove away.

The effect of the poisoning on her muscle coordination becoming more marked, she ran her machine off the road and into a tree. The policeman who took charge of the wreck arrested the woman for drunkenness. She was tried and convicted on the charge. The point of interest here is that the restlessness, unsteadiness of gait and muscle stiffness which precede convulsions in a case of strychnine poisoning may be mistaken for an ordinary garden variety of drunk.

Some other peculiarities of this case of interest to physicians only are passed over without comment.

The second phase is the choice of antidotes for strychnine poisoning. It is the opinion of Drs. Stalberg and Davidson that most of the methods of treating strychnine poisoning, as found in first aid, emergency and home medicine books, are useless, and some of them are worse than that. They say the chapter on strychnine poisoning in all the books should be torn out as misleading. An almost new chapter needs to be written.

It is all right to provoke vomiting by the use of mustard water, by tickling the throat, or by giving ipecac, tartar, emetic, apomorphia or by whatever means is at hand. It is all right to pump out the stomach. The quicker these operations are done and the more thoroughly they are carried out the better the chance of recovery. Beyond that they do not indorse the methods found in the books.

They used, in this case, injections of sodium amytal into a vein. This was repeated. In their opinion, it saved the patient's life. They also used tribromethanol by mouth and also by injection, but not into the veins. They give it credit for helping to save the life.

May Be Hay Fever.

Mrs. J. L. writes: What would cause an itch and redness right on the eyelids? This does not seem to affect my eyes in any way.

Reply.

The cause probably is either hay fever or vernal conjunctivitis. There are several varieties of each disorder.

Lady Lindsay In New York For Few Days

Wife of Ambassador of Great Britain Will Return Soon.

Lady Lindsay, wife of the Ambassador of Great Britain, has left for New York, where she will spend a week or ten days before returning to the Capital.

The Ambassador of Germany, Herr Hans Luther, will go to Baltimore today to attend the commemoration services of the 250th anniversary of the German Zion Church. The ambassador will return to Washington late this afternoon.

The Minister of Czechoslovakia and Mme. Veverka and their family have returned to Washington after spending several weeks at their home in Prague. Mlle Nella Veverka, daughter of the Minister and Mme. Veverka, will be presented to society this winter.

The Minister of Canada, Mr. William Duncan Herridge, who has been in Ottawa for a week, returned to Washington yseterday afternoon.

The Minister of Persia and Mme. Djalal, who have spent the last few days in New York, will return to the legation this evening.

The Minister of China and Mme. Sze, who recently returned from England, are now established in the legation. Their young daughter. Alice, is attending Friends School.

The President of Panama, Senor Dr. Harmodio Arias, who is now in New York after a brief visit in the Capital, will leave by plane on Tuesday for Mexico City.

President Arias will fly from Mexico City to Managua, Nicaragua, where he will join Senora de Arias, who is the guest of the President of Nicaragua and Senora de Sacasa. Senor Sacasa was formerly Minister of Nicaragua in Washington.

The President and Senora de Arias will return to Panama together.

Senora de Zaldumbide, wife of the Minister of Ecuador to Italy and Switzerland, entertained at dinner last evening at her home in Sixteenth street for Mr. Benjamin Cohen, Counselor of the Chilean Embassy, who will leave Washington on November 4 for Chile.

Senor Don Ramon Padilla will leave Tuesday for Chicago to attend the Century of Progress Exposition. Senor Padilla will return to Washington about the first of next week.

Mrs. Ernest K. Lindly, of New York City, arrived here a day or two ago to join her sister, Miss Virginia Grimes, of Minneapolis, and during their sojourn they are at Wardman Park Hotel, where they are maintaining a suite.

Mr. and Mrs. Frederick C. Hill, of Los Angeles, are at the Shoreham for several days, following a visit in Boston.

Mr. and Mrs. George Benoit and their daughter, Patsy Ann Benoit, of Snowden Farms, Fredericksburg, Va., have taken an apartment at the Kennedy-Warren for the winter.

Miss Bertha Rogers, of Beverly, Mass., has returned to Washington for the winter, and is again occupying the apartment she had last season at the Mayflower.

Notables to Hear Thursday Concert

Mrs. Roosevelt Will Attend With Mrs. Woodin; Many Box Parties Already Arranged; Ambassadors Luther and Rosso to Be Present.

Washington society will make colorful Dr. Hans Kindler's first evening concert of the year by the National Symphony Orchestra, one of the gala events of the season. The concert will begin at 8:30 o'clock on Thursday.

Mrs. Roosevelt plans to go with Mrs. William H. Woodin, wife of the Secretary of the Treasury, and possibly accompanied by Mr. Woodin. Last year, it will be remembered, Dr. Kindler conducted Secretary Woodin's symphonic poem, "Covered Wagon Days." The Secretary's composition was also given recently in Philadelphia by Leopold Stokowsky.

Dr. Hans Luther, Ambassador of Germany, has taken a box and Signor Augusto Rosso, Ambassador from Italy, will attend.

Many box parties are being arranged and the following have already been announced: Mrs. Guy Despard Goff will entertain in her box Mrs. Davis Broadhead, Mrs. William Barrett Ridgely and Mrs. W. L. Pitcher; Mrs. W. W. Galbraith will have as her guests Mrs. E. B. Merryman and Mrs. Harry Taylor; Mr. and Mrs. William F. Hitt will entertain Mrs. R. H. Dunlap and Mr. Paul Wilstach; Frank Frost will be host to Mr. and Mrs. Richard Merryman.

Other boxholders at the concert are Mrs. Harlan Fiske Stone, Mrs. Eugene Meyer, Mrs. Christian Heurich, Mrs. J. Webster Dawley, Mrs. J. J. # Miss Strauss Wed To Mr. J. S. Taylor

Daughter of Admiral Given in Marriage at Brilliant Church Ceremony; Reception Given at Home of Bride.

Decorated with an abundance of white chrysanthemums, lilies, palms and ferns, and lighted with tall cathedral tapers, St. John's Church was the scene of the wedding yesterday afternoon at 4 o'clock of Miss Helen Livingston Strauss, daughter of Admiral and Mrs. Joseph Strauss, to Mr. James Spear Taylor, son of the Rev. Dr. and Mrs. William Rivers Taylor, of Chestnut Hill, Pa. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Leon A. Shearer, who was assisted by the father of the bridegroom.

The bride, who was escorted and given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of white satin made on simple princess lines, with the flaring skirt falling into a long, graceful train. Her voluminous veil of tulle was arranged in cap fashion and caught by several strands of pearls. She carried a shower bouquet of gardenias and lillies of the valley.

Mrs. Elliott Strauss was the matron of honor. Her gown of emerald green was made with a long skirt, and a short jacket with cap sleeves. The velvet turban with a brim of maline was of a matching shade. She wore eggshell colored gloves and carried a bouquet of tea roses.

The maid of honor was Miss Suzanne Williams, of Richmond, Va., and the bridesmaids were Miss Dorothy Sollers, Miss Elizabeth R. Roberts, Miss Eleanor Preston, and Miss Edith Grant. Their costumes were like that of the matron of honor, of a soft shade of green velvet.

Mr. William R. Taylor acted as best man and the ushers were Mr. Charles W. Elliott 2d, Mrs. Robert Merrick Gates, Mr. John Alford Hanna, Mr. Charles Alexander Hatfield, Mr. James Spear Hatfield, Mr. Edward Durand Mulligan, Mr. Russell L. Snodgrass, Mr. Elliott B. Strauss, and Mr. John Van Voorhis.

Immediately following the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents on Massachusetts avenue. After a brief wedding trip Mr. and Mrs. Taylor will make their home in Bethesda, Md.

Mrs. Edward Sonneborn has returned from a visit of several days in New York.

Miss Alice Fleming, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert V. Fleming, will leave next Friday for Wilmington, Del., to be the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Edward J. Ferriday.

Mr. Edward Ferriday, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ferriday, who is a student at the University of Pennsylvania, will go to Wilmington on Friday also, and that evening Mr. and Mrs. Ferriday will entertain at a dinner dance for Miss Fleming. On Saturday, Mr. and Mrs. Ferriday will accompany Miss Fleming and their son to Philadelphia to attend the Pennsylvania-Navy football game. That evening they will attend the Mask and Wig play, which will be followed by a dance. Miss Fleming will return to Washington Sunday.

Miss Fleming will be the guest of honor at a luncheon on November 2, which Miss Emma Tompkins, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Tompkins, will give.

Miss Eugenia Davis, Mr. W. L. Maule Wed

Ceremony Takes Place at St. Paul's Episcopal.

Miss Eugenia Stuart Davis, daughter of the late Mr. Alonzo Betrand Davis and Mrs. Davis, of Washington, and Mr. William Lloyd Maule, of Laconia, N. H., son of Mrs. Charles Edwin Maule, of State College, Pa., were married at 8 o'clock last evening at St. Paul's Episcopal Church. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Dr. Arlington McCallum. The bride was given in marriage by her uncle, Mr. George C. Stuart, of Alexandria, Va., and wore a white antique satin gown, made with a train, and her rose point lace veil was arranged in a cap effect. She carried a shower bouquet of gardenias, and a rose point handkerchief, which had belonged to her grandmother.

Miss Margaret Dey, of Norfolk, was the maid of honor in a gold satin gown, made along straight lines, with a hat to match, and dark brown accessories. She carried bronze chrysanthemums.

Mr. David Holmes, of Philadelphia, was the best man, and the ushers were Mr. William Henry Marbury, of Washington; Mr. Peyton May, of Norfolk, Va.; Mr. Beverly M. Coleman and Mr. Eugene V. Roberts, both of Washington.

The church was simply decorated with autumn leaves and yellow chrysanthemums and the ceremony was followed by a small reception at the home of the bride's mother at 2332 Wisconsin avenue.

Mrs. Maule is a graduate of the Misses Eastman's school as well as a graduate of Temple University of Philadelphia. On her paternal side she is a direct descendent of George W. Mason, signer of the Declaration of Independence and an intimate friend of George Washington. He built Gunston Hall on the Potomac and resided there untill he died. On her maternal side she is a great-greatgranddaughter of Dr. David Stuart, who was the first Commissioner of the District of Columbia.

Miss Goodwin Wed in Ivory Bridal Satin

United to Clivie F. Wilson in St. Paul's Episcopal Church.

St. Paul's Episcopal Church was the scene of the wedding yesterday afternoon at 4 o'clock of Miss Elizabeth Goodwin, daughter of Mr. P. M. Goodwin and the late Mrs. Goodwin, of Gordonsville, Va., to Mr. Clivie F. Wilson, son of Mr. and Mrs. C. F. Wilson, of Washington. The Rev. Arlington A. McCallum performed the ceremony.

The bride, who was escorted and given in marriage by her brother, Mr. Peyton M. Goodwin, wore a gown of ivory bridal satin, which was made on long flowing lines. Her veil of tulle was caught into a cap of the satin. She carried a shower bouquet of bride's roses and lilies of the valley.

Mrs. J. B. Lyon was the matron of honor. Her costume was of peach colored satin with matching accessories. She carried bronze dahlias. The bridesmaids were Miss Edna Blumer and Miss Leola Haufstatter. Their frocks were of pale green satin and they carried Jane Cowl dahlias.

Mr. George W. Wilson acted as best man for his brother, and the ushers were Mr. James B. Lyon, Mr. J. Tarbell Howard, Mr. Robert A. McPherson and Mr. Alton C. McAllister.

Immediately following the ceremony a reception was held for members of the bridal party and the two families.

Later Mr. Wilson and his bride left for a brief wedding trip. Mrs. Wilson wore a smart swagger suit of tweed with a raccoon collar and brown accessories. Upon their return they will make their home at the Pershing Apartments.

Mr. and Mrs. Harold Newman, who moved here recently, were hosts at a supper party early in the week at their apartment in the Westchester.

Mr. and Mrs. William F. Dennis have returned to Washington from their summer home in Harrodsburg, Ky., and are established for the winter in their home on R street.

Mr. Grace E. Chase, of West Hartford, Conn., and her son, Mr. William W. Chase, have been spending a few days during the past week as the guests of Mrs. Charles Lyman, who makes her home at the Wardman Park Hotel.

Mrs. Louis Simon motored to New York to spend a short time with her son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Merryle Stanley Rukeyser.

The marriage of Miss Janet Faville Armstrong, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Armstrong, of Kensington, Md., to Mr. Joseph Milton Fisher, of Rockville, Md., took place at 8:30 o'clock last evening at the parish house of St. Mary's Catholic Church, Rockville. The officiating clergyman was the Rev. Charles R. O'Hara.

The bride wore a gown of white satin, made with a tight-fitting bodice and cowl neck, and the skirt was long and full. Her hat was a white satin turban, with a nose veil, and she carried a shower bouquet of white roses.

She had one attendant, Miss Helen Hendricks, whose frock was of pale pink satin crepe, made with a tight-fitting bodice, and a long, full skirt. She carried an arm bouquet of long-stemmed pink roses.

Mr. Fisher had for his best man his brother, Mr. Prescott Fisher.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's parent's on Prospect street, Kensington. The bride's mother, wearing black silk crepe, and the bridegroom's mother, also wearing black silk crepe, trimmed with black satin, assisted the couple in receiving.

Later in the evening Mr. Fisher and his bride left for a wedding trip which will take them to Toronto, Can. They will take possession of the new home they are building next to the Wilkins estate on the Rockville pike, some time in November.

The Rev. Calvert E. Buck, hospital superintendent, invites persons interested in the hospital to the tea. Visitors will be taken through the hospital in groups.

Younger Set Plans for Gay Tacky Ball

Roller Skates and Wheel Barrows; Costumes in Many Colors.

"The Campbells Are Coming" can be truly said of the "tacky" ball tomorrow night at the Mayflower, as the young social set of Washington make their way to the garden, garbed in as many colors as Jacob's coat and varying in color from sun tan, high "yaller," and black make-up according to their particular tastes, for beauty does not count that night.

This is one evening of the entire season that the young set forget the formality of the usual balls and come dressed as ridiculously as possible. Prizes will be awarded for the worst costumes and the worst dance. Roller skates, bicycles and even wheel barrows, it is said, will be brought out for the ride to the party.

A real "mammy" will be on hand, too, to tell fortunes and will doubtless forsee many engagements and weddings for the "girls on the shelf" as well as the season's debutantes.

Rodon, the European dancer, will give a Parson Brown sketch to the tune of the Blue Prelude.

"The Night Will be Filled With Music" by a 13-piece Harlem orchestra, which will play until almost dawn. Sometime after midnight a "tacky" supper will be served that will be in keeping with the gayety of the evening.

Mrs. Evan A. Sholl, of 6312 Oakridge avenue, Chevy Chase, Md., entertained at a trousseau tea last Sunday in honor of her sister, Miss Agnes C. Fleishell, whose marriage to Mr. William H. Dahl will take place Tuesday, October 24, at St. Gabriel's Church. The Rev. Remiguis Flieshell of St. Bonaventures, N. Y., brother of the bride-to-be, will officiate.

Mrs. Thomas J. Burke poured tea, assisted by Mrs. William McCulley, of New York, Mrs. Charles F. Nix and Mrs. Edward A. Fleishell.

Mrs. James M. Doran, Mrs. U. G. B. Pierce and Mrs. E. J. Loring will be the guests of honor at the monthly bridge luncheon of the Women's Alliance, which will be held on Tuesday, at 1 o'clock. Mrs. Joseph H. Thomas is chairman and she will be assisted by Mrs. R. S. Bassler, Mrs. J. O. Bowen, Mrs. B. C. Waldenmaier, Mrs. H. E. Fake, Mrs. V. C. Swett, Mrs. H. H. Groves, Mrs. G. W. Berge and Mrs. A. Ertsgaard.

Young Democrats Plan Harvest Ball

Friday Night Affair Opens Festive Winter Season.

Members of the District of Columbia division of the Young Democratic Clubs of America will open a festive winter season Friday night when they gather at the Willard Hotel for the harvest ball, the first of a series of monthly dances planned for the division by the committee on social activities, of which Mrs. Helen Griffin is chairman.

Assisting Mrs. Griffin are Miss Helen MacCallum, Miss Madeline Williams, Miss Katherine Amidon, Russell Rowell and Robert E. Findley. John Slaughter and his orchestra will provide the music.

It was voted at a recent meeting that the proceeds of this and other dances shall be diverted to a special fund, created to reduce a deficit. A check for a substantial sum was forwarded last week to Raymond Kirchdrofer, treasurer, and another will be sent in November.

Initial Dance At Annapolis Draws Society

Dinner Parties Mark Start of Fall Term at Academy.

Annapolis, Md., Oct. 21 (Spl.)—Matrons, as well as members of the younger social set of the Naval Academy and Annapolis, were out in force Tuesday night for the first of the series of dances of the year, given by officers assigned to the reservation.

The dance was the outstanding event on the week's calendar. Guests were received by Mrs. Hart, wife of Rear Admiral Thomas C. Hart, superintendent, and Capt. Ralston S. Holmes, commandant of midshipmen.

Numerous dinner and supper parties were given preceding the affair. Admiral and Mrs. Hart were hosts to a number of friends at dinner, and Miss Sally Holmes, daughter of Capt. and Mrs. Holmes, also entertained at dinner. Capt. and Mrs. Franklin D. Karns entertained 50 guests at a supper party at their residence in Maryland avenue.

The superintendent and Mrs. Hart gave the second of their series of public receptions Wednesday afternoon from 4 to 6:30 o'clock at their quarters in Blake road.

Game Draws Crowd.

The Navy-Virginia football game played at the Naval Academy today drew hundreds of visitors from Washington, Virginia and elsewhere, and the occasion was one for many family gatherings and informal parties for friends, given in the homes of the naval set as well as civilian residents of the city.

Among those who entertained at luncheon preceding the game were Capt. and Mrs. Turner F. Caldwell at their residence in the naval reservation. The luncheon was in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Gray, of Richmond, who are their house guests over the week-end.

Mr. and Mrs. G. Marshall Jones have returned to their estate on South River after a week's visit with friends in Kansas City, Mo.

Lieut. and Mrs. Alexander M. Loker announce the birth of a son, Donzell S. Loker, on October 10 at Emergency Hospital, Annapolis.

Mrs. Frank H. Clark, Mrs. Christian J. Peoples and Mrs. Schuyler F. Heim, of Washington, were among visiting guests at the meeting of the Naval Academy Women's Club Monday evening. They were luncheon guests of Mrs. Chester L. Clement. Mrs. Clark was guest speaker at the club meeting.

Much interest is being shown by members of the social set in the bridge tournament being planned for November 9 under auspices of the Robert E. Lee Memorial Association for the restoration of Stratford Hall, ancestral home of the Lee family in Virginia. The party in behalf of the local branch of the Maryland Chapter is being directed by Mrs. Charles Doyen.

Annapolis Roads Clubhouse was the scene of a number of dinner parties last Saturday. Mr. J. S. Bunting, New York City, was host to a number of friends, among them being Mr. and Mrs. Owen P. W. Owings, of Virginia Beach; Mr. and Mrs. Sylvanus Stokes, jr., Lieut. and Mrs. Sidney S. Bunting, Mr. Bradley Davidson and Mrs. Eleanor Glenn. Lieut. and Mrs. Earle H. Kincaid were hosts at another party.

Guests at Luncheon.

Mrs. Charles Parrish, Mrs. Charles Clark and Mrs. John Neill, of Washington, were luncheon guests on Monday of Mrs. Spear, wife of Capt. Ray Spear, at her home in the naval reservation. Capt. and Mrs. Spear entertained a number of friends informally at supper Saturday evening.

Capt. John B. Kaufman, Navy Medical Corps, and Mrs. Kaufman, have as their guests Mr. and Mrs. William Watt, of San Francisco.

Miss Lucy Reeves, of Little Rock, Ark., was guest the past week-end of Lieut. and Mrs. Earle H. Kinkaid at their home in Annapolis.

Miss Nyce Feldmeyer, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. George T. Feldmeyer, accompanied by Miss Constance Allen, of Washington, motored to Chicago a few days ago, and will pass two weeks at the Century of Progress Exposition.

Mrs. Underwood, widow of Commodore E. B. Underwood, has returned to Carvel Hall for the winter season, after passing the summer in Prouts Neck, Me.

Lincoln, Va.

Lincoln, Va., Oct. 21 (Spl.).—The Community League will give a Halloween party in the high school auditorium at 8 p. m., October 27. The annual parade in costumes will be held.

A disarmament meeting was held at the Lincoln Friends' meeting house Sunday. Miss Elizabeth Thomas discussed developments in the Disarmament Conference.

The Lincoln W. C. T. U. held a reception for the teachers of the Lincoln High School in the home of Mr. and Mrs. E. Bentley Gregg Tuesday evening. The teachers are A. O. Hutton, principal; Mrs. Lucille J. Presgraves, Mrs. Mary V. Kephart, Misses Edna A. Brown, Elizabeth Thomas, Celeste Whaley and J. F. Potts.

Mrs. Bentley Gregg will entertain the Purcellville Garden Club at her home Friday afternoon. Mrs. James Albertus, of Washington, D. C., will speak on "My Trip Around the World," and "A Short Stay in India."

Musical Program Features Woodside Women's Session

Civic Association's Silver Tea Series to Start Next Sunday.

Woodside, Md., Oct. 21 (Spl.)—A delightful musical program featured a meeting of the Woman's Club of Woodside Wednesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Vernon Emery and Mrs. Alden Emery. The latter, who is known professionally as Dorothy Radde Emery, played a group of compositions by Brahms. Songs were given by Norma Simonson, of Washington, and a piano duet was played by Mrs. Harry Elkins and Mrs. Emery. The latter also gave a brief sketch of the life of Brahms.

The first of a series of silver teas planned by the entertainment committee of the Woodside Park Civic Association will be held next Sunday afternoon at the home of the chairman, Mrs. J. Reginald Boyd. The affair will be from 5 to 7 o'clock. A number of benefit card parties at the homes of the various members also are being planned.

Mr. and Mrs. William E. Matter entertained a large company Tuesday night in honor of their son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Matter, who left the following day for Atlanta, where they plan to make their home for several years. Mrs. Elmer Matter, a bride of less than a month, formerly was Miss Kathleen Howell, of North Carolina.

Mrs. Arthur L. Blakeslee, of Highland Drive, and her guest, Mrs. M. F. Foerster, of Bluemont, Va., and Mrs. Bertha Ryan and her daughter, Miss Bertha Ryan, of Washington, have returned from a two weeks' motor trip to points in Massachusetts and Atlantic City.

Miss Alice Jones, Mrs. Walter Brown, Mrs. Charles Beall, Miss Anna Childs and Mrs. Ira Jones are in charge of arrangements for a rummage sale November 3-4 in Montgomery Hills, for the benefit of Grace Episcopal Church of Woodside.

Fox Hunt Season Opens in Loudoun

First Meeting of Hounds Is Held at Big Spring.

Leesburg, Va., Oct. 21 (Spl.). The meet of the Loudoun Hunt hounds this morning at Big Spring, near here, ushered in a season of fox hunting that will be followed regularly twice a week, weather permitting, by huntzmen throughout the fall and winter months.

Usually several hunt breakfasts follow the meets during the season.

Meets scheduled for the next two weeks are: October 24, Virts Corner; October 28, Belle Grove Farm; October 31, Ellerslie Farm.

November meets will be held at 9 a. m. as follows: November 4, Balls Bluff road; November 17, Cool Spring; November 11, Belmont Plantation; November 14, Robertsons Corner; November 25, Goose Creek Tavern; Thanksgiving Day, November 30, Purcell Woods, at 10 a. m.

The Leesburg Rotary Club was addressed Wednesday by Bruce McIntosh, president of the People's National Bank. Guests were Dr. M. B. Hiden, of Warrenton, and Dr. Richard Mason, of The Plains.

Oak Hill, the former home of President James Monroe, will be opened for the third time this season for the benefit of the Loudoun County Hospital on Saturday, October 28, from 9 a. m. to 5 p. m. Admission receipts will go to the hospital. This historic home is owned by Frank C. Littleton. It was opened to the public on two Saturdays in August and September. This Saturday and another, November 25, are the last two days in the series on which it will be opened. Mr. Littleton states the grounds will not be opened to the public at any other time. Oak Hill mansion was designed by Thomas Jefferson. President Monroe accupied the house on April 15, 1823. It was here that he wrote the famous Monroe Doctrine. Besides furniture used by President Monroe the present owner has assembled other pieces which formerly belonged to famous persons.

G. W. U. Alumni Home-Coming December 1

Two-Day Program Centers on Kansas Game; Radio Series Announced.

George Washington University's annual home-coming celebration will be held December 1 and 2.

A colorful program, centering about the George Washington-Kansas game, is planned. Many graduates from out of town as well as students, alumni and friends of the university in Washington are expected to attend.

Dr. Daniel LeRay Borden, General Alumni Association president, has appointed a home-coming committee, headed by James R. Kirkland and including university officials, alumni and students.

Dr. A. Curtis Wilgus, radio committee chairman, announces the inauguration of a new radio series, to be known as the George Washington University Radio Program, to be broadcast at 8:30 p. m. each Thursday over Station WMAL. Dr. George Neely Henning, professor of romance languages, will be the speaker on October 26. His topic will be "The Spirit of France."

Radio Speakers.

Speakers on subsequent Thursdays will be Dr. Robert Whitney Bolwell, professor of American literature and dean of the summer sessions, November 2; Dr. Christopher Browne Garnett, assistant professor of philosophy, November 9; Alan T. Deibert, assistant professor of romance languages and adviser to students from foreign countries, November 16; Benjamin Douglass VanEvera, associate professor of chemistry, November 23; Henry Goddard Roberts, assistant professor of public speaking, November 30; Dr. Samuel Flagg Bemis, professor of history, December 7. The University Glee Club will broadcast a program December 14. Dr. Edward Henry Sehrt, professor of German, will speak December 21 and Dean John R. Lapham, of the School of Engineering, December 28.

Prof. John Albert McIntire, editor of the George Washington Law Review, has announced three leading articles for the first issue, November 25. One, on State and Federal regulation of radio transmission and broadcasting, is written by J. Warren Wright, civilian engineer of the Navy Department. Leon H. Amdur, examiner in the United States Patent Office, writes on "Patent Litigation in Federal and State Courts." Henry Wolf Bikle, general counsel of the Pennsylvania Railroad, writes on "Administrative Discretion," dealing with the powers and duties of various administrative commissions. The issue will contain editorial notes by the student staff, recent case annotations, and book reviews.

Senator King Will Speak.

Senator William H. King, of Utah, will address a meeting of the George Washington University Chapter of Alpha Kappa Psi, national commercial professional fraternity, at 8:30 p. m. tomorrow at the Hay-Adams House, on present-day economic problems.

Mrs. Cloyd Heck Marvin, president of the University Faculty Women's Club, announces the following executive board: Mrs. E. C. Albritton, vice president; Mrs. L. H. Sutton, recording secretary; Mrs. B. D. VanEvera, corresponding secretary; Mrs. J. H. Taylor, treasurer; Mrs. DeWitt C. Croissant and Mrs. W. C. Johnstone, directors. Committee chairmen are: Program, Prof. Anna P. Cooper; hospitality, Mrs. D. H. Buchanan; membership, Mrs. John R. Lapham; publicity, Mrs. Dudley Wilson Willard; student relations, Mrs. William Allen Wilbur and Mrs. Robert Whitney Bolwell; newcomers, Mrs. John Alton Reed.

College of Law Alumni to Meet

Washington Association to Elect Officers.

The fall meeting of the Alumni Association of Washington College of Law will be held at the college Thursday, at 8 p. m. Officers are to be elected and plans for the year discussed. Harold T. Stowell, president, will preside.

Paul J. Sedgwick, active member of the association and a member of the college faculty, will talk. Mr. Sedgwick spent his summer vacation in Europe.

The freshman classes in both divisions will complete Tuesday the short elementary course in common law pleading under direction of Prof. Helen E. Jamison. Beginning Thursday they will take up the study of contract cases, David G. Bress conducting the course.

In the debate of the freshmen class held Friday evening, the question, "Resolved, That the National Recovery Act was wise Legislation," was argued. The affirmative was represented by William J. Armstrong, Carl W. Thompson and Walter R. Metz, jr., while Lloyd Mockabee, Miss Vivian M. Dustin and Gordon Singham.

Alpha Rho Chapter, Sigma Delta Legal Fraternity, is entertaining at an oyster roast this afternoon at the summer home of Nicholas J. Halpine, chancellor, at Selby on the Bay. Oliver Wendell Holmes Chapter of Sigma Nu Phi Legal Fraternity will hold a chapter dance at the college Saturday evening.

Sunday School Teachers Given Course at Howard

The faculty of the Howard University School of Religion will conduct a class for the Sunday School teachers of the city and for others interested, on Friday evenings at the Shiloh Baptist Church, P and Ninth streets northwest., beginning October 27. The course is the sixth in the standard leadership training curriculum issued by the International Council of Religious Education, which grants credit to those who meet the requirements.

Radio Waves and Ripples

When television comes along Annette Hanshaw (right) may be sorry she listened when the doctor said, "Drink milk!" Annette has added 10 pounds of curves already. John McCormack (upper left) has begun Wednesday night soloing for N. B. C. Columbia's Little America program director is writing continuity for "Mike," mascot of the Byrd flagship.

A TWO-HOUR concert by the New York Philharmonic Orchestra, Bruno Walter batoning, radiating to the capital through Columbia's WJSV, looks like the best of the network programs today.

From the moving music of the masters, this department probably would turn to the fundamental rhythms of the Frank Black Orchestra with Jack Benny wisecracks and Mary Livingstone.

More charity promptings will be radioed by both chains as the second Mobilization for Human Needs campaign broadcast, which will be the playing of a dramatic sketch of boyhood written especially by Booth Tarkington, and the speaking of Col. Theodore Roosevelt, former Phillippine governor, now Boy Scout executive. Broadway Juvenile Geoffrey Bryant tops the cast for the play acting. The hour is 10:45 p. m., WRC, WMAL, WJSV.

Whitecaps.

WJSV—New York Philharmonic, 3 p. m.; Ethel Waters, songs, George Beatty, comedy, 7 p. m.; Seven Star Revue with Tenor Nino Martini, Jane Froman, Ted Husing and the Vagabond Glee Club, 9 p. m. WRC—Russian Symphonic Choir, 1 p. m.; Jack Benny, Mary Livingstone, 10 p. m.; violinist, Jules Lande, tenor, Morton Bowe, 11:17 p. m. WMAL—National Catholic hour, 6 p. m.; Dixie Harmonies, colored quartet, singing close, 9:45 p. m.; Mobilization for Human Needs, 10:45 p. m. WOL—Sunday in Dixie, spiritual singing, 11 a. m.; Father Coughlin opens the season on Wall street, 4 p. m.; C. B. S. Symphony, 9:15 p. m.

Dr. John Keating Cartwright is the discourser for the Washington Catholic Hour, WOL broadcast, at 5 this afternoon from the Immaculate Conception Church. Soprano Florence Yocum and Barytone Fred Nolan, with the Boys' Sanctuary Choir, directed by Harry Wheaton Howard, again are the music makers.

WJSV is microphoning both of Columbia's Church of the Air programs at 10 a. m. and 1 p. m. Spencer Miller, jr., who wears the title, "Consultant on Industrial Relations of the Department of Social Service of the National Council of the Episcopal Church," is the lay speaker on the morning broadcast with "The Recovery Program and the Church's Responsibility." The Rev. G. Warfield Hobbs, executive secretary, National Episcopal Church Council, will conduct the services. "Where Cross the Crowded Ways of Life," "Once to Every Man and Nation" and Stainer's "Seven Fold Amen" are the hymn selections for a mixed quartet.

The Catholic period will come from the Cathedral of the Immaculate Conception in Albany, in charge of the Most Rev. Edward F. Gibbons, Bishop of Albany. Sermon deliverer will be the Very Rev. Joseph M. Noonan, Niagara University president. The priest choir of the Albany Diocese will sing "Ave Maria" and a girls chorus of 600 Tozer's "Praise to the Holiest."

Egon Petri, European pianist, makes his American air debut with National tonight at 8 with the Mozart concerto in E-flat major. A Frank Black symphony orchestra will complete the broadcast, which is to be a regular Sunday night N. B. C. feature.

Columbia's advice giver, who hides most of the time under the program title of "Voice of Experience," set a new high for radio letter receivers this month. His total for one week was 18,000, one day 6,500.

The Columbia statistics department has estimated that no less than 16 per cent of these, judging from the letterheads, were from professional and business men, corporation executives maybe.

"Voice of Experience" has been advice giving for eight years. In that time 2,000,000 letters addressed to him have been counted by some one.

This department has been pretty sharp about some of the so-called drama that's been getting the airways lately. That's why it's written itself a memorandum to be sure and tune in "The Drums of Oude," adapted from the effort of Austin Strong, "Seventh Heaven" author. N. B. C.'s press department rightly calls it "one of the most effective one-act plays ever written." We want to see that N. B. C.'s acting department makes it.

Henri Deering's piano is to radio Alneniz's "Tango," DeBussy's "Clair de Lune" and the Mendelssohn "Rondo Capriccioso" tonight, N. B. C.-WJZ, 6:30 . . . a melody of college songs is the Green Brothers Novelty Orchestra broadcast for tonight, WMAL, 10:15 . . . N. B. C.'s Dramatic Guild tries Ibsen's "Wild Duck" tomorrow afternoon at 3 . . . N. B. C. Mexican Tenor Ortiz Tirado has accumulated a large fan following . . . right here in the Nation's Capital . . . he sings Grever's "Tu, Tu, Tu" and "A Una Ola" Tuesday during the 10 p. m. broadcast. . . . Mrs. Roosevelt's Bryn Mawr College broadcast Tuesday night will bring her N. B. C. total to fourteen . . . right up to the President . . . the first Roosevelt Cabinet radioer is Secretary Hull, 10:45 Tuesday, night, N. B. C. Will Rogers comes back in an N. B. C. series next Sunday. Columbia's Jane (Seven Star Revue) Froman used to stutter . . . a movie producer cured her by making her read.

Hughes Instructs Class Saturday

Monthly Session Slated at College of Music.

Edwin Hughes of New York will conduct his regular monthly teaching session at the Washington College of Music next Saturday.

Mr. Hughes, a native Washingtonian, left the city 27 years ago to extend his professional career, achieving renown throughout America as a concert pianist of brilliance and authority. He is also one of the few American artists who have been able to establish themselves in European musical life. Going from Raphael Joseffy in New York to Theodore Leschefizky in Vienna, he remained in Vienna for three years, becoming assistant and friend to the greatest piano master of all times. His period of work with Leschefizky was followed by four further years of residence as a mature artist in Munich.

It is Mr. Hughes' ambition to establish a school of American-born and American-trained pianists who shall be equal in every respect to their European confreres. The principles of training which have led to the success of young artists he has trained form the basis of the course given at the Washington College of Music.

Our Heritage of Good.

Taken From the Christian Science Monitor.

In these days, when so many individuals seem to be experiencing a lack of good in one direction or another, how comforting and uplifting it is to realize that there is in reality an abundance of good for every one who earnestly seeks for it!

The Bible teaches that God is good; that He is ever present, filling all space; that He is omnipotent, having all power. Therefore, there can never be a lack or shortage of good, nor can evil, so called, in any form at any time or in any way overcome the almightiness, reality and universality of good.

Furthermore, these statements may be put to practical proof today, for one glorious fact about the Bible can never be disputed—namely, that every promise of God's tender affection and care for His children, every comforting assurance of His presence in time of trouble, every declaration of His ability to supply courage and strength to meet and overcome the seeming attacks of error, is applicable to each individual as his need arises; and each one can bring these promises to bear upon every phase of his human affairs, and can prove their truth by demonstration.

Where, then, is the necessity for fear of evil, whether it take the shape of discord, sin, sickness, lack, limitation or loneliness? The Biblical promises cover all the difficult and trying situations common to every-day life, and this heritage of good, untouched by mortal opinions and theories, is universal and free to all to draw upon unceasingly.

Even though uncountable demands be made upon these promises, they still remain undiminished, a fathomless well of inspiration, strength and power, at the present time and for the ages yet to come.

St. Paul's declaration, "In him we live, and move, and have our being," has perplexed many earnest thinkers, for it is impossible to reconcile such a sublime fact with the belief that we are physical beings, often discordant, sick, sinful and poor. With the coming of Christian Science, however, the mystery which has shrouded many passages of Scripture has been cleared away. In "Pulpit and Press" Mary Baker Eddy sets forth the spiritual facts of being which enable us to realize that we are now dwellers in Spirit, Mind. On page 2 of this book she says: "The real house in which 'we live and move, and have our being' is Spirit, God, the eternal harmony of infinite Soul.

"The enemy we confront would overthrow this sublime fortress, and it behooves us to defend our heritage." What, then, is the enemy which confronts us? It is the belief that man dwells in a physical body governed by five material senses which testify to sin, sickness and death.

This enemy of material sense would indeed claim to deprive us of our heritage of good; and how poorly barricaded are our mental forts unless spiritual understanding be the fortifier!

But we can rout this enemy through utilizing the method given on the page already quoted from, namely, "by intrenching ourselves in the knowledge that our true temple is no human fabrication, but the superstructure of Truth, reared on the foundation of Love, and pinnacled in Life."

In Christian Science the terms Mind, Soul, Spirit, Life, Truth, Love, are synonyms for God. Man, therefore, made in the image of God, is the image of Mind, a spiritual being absolutely inseparable from infinite Mind, which is Love, Truth and Life.

Who has not felt the longing for purer and more spiritual living; the aspiration after goodness, unselfishness and affection; the yearning to rise above the petty and sordid into the grandeur and freedom which characterized the life of Christ Jesus?

These spiritual tendences undoubtedly point to the fact of man's divine, eternal nature, the true spiritual individuality of every one of us, which is ever expressing the spiritual ideas imparted from divine Mind to man.

Whatever form error may claim to assume, let us cease attempting to combat it by mere human effort; let us strengthen our position by turning to Life, Truth and Love and clinging steadfastly to the true facts of being. Does the sense of unemployment worry us?

We can confidently affirm that man's true business is that of reflecting his Father in divine qualities; and as thought is persistently employed in the exercise of integrity, honesty, fearlessness and resourcefulness, such qualities are bound to be expressed in harmonious and useful activity in human experience.

Before divine ideas such as purity, holiness and goodness the enemy of sickness will retreat into nothingness. Sinful suggestions can make no successful opposition against the pure, wise thoughts of humility and meekness through which we acknowledge Love's allness.

When joy and gladness are allowed to enter thought, loneliness and sorrow flee away. Strengthening our position thus, persistently intrenching ourselves in the spiritual truths of real being, we may begin at once to enjoy our divine heritage of good.

Zetlin Offers Music At College Saturday

Emanuel Zetlin of the faculty of the Washington College of Music will play the first of a series of faculty programs, with Alvin Goodmen, pianist of New York, at the new studio house of the school, 1810 Connecticut avenue, next Saturday evening.

They will collaborate in the Brahms Sonata Op. 23, the Beethoven Op. 12, No. 3 and a first-time performance at least in Washington of the Ravel Sonata for violin and piano, published in 1927, which, while in conventional garb, contains the Frenchman's reaction to the jazz stimulus in its middle movement.

Mr. Goodman is a student and a former assistant to Tobias Mathay, of London, who has dedicated one of his books to Goodman.

Students' 'Dads' Honored Today By American U.

Dr. George F. Zook Speaks at Church Service Marking Day.

Dr. George F. Zook, U. S. Commissioner of Education, will represent the fathers of American University students in a special Dad's Day service at the Metropolitan Memorial Church this morning. The program, arranged by the Student Christian Association, is held annually.

Dr. Zook, whose son Charles is a freshman at the college, will respond to the tribute to fathers by Richard Buckingham, 1525 Twenty-ninth street, a senior. Dr. Chesteen Smith, pastor, will deliver a special sermon on fathers.

After the morning service the dads will be guests of the college at a dinner in the college dining hall. Fathers from several States and cities are expected to be present on the campus.

Bishop at Dickinson.

This morning Bishop Edwin Holt Hughes, acting chancellor of the university, will address the student body of Dickinson College, Carlisle, Pa., in a service celebrating the sesquicentennial anniversary of the college. Last Sunday Bishop Hughes spoke to the midshipmen at the United States Naval Academy in two services.

Extensive plans are being made at A. U. for home-coming day, next Saturday. A football game with St. John's College, of Annapolis, and an all-college dance in the evening, are the main items on the program.

Rehearsals for "The Mikado" are being held by the combined choral and dramatic clubs. The opera will be presented in the college gymnasium November 17.

Dr. George B. Woods spoke to the women's guild of the university Tuesday. He stressed the necessity of increasing emphasis on the needs of the individual students.

Party for Halloween.

A Halloween party is planned by the Student Christian Association, October 27.

Alpha Chapter of Phi Delta Gamma entertained at tea Tuesday and Wednesday for women students of the graduate school. Mrs. James Sebree, president of the chapter, received the guests, assisted by sorority members. Mrs. Lucius Clark and Mrs. Charles C. Tansill, honorary members, also assisted.

Dr. William R. Howell, American University class of 1929, represented the university at the inauguration of the new president of the Washington College at Chestertown, Md. He is registrar of the college at Chestertown.

The annual meeting of the university boardof trustees will be held on November 6 at 1901 F street.

Cabin John Citizens Study Fire-Fighting

Mass Meeting to Discuss Department Work.

Reorganization of the Cabin John Park Volunteer Fire Department will be discussed at a mass meeting Thursday at 8 p. m. in the Glen Echo-Cabin John School.

Invitations have been sent citizens by Donal L. Chamberlin, who has been authorized to study activities and financial condition of the department and to submit a reorganization plan.

A report on the activities and condition of the department, the fire underwriters' report and reorganization plan will be discussed. Citizens unable to attend are invited to write to Mr. Chamberlin, Conduit road and First street, Cabin John Park, to express their sentiment.

Episcopal Diocese Plans Convocation

Fall Parley to Be Held Wednesday in Rockville.

The autumn meeting of the northern convocation of the Episcopal Diocese of Washington will be held in Christ Church, Rockville, Md., Wednesday, according to an announcement by James E. Malcolm, of Capitol View, secretary. Fifteen Montgomery County churches are members of the convocation. Rev. Thomas D. Windiate, of Kensington, Md., is dean.

Right Rev. James E. Freeman, Bishop of Washington, will open the program at 10 a. m. with holy communion. Rev. Canon William Sheafe Chase will talk on "Moral Problems." Rev. E. B. Jewel, Red Wing, Minn., will speak. The convocation will discuss present-day problems.

Chanters to Entertain.

The Chevy Chase Chanters, under the direction of Herndon Morsell, will sing Wednesday at the grand visitation of the Chevy Chase and Singleton Lodges, at 4511 Wisconsin avenue. The chanters will meet Monday at the home of Arthur B. Ilsley, 5612 Western avenue, Chevy Chase.

MEAT COOKERY FEATURED

Because there will be special instruction in that most important factor of the successful meal—meat cookery—this cooking school will be especially welcome.

Come now, Fair Reader, 'fess up. Are you as good a meat cook as you should be, considering the fact that most meals are built around the meat course? Do you know that many age-old notions about basting, and searing, and such have been discarded in the light of recent cooking experiments? Do you know what to serve with a delicious roast of pork or beef or lamb to make the Perfect Meal?

Ruth Chambers, who will conduct The Washington Post Cooking School, is one of the most expert meat cooks in the country. She not only knows the HOW of meat cookery but she knows the WHY, and she is prepared to give you the full benefit of her knowledge.

WHAT fun there can be in this business of cooking and meal planning, if we just know how to make the most of it.

The Washington Post is going to show the women of Washington how really enjoyable this task can be! On Oct. 31, Nov. 1, 2 and 3, this newspaper will present the most remarkable cooking school ever conducted in this city. The school will be NEW, it will be DIFFERENT—

A merry Festival of Foods, with a perfect regimen of fresh Recipes and Sparkling Ideas for the Jaded Menu-Maker!

Ruth Chambers, a cooking school teacher of national renown, has been secured to conduct this school. Not alone is she a cook par excellence; she does not end her helpfulness when she prepares and shows YOU how to prepare these tantalizing and practical dishes! She is a household executive who will teach the women of Washington how to give themselves a New Deal in Diets. # What Today Means

"Libra."

If October 22 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 7:45 to 9 a. m., from 1 to 2 p. m. and from 6:35 to 7:40 p. m. The danger periods are from 10 to 11:15 a. m., from 3 to 4 p. m. and from 8 to 8:50 p. m.

You will probably feel uncomfortable and ill at ease on this date and this regardless of where you are or with whom you happen to be. It is possible that you will make a discovery of some sort regarding one of your family, perhaps of your immediate family. It will come as rather a shock, but as a matter of fact will be of no import as you will come to look on it.

The child born on this October 22 will probably prove to be the type that will generally be emotionally worn out; it will be difficult for this little one to keep itself under control. Sudden outbursts of temper, moments of sentimental gushings, jealousies and other emotional upheavals will prove a terrific strain. Inclined to be very nervous and will work in fits and starts; an unusual mind.

If October 22 is the date of your birth, you are more than likely one who is full of desire. You are ambitious, and being so, you see the numberless possibilities that are open to man, and you want to do too much. This tendency to scatter your fire will jeopardize your success, for with so many things in mind, you can not possibly do justice to any of them. Your mind is inclined to be clouded with doubt and uncertainty. You want to be successful, but you are often puzzled by the question of just what success is. You are a rather strange mixture of the spiritual and the material, and you seem constantly torn between the two. Make up your mind definitely whether you will seek to store up spiritual or material treasures, then go to it, and do not look back.

Born on October 22, you are aggressive and persevering. You do not handle yourself well when under restraint. Patience is a lesson that you will have to learn, and it is one that will not come easily to you. Yours is a sensitive nature and criticism, even when it is warranted, hurts you. You strive hard to get and maintain the good opinion of those about you, and when you fail to live up to that good opinion, in even the slightest way, you take it very seriously to heart. You are extremely conscientious. You are a naturally sweet character, with pure thoughts.

Successful people born on October 22:

Annie Louise Cary, singer.
James A. Gary, merchant.
Leopold Damrosch, musician.
Alexander W. Thayer, author.
John Forsyth, statesman.

Eastern Star Bridge Planned.

Naomi Chapter, No. 23, Order of the Eastern Star, will hold a benefit luncheon and bridge Thursday at the Masonic Temple, Bethesda, for which Mrs. George W. Laird is chairman of arrangements.

WASHINGTON: SUNDAY, OCTOBER 22, 1933

Renaissance of Historical Drama Distinguishes Week on Screen and Stage

The Sixteenth Century Again Takes on the Breath of Life

BY performing that primary function of the theater of "holding a mirror up to nature," both the stage and the screen during the ensuing week will afford tangible reason why even the most lowly and harassed victim of the current depression should rejoice that he is living in the present instead of the sixteenth century.

Both the drama of substance and that of shadow this week will emphasize the truth of the oft-repeated assertion that the most obscure of the modern chorus girls, living in hall bedrooms in walk-up tenement flats—if any such modern chorus girls there be—enjoy greater creature comforts than marked the lives of queens in the Middle Ages. Through the two dominant media of the playhouse, medieval days are brought back to life as object lessons in contentment for today's rebellious generation.

Not too much of the specific nature of his latest historical biography has been let drop by the Theater Guild concerning Maxwell Anderson's new play of "Mary of Scotland," to be revealed for the first time on any public stage in the National Theater tomorrow night. Since it reputedly deals with Mary Stuart's return to her native land after a brief 17 months as queenly consort of King Francois II of France, it may reasonably be expected to be peopled by such definite figures of history as John Knox, the Earl of Bothwell, Darnley, the Earl of Murray, and that numerous entourage that contributed either directly or indirectly to the passionate impetuosity that finally brought the regal head of Mary, Queen of Scots, to the block.

And since we are led to believe that that other subject of Mr. Anderson's contemplative scrutinies, "Elizabeth, the Queen," also is a pivotal figure in this later excursion into the court life of the middle sixteenth century, it is perhaps not too presumptive to expect at least a few of the other figures in Mr. Maxwell's earlier play to live again in this—Sir Walter Raleigh, Lord Essex, Francis Bacon, Lord Burghley, and perhaps some of the rest; or perhaps none of them at all.

At any rate, it seems a fair surety that "Mary of Scotland" will rehabilitate, with a degree of accuracy typical of the Theater Guild's habitually minute care in such things, a living and believable picture of court life in a period that was prolific in portentous events, honeycombed with intrigue, and in its very essence, absorbingly and picturesquely dramatic.

The action of the play necessarily is pitched in a time when cultural impulses were undergoing a vague and imperfect renaissance a scant few years after the world's emergence from the hazy obscurities of a dark medievalism.

It no doubt will reflect something of the lusty materialism, unscrupulous ambitions and bitter antagonisms, of both the spirit and the flesh, of the age that gave it birth. It can scarcely do less.

* * * *

EVEN so, and assuming that "Mary of Scotland" will weave a bold and highly colored tapestry, it can not, by the very limitations of the traditional theater of flesh and blood, aspire to match the expansive pattern and flamboyant tints of the fabric woven by another drama of almost the identical period coming to the screen of RKO-Keith's on Wednesday.

Antedating the action of the Anderson drama by no more than a father's life outdates his daughter's, "The Private Life of Henry VIII," by a strange coincidence, provides what might be looked upon as a prologue to the play to be given its premiere in the National tomorrow night. It goes even further than that. It not only affords an illuminating and authentic background for the later developments of Mr. Anderson's resurrection of a tragic figure, but it details with amazing clarity and frankness the vulgarities that were accepted as the proper social usages of a day that had as yet been unrefined by the inventiveness of man, or his dissatisfaction with the clumsy luxuries of an era so primitive as to be only a step away from life in the open.

In an earlier column this department has suggested that Mark Twain's "1601," a classic of vulgarity in the manner of Rabelais, obtainable only as a collector's piece, reflects with more than fair average truth the general tenor of small talk and social amenities at about this period in the English-speaking world's cultural development. "1601," of course, far outstrips anything that could be sanctioned for public exhibition in a theater, but at the same time it eloquently supports the contention that the acceptability of manners and customs of any people may only be properly judged from the viewpoint and habits of those living in the age in which they were prevalent.

By this standard of judgment, Charles Laughton's portrayal of the character, caprices and idiosyncrasies of King Henry VIII are in every sense defensible as on the side of accurate and painstaking delineation of traits susceptible of easy corroboration in the pages of history.

Bluff King Hal tears his food apart with his hands and devours it with the noisy gusto of a ravenous animal, tossing the denuded bones and unsavory scraps over his ermined shoulders to fall where they may. He belches thunderously into the echoing depths of his pewter wine mugs; he strips to the waist and throws the champion court wrestler in an impromptu bout to demonstrate his fitness to the fifth of his six brides, the lovely Katheryn Howard, and he causes one in other ways to recall that line in the passage relating to the same marriage in Cornelia Otis Skinner's revealing sketches of "The Wives of Henry VIII" to the effect that a hog wallowing in the mire is unconscious of his own stench.

All this is wholly and indisputably "in character." All this, furthermore, is done by Mr. Laughton with a fine intelligence and skill that mark his performance as one of the most impressive in the annals of the audible cinema.

It is a happy circumstance that both "Mary of Scotland" and "The brilliant Washington star of both stage and screen, who this week returns to the footlights from the cinema to assume the title role in Maxwell Anderson's new play, "Mary of Scotland," which will be presented by the Theater Guild for the first time on any stage in the National Theater tomorrow night.

Code Conference—A Picture, As Seen by Equity President

The following vignette of the NRA Code of Fair Practices for the Stage hearings in Washington was written by Frank Gilmore and appears in the October issue of Equity, the official organ of the Actors' Equity Association.

A LARGE room billowy with smoke . . . Men with brief cases . . . Executives bronzed by golf and beach despite the responsibilities of this fourth (or twenty-fifth) industry . . . Lawyers, competent and confident, carrying the threads of a dozen conversations with practiced ease . . . Labor leaders, products of a different school, yet matching wits and ambushed commas and holding their own even with these trained minds . . . Industry specialists, agile enough in their own element, but clumsy and slow-footed in this alien territory . . . A few earnest souls wearing the shining armor of a righteous cause . . . Poor enough protection in this jungle . . . Hundreds of men and millions of words.

The deputy administrator, young, clean-cut . . . His advisers, more specialists of the same stripe . . . The gavel raps . . . The hearing is on.

Witness follows witness . . . Frank, wily, specious, subtle, the administrator has a hard time keeping them on the trail . . . They all know so much and say so at such length . . . "The Code."

The Code! . . . Not a job for innocents . . . Fair words, lofty sentiments, peace and good will . . . Only the fairest practices . . . On the surface.

The Code! . . . Many a depth below the surface . . . Flagrant, long standing abuses ignored . . . Others condemned and condoned . . . Promises wreathed in flowery sentiments concealing the handcuffs of economic servitude . . . Selfishness and greed run riot.

A code formulated by monsters and villains? . . . Not at all . . . Estimable citizens, good fathers, affectionate husbands, loyal friends . . . Good men, according to their lights . . . But business men, running with the pack, obedient to its law.

So many ways of saying "I want" . . . So many herrings, red and rotten . . . So many fingers crossed or curled about a knife handle . . . So much more meant than meets the ear . . . Can not, Oh God, two men meet and reach an honest conclusion as to their own welfare and security? . . . Perhaps . . . But not a thousand . . . That may be the answer.

Code conference . . . As it was in the beginning, is now, and ever shall be, world without end, Amen!

Anderson Launches Companion Piece to Earlier Court Play

A NEW play by a Pulitzer Prize winner of itself would be sufficient reason for a liberal attendance at the National Theater this week. Under the aegis of the Theater Guild, there is no doubt that a capacity house will greet the Maxwell Anderson dramatic offering, "Mary of Scotland," when it has his premiere here tomorrow night.

It is, of course, now a matter of theatrical history that Anderson won last year's Pulitzer Prize with his "Both Your Houses," and also that he came very near winning it with his "Elizabeth, the Queen," a couple of years ago.

The urge to do another historical drama must have been quickened by the favorable reception his first offering received, and he must have gathered a great deal of interesting data at that time concerning the Mary Stuart who ruled first the French, then the Scotch, while Elizabeth reigned supreme on the English throne.

Historians have never been able to agree as to which queen was the abler, but Mary seems to have possessed a much finer and nobler nature than Elizabeth. She was a woman of higher courage, of greater conviction, more generous and confiding, than the virgin queen, and apart from her incomparably greater beauty and fascination, she was fully equal, if not superior, in mental endowments to the English queen. But while the caution and love of mastery always at the critical moment saved Elizabeth from her weaknesses, Mary Stuart had no such safeguards. She was periodically swept away, helplessly and irredeemably, by the rush of her purely sexual passion.

With an engrossing character like this for the heroine of his play, it is not difficult to imagine how Anderson must have reveled in the development of the three acts and seven scenes to which he has restricted its telling. There must have been available to his interpretative imagination enough material for a play of a hundred scenes.

Very little advance information regarding the exact treatment by Anderson of his characters and their doings has been vouchsafed by the Theater Guild, but it is natural to assume that the plot revolves around the loves, the ambitions, the intrigues, both political and personal, of the young queen, whose charm and inimitable grace were such that a poet of her day sang "her simple glance wher'er its magic fell made men her slaves."

The play is supposed to open with the arrival from France of Mary, to regain the Scotch throne, which in a rash moment she had renounced while intoxicated with the luxury and power of the French throne that she was sharing with the weakling, King Francois II, whose untimely death naturally brought about a change in rulers.

As if an augury of the attitude she might expect from her Scotch subjects, John Knox was almost the first to greet her when she stepped ashore. This formidable opponent, all through her reign, wasted no words or time in telling her that Scotland wanted none of her French manners and airs.

Lord Bothwell next appears, and from that moment on he is the nemesis who sounds her doom.

History is closely adhered to in showing her married to the young nobleman, Lord Darnley, who actually shares with her the right to the claim of the heritage of the English throne. But, as in life, Darnley is surrounded by nobles who hate him and soon is at issue with his wife, the Queen, for his vices and follies, and his collusions with her enemies.

Darnley is condemned to disappear, and, after his murder, Mary gives full and free sway to her infatuation for the person of Bothwell, which arrays many of the Scotch nobles against her.

She is married to Bothwell, which is the beginning of the end.

A most unusual cast, even for the Theater Guild to have assembled, is promised for "Mary of Scotland." At its head is Washington's own daughter, Helen Hayes, in the title role. As Bothwell, is Philip Merivale, star last year of "Cynara." As Elizabeth, is Helen Menken, but recently seen here in a revival of "Seventh Heaven." Then in prominent supporting roles are Fritz Leiber, Stanley Ridges, Ernest Lawford, Ernest Cossart, Anthony Kemble Cooper, Charles Dalton and many others.

First Concert For Children Next Saturday

The first children's concert of the season will be held on next Saturday, October 29, at 11 a. m., in Central High School auditorium.

Many thousands of youngsters are expected to attend this series of four concerts, at which will be explained by Conductor Hans Kindler much of the music that appears on the orchestra's larger programs at Constitution Hall, as well as the uses and possibilities of the various instruments which go to make up a symphony orchestra.

Other music especially suited to children will also be played. Saturday's program will be:

"Carillon" from Arlesienne Suite No. 1 (fourth movement) ..... Bizet
The Strings—Violin solo by Frank Gittelson
"Scheherazade" (third movement) Rimsky-Korsakov
(The Young Prince and the Young Pricess)
"Spring" (all strings) ..... Grieg
"Oriental Impressions" ..... Eichheim
Different musical instruments:
Solo for xylophone, "The Whirlwind" Greene
Everybody sing: "America, the Beautiful" Ward
"Entrance of the Beyards" ..... Halvorsen

This is the third season for these concerts, and they have proved a tremendous success. Attendance at both the four children's concerts as well as the four students' concerts, the first of which will be given on November 11, increased to such a degree last year that it was hardly possible to find a seat at any of them when the season ended.

The concerts are indorsed by the heads of the District public school system, as well as by the officers of parochial and private schools. They have been so arranged that the material played by the orchestra and explained by Dr. Kindler will fit in with regular public school music classes for the year. They are given on Saturdays so as not to interfere with school work.

Admission prices to these concerts have been kept at a minimum by the orchestra's board of directors so that the largest possible number of children would be able to benefit by them. A season ticket for either set of four concerts can be had for $1 or $1.50, and can be obtained either at the orchestra's box office in Garfinckel's or through any child's teacher.

Once Accountant.

Herbert Marshall, appearing in "Four Frightened People" in Hawaii under the direction of Cecil B. DeMille, started his career as a clerk in a London accountant's office.

Charlie Ruggles Is Newest of Ranchmen

Charlie Ruggles, screen comedian, has purchased a ranch near Hollywood where, between work on "Girl Without Room" and "Alice in Wonderland," he is remodeling the ranch house and installing a tennis court and swimming pool. Besides livestock, the ranch has 1,400 orange and grapefruit trees.

Period Music.

Many of the musical numbers played in "Cradle Song," Dorothea Wieck's first American starring picture, are from the fifteenth century.

Baby LeRoy Is Cast As Deuce of Hearts

Baby LeRoy, Hollywood's youngest screen star, is the latest to join the "cast of the century" in the screen version of Lewis Carroll's "Alice in Wonderland." The tiny youngster, who made his screen debut a few months ago and became a star in a single picture, will enact the role of the "Two of Hearts."

Unique.

"Alice in Wonderland," now being filmed, is unique in Hollywood history in that it has no hero, no villain, no sex and no love interest.

Drama Guild a Busy Group on Season's Plays

The Drama Guild workshop, directed this season by Raymond L. Sanford, technical director of the guild, is busily engaged in preparing the settings for the opening production, "The Perfect Alibi," by A. A. Milne, which the guild will present at Wardman Park Theater November 10 and 11, with a superlative cast of Washington players, directed by Denis E. Connell.

Edith I. Allen, graduate of several leading drama schools in the country, has designed the indoor set for this charming play in collaboration with Ethel Wheelwright, who is the guild's art director this season. Carroll Robb is in charge of the construction work, which is going on each Tuesday and Thursday night in the guild workshop, under the Wardman Park Theater.

These guild directors are being assisted by members of the producing group, all of whom are young Washington artists who are giving of their time and talents in the interests of this season's productions.

Following "The Perfect Alibi," the plays to be given will be Laszlo Fodor's "I Love an Actress;" Sidney Howard's "Ned McCobb's Daughter;" A. W. Pinero's "The Gay Lord Quex" and possibly Maxwell Anderson's "Night Over Taos."

Membership cards are now being issued for the season by the committee on membership, which is headed by Grace Peters Johnson (Mrs. John Otto Johnson).

Membership in the Drama Guild of Washington is open to all persons interested in the drama. The membership fees at $5 for single membership and $8 for double membership.

Marlene Dietrich Will Wear Czarina's Lace

Lace from a priceless gown that was worn in 1914 by the late Czarina Alexandria of Russia will be worn by Marlene Dietrich in her next picture, tentatively titled "Scarlet Pageant," which portrays the life of Catherine II. Josef von Sternberg again will direct the star.

Like Horton.

Edward Everett Horton, who plays a prinicpal role in "Design for Living," has received an offer to star in two British productions.

MARY ASTOR,
one of the screen's most beautiful brunettes, who will be seen locally for the first time in many months with William Powell and Helen Vinson in "The Kennel Murder Case," at the Metropolitan.

UNA MERKEL,
the attenuated and quaint comedienne with the Blue Grass drawl, who is seen in one of the important roles in "Beauty for Sale," adapted from Faith Baldwin's "Beauty," now at Loew's Fox Theater.

Tibbett Opens Concert Series Here Following Coast Triumph

ONE of the most spectacular series of operatic and concert successes ever achieved by an American singer is being scored on the West Coast this month by Lawrence Tibbett, barytone of the Metropolitan Opera Company, who will be heard at Constitution Hall two weeks from today as one of the attractions of Mrs. Dorothy Hodgkin Dorsey's series of Sunday afternoon concerts there.

Possibly Tibbett's greatest triumph of the season, so far, was achieved at Los Angeles a week ago last night, when he appeared in the great Shrine Auditorium there before a gathering of 6,000 persons in his last-season New York operatic success, "Emperor Jones," Louis Gruenberg's operatic adaptation of the Eugene O'Neill stage classic.

Tibbett's concert tour of the Pacific Coast has been literally a triumphant procession ever since his opening concert at Vancouver, British Columbia, on October 6, when he faced an audience that jammed every available seat and included 200 who occupied seats on the stage and nearly half that many more who were crowded into the orchestra pit of the auditorium.

Two nights later, Tibbett walked into the Seattle (Wash.) Civic Auditorium, which seats 6,000, to find every seat sold with over 300 in chairs on the stage and 250 more, the limit imposed by the fire department of Seattle, standing in the rear of the house. This Seattle audience was so enthusiastic that Tibbett was forced to give 15 encores in addition to his regular program—approximately two programs in one.

This is one of Tibbett's most marked characteristics: to sing as long as an audience wants him to sing. Young, strong and possesed of a remarkable vitality as well as a boyish delight in his vocal art, he frequently sings two concerts in one merely because he wants to please his auditors. Curiously enough, it appears never to exhaust him.

Tibbett comes East on November 2 for his opening New York concert of the season, after which comes his Washington concert the following Sunday. As soon as that is over, he heads back for the Pacific Coast again for he is scheduled to show his "Emperor Jones" performance to Frisco on November 17.

It is worthy of note that as far back as a month ago, the San Francisco Opera Association wired his New York managers that all seats had been sold for his "Emperor Jones" performance of November 17 and seats were already growing scarce for his second San Francisco performance of the same opera on November 30.

Such is the artist whom Washington will see for the only time in concert this season on Sunday afternoon, November 5, at 4 o'clock, a concert which, incidentally, inaugurates Mrs. Dorsey's career as Washington's newest concert impresario.

The Sixteenth Century

Private Life of Henry VIII" are to be available to Washington theatergoers in the same week. It would have been an even happier consummation if the cinema's resuscitation of remote figures in history might have spread its far-flung panoramas across the local screen somewhat in advance of the Anderson play as an informative preliminary to the more concentrated study of people and events, which of necessity it must present.

There is scant grace, however, in carping over the sequence in which potential masterpieces find their way into our theaters. It should be enough that they are here at all, times being what they are in the playhouse—and elsewhere.

* * * *

THE dramaturgic excellence of these strangely alike exhumations of the facts and figures of a past centuries old, needless to say, would be effectually nullified if those intrusted with the leading roles were not equipped by experience and natural bent for the exacting tasks imposed upon them in reembodying the personalities, the weaknesses and the strengths of figures long familiar on the printed page, whose lives have left a permanent impress upon the history of the human race.

Mr. Laughton, as has been intimated, creates a startlingly believable reincarnation of the Henry VIII of England made familiar through his likeness perpetuated on canvas by Holbein. His is by no means an isolated example of effective casting in "The Private Life of Henry VIII," however. While he is surrounded by an entirely British cast, only a few of whom will be recognized by American audiences as having appeared in pictures on this side, none of the principals falls anything short of an ideal selection for the part to which he has been assigned.

No less perfect seems to have been the Theater Guild's choice of players for the roles of prime importance in "Mary of Scotland." Our own Helen Hayes has it within the compass of her rich endowments to be completely queenly in the title role. No less sagacious a choice was the casting of Helen Menken in the role of Queen Mary's arch enemy and eventual Nemesis, Queen Elizabeth of England. Philip Merivale, in the masculine role of chief significance, rounds out a trio of principals whose past attainments augur a full comprehension and realization of every light, every shadow, every nuance that Maxwell Anderson possibly could have written into his script.

The Theater Guild long has made the boast that it does not "star" its major actors and actresses, but merely utilizes their superior capabilities to the further glorification of the plays which it looks upon as good.

With such distinguished artists as George M. Cohan, the American theater's first actor, in Eugene O'Neill's "Ah, Wilderness;" Ina Claire in S. N. Behrman's "Biography," and Helen Hayes, Helen Menken, Philip Merivale, Fritz Leiber, and others of like standing in "Mary of Scotland," it would appear to be a work of sheer supererogation for the Guild to specify that they are "stars."

No amount of denial on the part of the Guild could possibly make them anything else!

From School.

Dorothy Drake, one of the girls in Charles R. Rogers' "Eight Girls in a Boat," last year attended Villa Marguerita, near St. Moritz.

Returns.

B. P. Schulberg, independent producer, has returned from his two months' vacation in Europe.

Radio Stars.

March to Build.

In Fourteen-Star Filmed Play

Marie Dressler, as she appears in the role of the passe comic opera queen in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's picturization of "Dinner at Eight," which opens its roadshow engagement in the National Theater next Sunday night.

Artists Lending Their Talents to Local Stages This Week

Miles & Kover, adagio experts, whose rhythmic dancing headlines this week's vaudeville bill at the Earle Theater.

That amiable master of ceremonies and comedian, Bob Murphy, who presides over the stage bill currently at Loew's Fox.

Gracie Barrie, singing mistress of ceremonies, who this week enters the last week of her engagement at the Earle.

Found at Last, One Unwilling To Copy Mae W.

Somewhere in Hollywood the rumor raised its head that Blossom Seeley was to be another Mae West; and not many hours afterward Blossom was out to scotch that rumor, to nip all such fallacies, errors, heresies in their preposterous bud, to slay them with one fell statement!

Blossom was discovered on the set of "Broadway Through a Keyhole," produced by Twentieth Century Pictures, togged out in an ebony evening gown shaking with sequins that seemed to have been poured over her. And was she happy! She was walking on clouds, and her eyes blazed like the front of a theater on opening night!

"Do I love it!" she grinned. "But stop that stuff about me wanting to be another Mae West. Why, there can be only one Mae West and all imitators ought to be shot! I'm Blossom Seeley, born in Oklahoma, and—don't hit me when I tell you this—I'm called Blossom because my grandmother got an eyeful of me when I was born and said I looked like a little flower! And now I'm playing a bad woman who'll do anything for a bracelet! And when I say anything, I mean anything!"

Blossom had been working only one day at the studio of United Artists, releasing "Broadway Thru a Keyhole," and she was so happy she wanted to cry. And to think Lowell Sherman was directing the picture!

"Why, for years I used to admire Lowell Sherman, when he acted on the stage or when he acted in pictures!" Blossom declared. "I used to think he was the maiden's prayer come true—and how! And here he's saying today, 'Miss Seeley, you walked onto the set that time like the sun coming up suddenly and warming us all up.' Lowell Sherman telling me!

"I'm shaky, but I think I'm going places. But, so help me, I'm going to be myself. Not Mae West. No, sir!"

Blossom began her career in a bum Main street show in Los Angeles—not bum to Blossom, however. The same show graduated Frances White, Robert Z. Leonard, Fatty Arbuckle and Lon Chaney.

Down the years since Blossom blossomed on Broadway, in London and in Paris, with Al Jolson, Barney Bernard, Nora Bayes and others, she has introduced such songs to the world for the first time as "Japanese Sandman" and "California, Here I Come," has appeared in most of the "Passing Shows," various editions of the Greenwich Village Follies, and worked opposite Will Rogers in "Town Topics," played with Gaby Deslys in "Stop! Look! Listen!" and recently contributed her wild, sweet blondeness to Gershwin's "Girl Crazy."

But no imitation Mae West. No, sir!

Writes a Play Based on Life Of Her Father

Adela Rogers St. Johns, noted playwright and scenarist, has been engaged by Columbia to write the screen version of "Take the Witness," the sensational biographical novel based on the life of her father, Earl Rogers, of California, one of the greatest criminal lawyers of our time.

The novel was written by Alfred Cohn and Joseph Chisholm and was one of last season's best sellers. It revolves around the drama and tragedy of our criminal courts.

Miss St. Johns, who is also famous as a short-story writer and novelist, has written and prepared for the screen many successful picture plays. Her latest works include the authorship of "A Free Soul," for M.-G. M., and "What Price Hollywood?" which she wrote in collaboration with Gene Fowler and Rowland Brown.

In Comedies.

Louise Dresser, who has an important role in Dorothea Wieck's "Cradle Song," was featured in all comedies on Broadway, years ago.

At the Play in New York

By Mark Barron.

NEW YORK, Oct. 21 (AP).—Threat of NRA action is eliminating from Broadway one of its most costly evils—that of exorbitant ticket speculation.

Theatrical managers have attempted unsuccessfully for years to rid the amusement industry of these "wildcat" agencies that get a corner on all good seats for hit shows and then demand extraordinarily high prices.

Since the NRA code went into effect, however, the speculators for the most part have come into line and have demanded no more than the regular 50 cents advance charge, although they could have demanded and got much higher prices.

That the NRA officials will allow no tampering with the code was discovered this week by one of Broadway's best known ticket agents. He accepted $50 for a seat to a hit musical, the regular price of admission being $4.40.

The next day he was called on the NRA carpet. As he came out, he said, "I should never have made that error. If I can't do something quick to atone, I see my finish."

THE Theater Guild, most dignified of dramatic impresarios, has surprised Broadway by suddenly coming forth with a song and dance show. It is the stately though amusing comedy of Moliere's, "The School for Husbands," done with music and ballet.

Arthur Guiterman and Lawrence Langner have adapted Moliere's dialogue into perfect rhyme throughout, so that the whole plot seems to be sung rather than spoken. Edmund Ricket has retained the French festival mood in his music.

Moliere, himself, originally played the leading role, that of the jealous Puritanical guardian who intends to wed his pretty and youthful ward. Until she arrives of age so that they may be married, he keeps her locked behind barred doors, but love finds a way to smash the bolts and she escapes.

Osgood Perkins takes the Moliere role in the Guild production, and he brings to it a rich, diverting quality. It is another triumph for this actor who was so impressive as the hard-boiled managing editor in "The Front Page," and here he acts equally adeptly in this witty, fanciful French fairy tale.

June Walker, Flora Lebreton and Michael Bartlett also add much gayety to the piece.

SELL-OUT hits current on Broadway include "Ah, Wilderness," "Hold Your Horses," "As Thousands Cheer," "Sailor, Beware" and "Double Door." Harriet Hoctor, who nearly always wears a black wig when dancing, is really a blonde.

Dorothy Dilley, who retired from the stage when she was married six years ago, is returning to the musical comedy field . . . Hope Williams is abandoning revues for a straight play. She has the lead in the comedy, "All Good Americans."

Veteran Comic Appears Again At the Gayety

"Sliding" Billy Watson and his "Girls From Happyland" is the next burlesque attraction at the Gayety Theater, opening with the usual matinee today.

The "Slider" needs no introduction to the burlesque fans of Washington. He is known to the present generation of burlesque enthusiasts as well as the past, and all the oldtimers always look forward to his visits with glee.

He is surrounded by a large cast of burlesque artists, headed by that charming platinum blonde, Virginia Jones.

In keeping with the aim of Manager Jimmy Lake to give up-to-the-minute features in all attractions, a "Daisy Ballet" and a "Wooden-Shoe Dutch number" have been made part of the routine of "Girls From Happyland."

These features will display to advantage the many charms of the popular young chorus in a delightful way.

Cinema League Gives French Film Premiere

The Foreign Cinema League will present its premiere presentation, "Le Million," a motion picture produced in France, and entirely in the French dialogue, at the Masonic Auditorium, New York avenue and Thirteenth street northwest, Sunday afternoon, October 22, beginning at 2 p. m., with successive performances at 3:45, 5:30, 7:15, and 9 o'clock.

This international success will be the first of a succession of foreign films to be offered by the Foreign Cinema League, which plans to present also Spanish and German films here this season.

An extra attraction on Sunday afternoon will be Einstein's "Rommance Sentimentale."

Knows "Holds."

Chico Marx, starring with his brothers in "Duck Soup," as a youth often worked at parties as a combination pianist and wrestler.

Multiple-Star Screen Play a National Coup

Upsetting all traditions of either theater or screen, the talking picture version of the George S. Kaufman-Edna Ferber stage success, "Dinner At Eight," which ran on Broadway for more than a year, comes to the National Theater starting Sunday night, October 29, as a roadshow attraction.

Mail orders are now being filled for this cinematic feast that has the largest group of stars ever gathered together in the history of motion pictures. It surpasses every all-star cast of the past.

There are no less than 14 outstanding film names in this ambitious Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production.

The universally popular Marie Dressler, Washington's screen favorite, heads the cast in the role of an old-time musical star whose glory has faded. John Barrymore has a striking role as a matinee idol who has lost his public hold. Wallace Beery is cast as a noveau-riche millionaire, and Jean Harlow as his perfidious wife. Lionel Barrymore, Lee Tracy, Edmund Lowe, Billie Burke, Madge Evans, Karen Morley, Jean Hersholt, Phillips Holmes, May Robertson, the late Louise Closser Hale and others of prominence have "meaty" roles in this drama.

There are an unusually large number of emotional climaxes in which each star is given opportunity to portray a vigorous personality.

The story touches on marital conflicts, the triumphs and defeats of business enterprises, the clash of artistic temperaments, the tabloid aspects of society scandal and the tricks of the theatrical trade.

It is one of the mightiest entertainments ever to emanate from the Hollywood studios and has been enthusiastically lauded by critics and audiences.

Following its premiere next Sunday, which promises to be an event of magnitude and brilliance, it will be shown twice daily, at 2:45 and 8:45. All seats are reserved and reservations by mail are now being filled.

Gives Up Trip.

Charles Farrell canceled a trip to Honolulu to assume the leading role with Marguerite Churchill in Charles R. Rogers' "The Girl Without a Room."

BILLY WATSON, the one who prefixes "Sliding" to his name, who will be seen for the first time in seasons with his "Girls of Happyland" company of burlesquers at the Gayety beginning today.

Real Expense.

The 30 perfect young men and women selected from among 100,000 contestants for places in the cast of "The Search for Beauty" will have traveled an aggregate distance of 137,000 miles to make their screen debut.

National Symphony Orchestra's Initial Performance Presages Successful Season

D. C. Gives Warm Welcome To Philadelphia Orchestra And Its Veteran Director

Violin Virtuoso Advocates Government Subsidy for Music; Points to Old World System as Example of Benefits to Be Derived.

It was a happy augury for the coming music season that the opening concert recently of the National Symphony Orchestra should present the "Standing Room Only" sign to a public eager to hear Herr Hans Kindler and his musical men.

There was enthusiasm, there was good music and a fine civic spirit apparent in every moment of that concert. The gallant conductor, the committees in charge and all who helped in the slightest way are to be congratulated.

But it takes more than one concert to make a successful season for any musical organization and the support given to the symphony last Sunday must be continued throughout the year if the city is to be assured of its own symphony through the years.

A cordial welcome was given to the Philadelphia Symphony Orchestra at its opening concert last Tuesday night. Mr. Stokowski, who is a decided favorite with Washington audiences, was in excellent form and he read the program with a vivid interpretation and the individuality that has become associated with his name.

NRA Subsidy Advocated.

Mr. Stokowski has mapped out an elaborate program for himself this year. He will personally conduct 53 of the organization's concerts, no slight task for even so veteran a conductor. Among his guest conductors for the season will be Issay D. Obrowen, Russian composer and conductor; Eugene Ormandy, of the Minneapolis Symphony Orchestra, and Alexander Smallens. The Bach-Beethoven cycle of five programs planned for March and April should attract wide attention and large audiences. The soloists for the orchestra will include Sophie Braslau, Vladimir Horowitz, Efrem Zimbalist, Josef Hofmann and Yehudi Menuhin.

Jascha Heifetz, the violin virtuoso, whom Washington will hear in less than a month as one of Mrs. Dorothy Hodgkin Dorsey's Sunday afternoon concert attractions at Constitution Hall, would like nothing better than an opportunity to discuss a Government subsidy for music with President Roosevelt, according to an interview granted by Heifetz in New York recently on the occasion of his Carnegie Hall recital.

5,000 Reported Jobless.

Heifetz believes, first of all, that the NRA needs a baby sister very badly—a baby sister that he would call the NRAM, the National Recovery Administration for Music. Music, says Heifetz, needs the benefits of a recovery act about as badly as any industry in America. In New York alone, he says, there are probably 5,000 unemployed musicians and a proportionate number in other cities he has visited.

"The Government should end the trouble by subsidizing music," says Heifetz. "This is the only country of importance in the world where the government does not aid music financially. I admit we must have bridges, highways, public works. But we must have music, too, if the country is to live in history."

"We have nothing in America," he continued, "to compare to the subsidized music festivals of Holland, Salzburg and elsewhere in Europe. Our American music festivals in Ann Arbor, Cincinnati, Evanston and elsewhere approximate, in a smaller way, those given in Europe, but these American festivals are all privately supported and when times are bad enthusiasm drops, support wanes and the festivals are not given at times when the public needs them most.

National Conservatory Urged.

"Music, of course, is still looked upon as a luxury in the United States. In Europe it is considered a necessity and it goes on in bad times as well as good."

The violinist also urged the establishment in New York of a great national music conservatory, with Government financial support and with a competent staff of teachers in all branches of music.

In this school it is Mr. Heifetz's plan that a general musical education should be provided for each student. The student would have compulsory training in harmony, orchestration, ensemble music and the history of music. Speaking of the influence such training in music would have on the lives of the children of the Nation, Mr. Heifetz declared:

"It is not necessary that our children be professional musicians or even that they play marvelously. But their lives will be better rounded if they know music sufficiently to understand and appreciate it when they hear it. The cultural life of America thus will be enriched. That is why I should like to see musical education compulsory in the United States."

"Unless a people have developed a taste for the arts," he concluded, "they have no solace, nothing left to go to when hard times come."

Concert Series Opens Tuesday At Howard U.

Abbie Mitchell Recital to Start Season for School.

The Howard University concert series, under the auspices of the School of Music, opens the season next Tuesday evening, with a song recital by Abbie Mitchell, lyric soprano. Miss Mitchell is now head of the vocal department of the Tuskegee School of Music and is well known to Washington music lovers.

Other artists scheduled to appear during the season of 1933-34 are Harry-Gil Smythe, pianist; Marguerite Melville Liszniewska, pianist; Marian Anderson, contralto; Gertrude Martin, violinist, and the chamber group of the National Symphony Orchestra, under the personal direction of Hans Kindler, conductor, assisted by Roy Tibbs, pianist.

Miss Mitchell's program will be as follows:

I. (a) "Die Junge Nonne" (Schubert); (b) "Lied der Mignon" (Schubert); (c) "Die Stadt" (Schubert); (d) "Erlkonig" (Schubert).

II. (a) "Mysticite" (Cimara); (b) "Apaisement" (Chausson) (c) aria, "Ritorna Vincitor," from "Aida" (Verdi).

III. (a) "Morning Hymn" (Henschel); (b) "There Cried a Bird" (Sinding); (c) "Pearls" (Sinding); (d) "Tell Me, Oh Blue, Blue Sky" (Giannini; (e) "Into the Light" (La Forge).

IV. (a) "O Wormeland," Swedish folk song (Bantock); (b) "Varadis' Highway," Hungarian folk song (Bantock); (c) "Gue, Gue Solingei," creole lullaby (Nickerson); (d) "Stand Still Jordan," Negro spiritual (Burleigh).

The concert is scheduled for 8:15 p. m. in the Andrew Rankin Memorial Chapel, Howard University campus.

Marine Band to Open Winter Concert Season

The United States Marine Band, under the leadership of Capt. Taylor Branson, will open its winter concert season October 25, at 8 p. m., in the auditorium at the Marine Barracks, presenting a symphonic program, with Clayton Lindsay, flute, the soloist. The program will include the following: "Symphony in F Minor. No. 4," opus 36 (Tschaikowsky); "L'Apprenti Sorcier," Scherzo (Dukas); flute solo with horn quartet, "L'Oiseau des Bois," opus 21 (Doppler), Principal Musician Clayton Lindsay; overture, "Men of Prometheus," opus 43 (Beethoven).

Orchestral concerts will be given during the winter season in the auditorium at the Marine Barracks on Wednesdays at 8 p. m., and on Fridays at 3 p. m. The public is invited.

Music Notes.

Alice Louise Hunter, whose recent illness temporarily postponed the opening of her dance studio on Eye street, has entirely recovered and has now opened the studio. Her classes for the winter season include various types of the dance.

Tuesday, Wednesday and Friday afternoons are the regular classes held by Miss Hunter.

The mixed choir of the Super Mind Science Church, 1614 K street northwest, under the direction of Lawrence E. Murray, director, will render the anthem "Still, Still With Thee," by Oley Speaks, at the Sunday evening service.

Myron W. Whitney, the president of the Washington Choral Society, announces the resumption of weekly rehearsals, Tuesday evenings at 7:30 o'clock, at Central Community Center, under the direction of Louis A. Potter. A varied group of choral works including old Christmas music is offered for the autumn season. Mr. Potter will give simple audition tests to new candidates at 7:30 p. m., every Tuesday until the vacant places are filled.

Mrs. J. Frank Rice, soprano, Mrs. James Shera Montgomery, accompanist, and Miss Helen Williams, pianist, will present a musical program at the first fall meeting of the District of Columbia Federation of Women's Clubs to be held in Barker Hall, Y. W. C. A., tomorrow at 10:30 a. m.

Alvin Eley, lyric tenor and artist pupil of the noted voice teacher, Maestro Emilio Amico Roxas, of New York and Milan, will give a recital Friday night at 8 o'clock in the Parish Hall of Christ Episcopal Church in Rockville, Md. Mr. Eley is well known as a concert artist. He will be assisted by Miss Margaret Brandon, pianist, of Arlington Hall, and Miss Ruth Alberty, violinist, Washington. Miss Elgar Jones will be at the piano for Mr. Eley and Miss Marcia Boynton for Miss Alberty. The recital is under auspices of the church choir and for the benefit of the choir fund.

Edith B. Athey, teacher of piano, is inaugurating a series of studio recitals and presented Thursday evening, October 19, two junior pupils, Jane Boal and Estelle Louise Gates.

Felian and Francis Garzia, brothers, will present a program in Gunston Hall School Auditorium, 1906 Florida avenue, this evening at 8:30 o'clock.

Felian Garzia has been a popular soloist here, his piano recitals featuring both classic masters and moderns. Francis also plays the piano, but being versatile, he uses the violin and violoncello also. It is probable tonight's program will feature at least one sonata and Felian Garzia will play works by Chopin and Debussy.

Miss Harvey in Recital

Le Roy Lewis will present Marion Harvey, lyric soprano, in recital at the Ten o'Clock Club Tuesday evening, October 24, at 8:30 o'clock. Miss Harvey's program includes the works of Mozart, Wagner, Debussy and others. Miss Dorothy Andrews will play the accompaniments.

Who's Who in Local Music

ELIZABETH WINSTON.

Music lovers who attended performances of the National Symphony last year will remember Elizabeth Winston, Washington pianist. Miss Winston is planning a series of concerto recitals in New York this winter through the efforts of her former teacher, Ernest Hutcheson.

Born in Kansas City, Miss Winston came to Washington at the age of 12. The next year she was awarded a four-year scholarship, under the instruction of Mr. Hutcheson. Later she studied with Leopold Godowski and with Harold Bauer in Paris.

After her debut in Aeolian Hall, New York, in 1924, Miss Winston made several tours of the southern and eastern States. She made recordings for Ampico, which have been commended by the manufacturers for their technical perfection.

Miss Winston has been heard by Washingtonians for many years, both publicly and privately. She is teaching in two schools here.

Daniel Studio Artists On Exposition Program

Edna Bishop Daniel announces that three artists from the Daniel Studio of Singing, 1340 New York avenue northwest, Catherine Schofield Honse, soprano; Raymond Chisholm, lyric tenor, and Francis Deremer, basso, with Jennie Glennan at the piano, will provide the vocal part of the program Monday night, October 23, for the Ninth Annual Industrial Exposition of the Washington Chamber of Commerce, at the Washington Auditorium.

Program of song: Raymond Chisholm, lyric tenor—"Absent" (John W. Metcalf), "By the Bend of the River" (Clara Edwards), "Mary Darlint" (Richard Czerwonky).

Catherine Schofield Honse, soprano—"Know'st Thou Not That Fair Land?" opera, "Mignon" (A. Thomas); "Song of the Open" (Frank La Forge).

4 Days Replete In Interest Told By Arts Group

New Headquarters to Be Opened Saturday; Programs Varied.

The Arts Group of Washington will present a four days' continuous program to open its headquarters, The House of the Seven Arts, at 2401 Fifteenth street, beginning next Saturday, October 28, and continuing through October 31.

The board of directors of The Arts Group will hold a reception in connection with each affair. It includes Mrs. William H. King, Mrs. George Oakley Totten, Mrs. Ernest Smith, Mrs. George Thorpe, Miss Ada Rainey, Alexandre Trowbridge, Andre Cattaui, Manuel Giron-Cerna and Louis Calles.

On October 28, an exhibition of flower studies, by Leon Carroll, American artist, will be held. On Sunday evening, October 29, Aleksandre Helmann, young Russian pianist, will give a concert.

Marian Chace and Lester Shafer, Dennishawn dancers, are to give a dance concert Monday, October 30, and on the same evening Mrs. George Oakley Totten holds an exhibit of her porcelains. The program will close the evening of October 31 with a masque ball.

Opera Club to Give "Chimes of Normandy"

Washington musicians and stage experts are assisting the Washington Opera Club, directed by Flora McGill Keefer, for the presentation of Planquette's opera, "The Chimes of Normandy," during the Thanksgiving holiday season, in Roosevelt Auditorium, with a cast of all-Washington singers.

Dore Walten will conduct the orchestra, J. Humbird Duffey will direct the staging and Dorothy Radde Emery will be accompanist.

Entertains Clubs.

Miss Grace Hazard Wormelle, accompanied by her pupils, Virginia Lee Pettey, sang a group of French troubadour songs for the Washington Readers Club at a recent meeting.

Her pupils also entertained East Gate Chapter, Order of Eastern Star, last week with piano numbers, songs, readings and a play.

Treasure Hunt Of Curley Club This Afternoon

Halloween Dance and Other Affairs Arranged to Help Fund.

Curley Club members will assemble this afternoon at 2:30 o'clock at the Continental Hotel, starting place for a "treasure hunt." Clews will direct the group to the various places on the trail and a cash award will be made to the person finding the treasure. A buffet supper will be served, the place to remain unknown until the hunt is concluded. The athletic committee, headed by John Donnelly, is in charge.

A masquerade Halloween dance, to increase the Archbishop Curley scholarship fund, will be held Tuesday evening, October 31, in the ballroom of the New Amsterdam Hotel, Fourteenth and Fairmont streets northwest. Awarding of prizes for the best costume will take place after a grand march at 11 o'clock. Plans for the event are being completed by the entertainment committee, of which William J. Boyd is chairman.

A bingo party was held under the auspices of the club Friday evening in the auditorium of the Church of the Assumption at Congress Heights.

Ray McGarvey entertained members of the executive committee at his home on Rock Creek Church road Thursday evening. Luke F. O'Reilly, vice president of the club, presided.

The literary circle met Tuesday evening at the residence of Miss Irene and Miss Jessie Boehlert, in Copley Courts Apartments. Miss Isabel Connor presided.

Mrs. Alfred J. Smith was hostess at the Sunday afternoon bridge tea at her residence in Wakefield Hall apartments.

Members of the club have been invited to participate in the service in honor of the Feast of Christ the King, Sunday afternoon, October 29, at 3 o'clock in the Crypt of the National Shrine of the Immaculate Conception, Catholic University. After the ceremonies a pilgrimage will be made to the tomb of Bishop Shahan in the crypt.

A Halloween party is being planned to follow the business session at the next meeting of the club Thursday evening, October 26, at the Continental Hotel.

The second of a series of entertainments planned to aid the scholarship fund will take place Friday night in the auditorium of the Church of the Assumption, Congress Heights. A bingo social will be held, with continuous play of 25 games, prizes and refreshments. Chairman Boyd is being assisted by Anne Ambrose, Margaret Freedman, Beatrix Chappelle, Bernardine Nesline, Jessie Boehlert, Joseph Diegelmann, Luke O'Reilly, John Townshend, Francis McCann and James O'Connell.

Brownie Chief Starts Course for Leaders

Mrs. Adolphus Staton, Great Brown Owl of the Brownies, a junior Girl Scout group, started a course of training for leaders of Brownie packs Friday at headquarters, 1825 M street.

There have been many requests for a Brownie pack at Murch School, but leaders are lacking. Any one interested in this work may get in touch with Miss Gantley or Mrs. Proctor L. Dougherty.

Dec. 1 Deadline For Composers In Competition

Juilliard School of Music Limits Time for New Compositions.

The Juilliard School of Music, New York, announces that December 1 is the closing date on which manuscripts will be accepted for its 1933 competition for publication of new orchestral works by American composers.

The school will select a work from the entries and pay for its publication. The composer receives all the royalties and fees accruing from the sale or performance of his work. The school also cooperates with the composer in securing for his work adequate rehearsal and performance.

The terms of the competition are:

1. Compositions must be by native-born or naturalized American citizens.
2. Only such orchestral compositions as are suitable for performance by a major symphony orchestra will be considered and only compositions of which the composer owns or can control the copyright should be submitted.
3. Compositions which have been performed previously should be accompanied by a brief statement as to places and dates of performance so far as known.
4. Compositions should be sent to the Juilliard School of Music, 130 Claremont avenue, New York, before December 1. Manuscripts sent by mail should be insured and the composer's name and address should be securely attached. Manuscripts not selected for publication will be returned to the sender.
5. Should a composition of outstanding merit be disclosed through the competition, it will be published in the spring of 1934.

Pen Women Arrange Club Exhibition Night

The League of American Pen Women have inaugurated a new feature this season; a club night for exhibiting artists. The first will be held Wednesday evenings at 8 o'clock at the league's headquarters, Stoneleigh Courts.

Hazel Cameron-Menk will be hostess and will offer a varied program of young singers and pianists chosen from the recent winners of radio programs by the Seekers Club.

Mrs. McKee will conduct the program. Col. Sayer, traveler, artist and writer will deliver a monologue set to music, depicting the passing of a day in the Tropics.

Mayflower Descendants of Washington Gather

The Society of Mayflower Descendants of the District of Columbia held a meeting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Leigh L. Nettleton, 2411 Pennsylvania avenue northwest, last Tuesday evening. About 40 members and their friends were present.

Frederick W. Newcombe, governor of the society, presided. After the business meeting, the reports of the Congress of the General Society in Plymouth, Mass., on September 5 and 6, were given by the delegates, Mrs. Bertha M. Robertson, secretary; Mrs. Josephine Franklin, Mrs. Winifred Freiot, Mr. Eleanor Rowe and Mrs. Mary C. Greathouse.

Mrs. Miriam Dingley related some experiences in gathering data relative to the Pilgrims and to the Mayflower.

Navy Orchestra To Play Tomorrow

Lieut. Benter Will Direct Second Concert.

The second symphonic concert by the United States Navy Band, under the leadership of Lieut. Charles Benter, will be given at the Sail Loft, Navy Yard, tomorrow at 8 p. m.

The program will open with Von Weber's overture, "Der Freischutz," and will include Dvorak's Symphony No. 5 in E minor from the "New World," and the symphonic suite, "The Covered Wagon," by Secretary of the Treasury William H. Woodin. The soloist will be Musician Bernard Rosenthal, violin.

Later in the season Miss Wentworth is planning to present "The Bohemian Girl" and "Robin Hood," both to be sponsored by the Community Center Department.

U. S. Navy Band Plans Anniversary Concert

The year 1933 marks the fifteenth anniversary of the organization of the United States Navy Band by its present leader, Lieut. Charles Benter.

Wednesday, November 22, a fifteenth anniversary concert, sponsored by the Navy Department, will be given at Constitution Hall. This concert will be in two parts. The first half of the program will be played by the symphony orchestra and the second half by the concert band.

Jascha Heifetz Accepts Soviet Bid to Return

Violinist Will Go to Russia in April for Series of Concerts.

New York, Oct. 21 (AP).—For the first time since the overthrow of the Romanoffs, Jascha Heifetz will visit the land of his birth next spring.

The Soviet Union several months ago invited the famous violinist to give a series of recitals as its guest. Heifetz accepted this week.

After his continental tour, Heifetz will go to Russia in April. The Soviet tour will open in Leningrad and will include Moscow, Kharkov, Kiev and the Crimea.

Heifetz, now 34 years old, left Russia early in 1917, soon after the overthrow of Czar Nicholas and the establishment of the Kerensky provisional government. The contract for his American debut had just been signed and the Heifetz family came to the United States.

Sides With Workers.

The sympathy of the family was with the revolution and the young Russian frequently played for meetings of workers.

"I am greatly interested in the development of music in the culture of the Soviet Union," the violinist said, discussing the visit. "The Russian government's invitation is one of the most important events in my career."

Mrs. Heifetz, the former Florence Vidor of the films, has not yet decided whether she and the children will accompany him to Russia.

"We may stay," she said, "in Paris or London."

Will Play With Russians.

In the Russian tour, Heifetz will play in concert with several Soviet state orchestras.

He had booking for more than 30 appearances in Germany this winter, but canceled them as a protest against the Nazi policy of anti-semitism.

In the summer of 1934, Heifetz—who became an American citizen in 1925—will make his first tour of South America.

Newman Club Plans Halloween Dance

Student Group Organizes for Winter Activities.

The Newman Club, Catholic student organization of George Washington University, will hold a Halloween dance at the Powhatan Spring Club, near Ballston, Va. Happy Walker's Orchestra will provide music.

Season's activities were opened October 11 with a short meeting in Corcoran Hall at the university, followed by a dance. Over 200 students and guests were present. Provost William Allen Wilbur of the university and the Rev. Dr. John Keating Cartwright, new pastor of the Immaculate Conception parish, and spiritual director of the club, spoke.

An organization meeting was held October 18 at Corcoran Hall. A department for dramatics has been formed under chairmanship of James Maguire, with more than 30 members registered to present one and two act plays at club meetings.

Helmann Piano Recital Booked By Arts Group

Program by Russian Genius Will Take Place Next Sunday.

Under the auspices of the Art Group of Washington, a newly formed organization to stimulate appreciation in the fine arts, Aleksendr Helmann, Russian pianist, will give a concert at the House of the Seven Arts, 2401 Fifteenth street, next Sunday evening.

Helmann was born in Vilna, Russia, city of Godowsky's birth, in 1912, and began to play the piano at the age of 2. At the age of 4 he had acquired considerable technique and produced several original compositions which were performed at concerts. Before he was 7 he had appeared as a prodigy in many important cities of Russia.

Except for a brief period under Moritz Rosenthal, he has studied exclusively under the guidance of his father, Jacob N. Helmann, formerly professor at the Imperial Conservatory of the Ukraine. During the last six years he has made extensive research in musicological and acoustical fields as well as gaining technical mastery of his instrument.

This concert is part of the opening program of the Arts Group, which will continue four days at the House of the Seven Arts, through October 31.

Jewish Post Auxiliary Holds Reception, Dance

Washington Chapter No. 2, Royal Arch Masons, will celebrate Harry Standiford night at its convocation Thursday evening, October 26. A member of all the York and Scottish Rite bodies, past grand master, past grand high priest and past potentate of the shrine, Mr. Standiford has been a vital factor in Masonry here for 50 years. The grand master, grand high priest, illustrious grand master, eminent grand commander and potentate of the shrine, together with their respective grand officers, are the special guests.

Past Grand Masters Joseph H. Milans and Gratz E. Dunkum will address the assembly and Past High Priest J. Edward Swaine will have charge of the program, which will include a short entertainment.

Woman Physician Named on Clinic

Dr. Rider Saw Serivce in Hospitals of Asia.

Dr. Lauretta Kress presided at the meeting of the executive board of the Women's Clinic, held at the Georgia Avenue Clinic. Dr. Evelyn A. Rider was elected to the staff of clinicians. Dr. Rider was superintendent of the American Women's Hospital, at Madura, India, and served in the Zenana Hospital in Sibi and Ziarat, in the borderland of Beloochistan and Afghanistan. These hospitals were under the jurisdiction of the English government.

Dr. Ida Heiberger gave a historical talk on the beginning of the work in the clinic, more than 40 years ago. Patients calling for treatment have taxed the hours given by the attending physicians, during the past few months.

Orchestra's Concert Thursday Afternoon Important Event in Capital's Musical Circles

Social Leaders To Be Present As Series Opens

Numbers Never Heard in District Before to Be Played.

Next Thursday evening's concert by the National Symphony Orchestra will be one of the most important events of the year from a musical standpoint as well as a social one.

Mrs. Roosevelt, Mrs. Woodin and many diplomatic and social leaders will attend this opening concert of the orchestra's symphony series, and the event will present to concert-goers several truly great compositions which have been all-too-seldom heard in Washington, as well as some music never before played here. It is also one of the two night concerts by the orchestra. It will begin at 8:30.

The complete program will be: Overture, "Euryanthe" (Weber); symphony in B flat major (Chausson)—"Lent" (allegro molto), "Tres Lent," "Anime," "Oriental Impressions" (Eichheim); "Tasso," symphonic poem (Liszt).

Nearly everyone who is at all a regular concert-goer is, of course, familiar with Weber's superb and brilliant overture; but very few have heard the splendid work by Chausson, and the symphonic poem by Liszt.

"Euryanthe" to Open Concert.

Although it is one of his finest works, it has been presented here infrequently. The Chausson symphony has not been played here since 1921. And the strange but unusually fine compositions by Eichheim have never before been on a program in Washington.

To open a concert will be the beautiful overture, Weber's "Euryanthe," and in the case of the forthcoming concert it will provide an especially grateful contrast to the more modern symphony by Chausson.

Ernest Chausson was a pupil of Cesar Franck. Much in his music can be seen as a development of the magnificent mastery of harmony which is inherent in the compositions of the great Belgian. His music is "modern" in the sense that Franck's music is modern, perhaps a bit more so, but still far from what in these days can be called revolutionary.

His music has much the same fullness and richness of orchestration as Franck's; in fact, it is pretty much of a mystery why this fine symphony, which is so "grateful" both to the musicians of the orchestra and to the audience, is not more frequently played. The only explanation is that Chausson's portfolio, because of his unfortunate and premature death, is not a large one; he has (also like his master, Cesar Franck) only this one really significant symphonic work, although there are others. Besides these, there are a few works for smaller combinations of instruments, a really very fine piano concerto, and some songs.

Music lost a brilliant and sincere artist when Chausson died, in 1899, from injuries received in a fall from a bicycle.

Kindler Sees Controversy.

Conductor Hans Kindler believes it is likely that the presentation of the compositions of Eichheim will arouse a musical controversy similar to those which occurred when Mossolow's "Iron Foundry" was first played, and, earlier, Ravel's "Bolero."

These "Orinetal Impressions" can be best described as painstaking, skillful and imaginative translations into the orchestral tongue from the original Japanese. Just as literal translation is bad translation from an artistic standpoint, so is compromise with convention, at the cost of what the author or composer meant to say. Eichheim is no literal translator and he has certainly made no compromise with convention.

One of the most astonishing orchestral effects is obtained by use of a "fluctuating" tam-tam. The tone of this instrument is best described as a cymbal crash, which begins on a lower register and climbs ever and ever to a higher one as the sound grows fainter.

Liszt's Poem to Close.

It must be said that Henry Eichheim is no musical bad-boy chasing a career. He is a staid orchestral musician of 60, or thereabouts, a former member of the Boston Symphony and a student of Oriental music, who spent many years in the East making a painstaking study of the works in his chosen field.

Thursday's concert will close with Liszt's superb symphonic poem based on the life of that great but persecuted Venetian poet, Tasso.

There is probably no music that better expresses its intention than this composition, regarded by many persons as the finest thing that Liszt ever did for orchestra.

Many persons—almost 300, in fact—were disappointed last Sunday when they arrived too late to obtain tickets, Manager C. C. Cappel wants to assure them all that he was just as disappointed as they were that it was impossible to have them join the 4,000 persons who heard the concert. However, he suggests that in order that they might not be victims again they obtain their tickets in advance at the orchestra's box office in Garfinckel's. This, he advises, also will do much to alleviate a last-minute rush at Constitution Hall at 8:30 p. m.

Banquet Planned By D. A. V. Group

At a meeting of the executive committee of the District of Columbia Department of the Disabled American Veterans of the World War, Wednesday, action was taken to hold a banquet following the department convention in January. Commander Herbert C. Church, of the Ace-Rasmussen Chapter, was named chairman of the convention committee and other chapter commanders are to serve on the committee.

Penwomen Welcome New Members This Afternoon

Tea Will Be Given in Studio; 17 to Receive Greeting.

The executive board of the District of Columbia League of American Penwomen will entertain at a tea this afternoon for new members at the studio, 1706 L street northwest.

Mrs. W. W. Badgley, president, will be assisted by Mrs. Edson W. Briggs, chairman of membership, and Miss Mary Hedrick, junior past membership chairman, in welcoming the following members received during 1932-33: Ann Linington Arkola (Mrs. George A.); Margaret Jean Bailey (Miss); Daisy Bell McCoy (Mrs. C. P. Barrett); Rosemary McCormick-Bromfield (Mrs. Lee B.); Florence K. Buschmann—"Paige Serverines", Sarah Livingston Coe (Mrs. Henry Clarke); Ethel Cosgrove Davidson (Mrs. Arthur W.); Phyllis Moore Gallagher (Mrs. Bernard John); Edith Stearns Gray—"Jack Stearns" (Mrs.); Martha Cabanne Kayser (Mrs. R. L.); Irene Shirley Moran (Mrs. Edward C. jr.); Miss Ruby Nevins; Miss Madge J. Reese; Miss Grace Rebecca Sahm; Violet Short Shinn (Mrs. Erwin H.); Miss Irma von Lackey and Dr. Emily F. Maddox.

Others assisting will be Mrs. Glenn S. Burrell, Mrs. Herman Kobbe, Miss Katharine Wootten, Mrs. Robert Rands, Miss Myrta Ethel Cawood and Miss Elise Thomson Clark. At the tables will be Dr. Jean Stephenson, Mrs. Ralph Barnaby, Mrs. Miriam B. Hilton, Mrs. G. G. White and Miss Clara Hill. A short program will be given by new members.

Many at Drama Session.

The evening for drama, October 17, at the league studio was well attended. Those taking part, in addition to Mrs. Robert Rands, chairman, were Sue Taranto, who played several piano solos, and Mabelle Jennings, who spoke on "What New York Wants." Don Craig then told "What the NRA Wants." John Sikken gave several readings from Shakespeare. Mrs. C. E. von Vrooman spoke on her work at the Y. W. C. A. in connection with the drama and Mrs. Theodore-Tiller told of her work in dramatic productions at George Washington University.

Mrs. Rands is author of the Javanese comedy, "The Slamatan," which won first prize in the national contest at Chicago in July. It is now being published in Chicago. She also is an authority on the arts and crafts of the East Indies, on which she has a handbook in the Metropolitan Museum in New York. Mrs. Rands has the further distinction of having been invited to become a member of the Women's Geographers Association on account of her travels in Asia, Africa, Europe and her life in the East Indies.

Fiction Group Formed.

Friday evening, October 20, the first group in fiction for 1933 was conducted by the chairman, Phyllis Moore Gallagher, at the studio Edna Knight Gasch, a writer and league member of many years standing, acted as toastmistress and introduced the guest speakers.

Mrs. Gene Ziegfeld, fourth national vice president of the league, spoke. Mrs. Ziegfeld was chairman of the short-story contest held recently by the National League and she is past president of the Baltimore branch of the league.

Among the other guest speakers were Carson W. Mrs. McCrory told of the committee's pilgrimage in June to Port Tobacco.

Mrs. Z. Lewis Dalby discussed completion of all chapter histories. They are to be bound and preserved in the National D. A. R. Library.

An account of a visit to the home Paul Revere was given by Mrs. Foster, of Victory Chapter.

The work of the committee for this year includes a survey of schools to determine how American history is being taught. The principal paper of the morning was given by Miss Harriet Chase.

Two Juliets Take to "the Road" This Season.

One more bit of evidence that "the good old days" may be returning—Eva Le Gallienne (left) and Katharine Cornell (right), foremost actress-managers, will tour the country this season, each including "Romeo and Juliet" in her repertory. Their aim is to bolster interest in the spoken drama. Below they are pictured in the role of Juliet.

Neither with jealousy flashing nor with rapiers drawn do the newest Juliets set forth upon the long trail of "the road" to carry Shakespeare to the highways and byways of the country.

Eva Le Gallienne and Katharine Cornell, Broadway's two actress-managers, in beginning their lengthy repertory tours believe that the project of two Juliets in a single season will stimulate interest rather than strife in the theater.

A generation ago playgoers in the smallest towns could see in a single season a half-dozen Juliets, Hamlets, Macbeths and Violas—played by Marlowe and Anderson, Modjeska and Nielson and the innumerable minor classic actresses of the day who made the grand tour.

Now the boyish, sensitive Le Gallienne and the tragic, moody Cornell are reviving the regal tradition of trouping Shakespearean stars.

These two players have high regard for each other. Unknowingly they both chose this winter to present "Romeo and Juliet" on tour, but on discovery of each other's plans they arranged their routes so there would be no clash of dates, no competitive booking.

Miss Le Gallienne begins her season in New Haven, Conn., and plays the East and Midwest; Miss Cornell starts her travels in her home town, Buffalo, and then goes to the Northwest and Southwest.

Le Gallienne has acted Juliet before, but this is Cornell's first appearance in a Shakespeare play. Both are to visit towns where they have never been seen before, but they are seasoned troupers.

When New York at first did not welcome Cornell she went into the one-night stands to gain experience.

When Le Gallienne realized that her Broadway success in "The Swan" and "Liliom" meant stardom in the commercial theater and limitation of her scope as an actress and director, she turned away from this gateway to fame and, with a repertory of Ibsen plays, toured the country to earn enough money to begin her famous Civic Repertory Theater.

In addition to "Romeo and Juliet," Le Gallienne offers that ageless Lewis Carroll classic, "Alice in Wonderland," while Cornell presents "Candida" and "The Barretts of Wimpole Street."

They will act in dusty old theaters, in bright, new motion picture palaces, in vast civic auditoriums—anywhere, everywhere that they can set their scenes and give their plays. It will not be pioneering de luxe.

For the fight they make is not against each other, but against the sluggish conditions of the day which threaten to crowd the spoken drama from the stage—especially the stage in those out-of-the-way lanes where Bernhardt once played Camille under a canvas top.

Dr. Wiley Is Paid Honor by Alliance

Women Join in Tribute to Pure Food Crusader.

Commemorating the birthday anniversary of Dr. Harvey W. Wiley, long a leader in the fight for pure food and drug legislation, the Housekeepers Alliance met recently at the home of Mrs. Wiley. Dr. Wiley was the only man ever to hold an honorary membership in the Alliance.

Regulations governing return of merchandise, sponsored by the District Federation of Women's Clubs and the Alliance, have been adopted by member stores of the Merchants and Manufacturers Association, it was announced. Active in promotion of this proposal were Mrs. Albert N. Baggs, State chairman of the Department of the American Home, and Mrs. Wiley, who is president of the District Federation of Women's Clubs and vice president of the Alliance.

During tea the guests heard a Southern dialect reading by one of the visitors. Miss Bess Viemont, of the Textile Division, Bureau of Home Economics, United States Department of Agriculture, spoke on "Selecting and Arranging Accessories in the Home."

Elks Plan Oyster Roast And Dance Halloween

Wise Buying, Pure Food Act Enforcement, Home Safety, Aims of Club Women Here

System Founded for Procuring Information Concerning Needy

Mrs. Albert N. Baggs Directs American Home Group, Cooperating With Others; Houses and Institutions Seeking Community Chest Support Inspected.

Enforcement of the pure food and drug act in the District of Columbia, wise buying as outlined by Government agencies, safety standards in every home here and a real insurance plan for the American home are high objectives of women led by Mrs. Albert N. Baggs, who has become chairman of the Department of the American Home of the District of Columbia Federation of Clubs.

Activities of the American home department does not end with its members in the District or members of the federation. Coöperating committees and conferences have been formed with representatives of all the clubs either in the organization or civic projects. Most of the officials of the federation committees belong [illegible] and are often active members or officers of clubs not in the federation. Women active in civic and welfare work in the District are sure to belong to and cooperate with all groups of women doing the same work.

In keeping with the general activity of District women the federation has established a system of obtaining information about the needy here and sending their names to the proper authorities for relief action.

Plan to Reduce Accidents.

Alarmed at the number of accidents in District of Columbia homes last year, a special survey has been inaugurated to determine the number and causes of accidents in homes and methods of preventing them. In this the club women cooperate closely with safety organizations and Government agencies.

Taking real heed of the warning issued by Mrs. John D. Sherman when she was chairman of the American home department of the General Federation of Women's Clubs several years ago, that women who put aside too much money for possible emergencies that may arise defeat the very purpose they wish to attain, the District clubwomen have worked out a real, wise buying system which fits in with the buying program of the Federal Government.

In keeping with the educational program of those interested in the Community Chest drive that will begin soon, many District organizations are conducting tours of inspection to homes and institutions which must look for support again this year to the Community Chest, since they do not come in the category of those entitled to Federal relief under present plans.

"Come and See" Tours.

These "come and see" tours are usually conducted by Community Chest officials, while certain institutions keep open-house on certain days at specified hours.

Washington women always have displayed a real responsibility to our institutions, whether they are operated under the banner of charity organizations or are local or National Government institutions.

When Miss Mabel T. Boardman was made the first woman District Commissioner she personally visited institutions under her supervision. She made many return visits and talked not only with those in charge, but to inmates and frequenters of these institutions as well.

Girl Reserves Of 8 Schools Dine Friday

This will be followed immediately by the placing of wreaths by National Commander Hayes, on behalf of the National American Legion, and by Department Commander Rice W. Means, for the Department of the District of Columbia.

At the conclusion of these brief ceremonies, the program will be started in the amphitheater. The ceremonies will be presided over by Department Commander Means, and will open with the invocation by the Rev. Robert J. White, national chaplain of the American Legion.

On his visit here a few days ago, National Commander Hayes and Department Commander Means and Past Department Commander Norman B. Landreau visited the White House and extended an invitation to President Roosevelt to participate in the exercises.

Marine Band to Play.

Music will be furnished by the United States Marine Band. Past Commander Landreau, chairman of the Armistice Day committee, will be assisted in the arrangements by Past Department Commander Amos A. Fries, John Lewis Smith, past department commander and national executive committeeman; Department Vice Commander Robert A. Ralph, Charles W. Swan, Bernard S. Buscher, Past Department Adjutants C. W. Browning and Crawford Sloan, Charles C. Ailes, Samuel Rose, William N. Morell and Charles Demonet.

At 9 o'clock Armistice night a ball will be held in the Mayflower Hotel, at which many prominent in social and military circles will be present, in addition to members of the various veteran organizations. William N. Morrell is the chairman of the ball committee. Invitations have been extended to members of the Cabinet, Diplomatic Corps, Senate and House and veteran organizations.

Graves to Be Filed.

The local department of the American Legion will cooperate with the national organization in filing the burial places of World War veterans in the archives of the American Legion at the headquarters in Indianapolis, under a plan developed by the legion's national graves registration committee. A grave registration committee is to be appointed in each State, with grave registration officers in each county. Permanent records will be maintained in the State headquarters of the legion, listing the name of every deceased World War veteran, together with the location of his grave, his war service record and other available data.

The work of locating the graves of veterans, marking and decorating them, will be carried out by the American Legion posts of the locality. A plat of each cemetery with the exact location of veterans' graves marked on it is also to be obtained and recorded. The graves registration plan is the result of two years' work and has already been started in 22 States, and shortly will cover the entire country.

James E. Walker Post.

At its October 12 meeting the post unanimously drafted West A. Hamilton to serve as commander.

Col. Hamilton organized the post in 1920 and has served in some office ever since. He was commander in 1923 and 1924, adjutant for the last six years, and service officer for a long time. The following other officers were elected: Senior vice commander, Louis R. Mehlinger; junior vice commander, Hugh S. Malone; quartermaster, John Sweetney; historian, John F. Porter, jr.; chaplain, the Rev. John W. Bundrant; surgeon, T. Edward Jones, M. D.; sergeant at arms, Albert Valentine, and colorbearers, John Wood and Charles S. Lomack.

Capt. Sylvester H. Epps, past commander, will serve as adjutant. William H. Burrel was reappointed finance officer, and J. Franklin Wilson judge advocate.

The officers will be installed on Thursday by Department Commander Rice W. Means.

The post will collaborate with the other posts of the department in the celebration of Armistice Day. The usual parade and pilgrimage to Arlington will be held. In the evening the annual smoker reunion will be held in the drill hall of the Odd Fellows Hall, Ninth and T streets northwest. More than 150 comrades are expected, including visitors from Baltimore and Alexandria. On Sunday, November 12, the post members will be the guests of Asbury Methodist Episcopal Church, of which the Rev. Robert Moton Williams is pastor, at a religious service at 11 a. m.

Rea Chapter, D .A. V.., Enters Bowling Team

Capt. Walker H. Colston, commander of Rea Chapter, D. A. V., has entered a team in the Veterans Bowling League at the Petworth alley. Past Commander Logan J. Purcell, chairman of the membership committee, has called a special meeting of his committee for Monday night at the Arlington Hotel, at which time final plans for a membership campaign will be made. J. J. Idler, chairman of the entertainment committee, has arranged several surprises for the next meeting.

Service Officer Carl Beuchert has compiled a booklet containing information needed for veterans in obtaining evidence in connection with their claims before the Veterans' Administration.

Bunker Hill Post Officers Installed

Means Conducts Rites at Legion Gathering.

Installation of officers for Bunker Hill Post, No. 31, American Legion, was conducted last Tuesday evening by Department Commander Rice W. Means. The exercises took place in the Hayloft Rendezvous of the Thomas Circle Club and were presided over by Robert A. Ralph, retiring post commander and second vice commander of the department.

Presentation of a number of gifts and mementos of service were a feature of the evening.

Commander Means addressed the membership on comradeship, pointing out the necessity for organized protection of group rights.

Representative Clarke W. Thompson, of Galveston, Tex., was the speaker of the evening. Maj. Thompson spoke as a fellow legionaire on the problems of the veterans, emphasizinz his intense interest in veterans' preference in civil employment, the leading problem in this department.

Wives and friends of the members were attendance, and a number of officers of the department, of other posts and of the auxiliary were present and were recognized. The evening was concluded with a dance.

The new post officers inducted included Post Commander William A. Kilerlane; First Vice Commander Robert R. Spriggs, Second Vice Commander Chester Wolf, Third Vice Commander A. J. Manger, Chaplain the Rev. Richard Fitzgerald, Finance Officer Thad A. Bean, Judge Advocate L. J. Fitchthorn, Historian John Weitzell, American Officer Zeb Hamilton, John McCabe, sergeant at arms, and Color Bearers Leo Collins and W. A. Hans. Commander Kilerlane announced the appointment of Raymond Gilbert as adjutant.

On Wednesday evening the wives of the members of Bunker Hill Post sponsored a bridge party in the Sally Southern parlors of the Southern Dairies Co. Prizes were awarded. Officers and members of many posts of the department were present.

Next Sunday Bunker Hill Post will hold a fall oyster roast on the estate of John McCabe at Woodland Beach.

Second Division Legion Post to Nominate

Second Division Post, No. 28, the American Legion, will meet Tuesday night in the red room of the Cairo Hotel. Nominations for officers will be made for final election the first meeting in November.

Post Commander Thomas Mason, jr., and Past Post Commander Earl Jennings Brown will be the guests of honor at the annual reunion of the New England branch of the Second Division Association in Boston November 11. Adjt. A. M. Allen, chairman of the post's bowling team, has entered the team in several leagues.

The post hopes to capture the trophy offered by Capt. Walker H. Colston, commander of Rea Chapter, D. A. V., to the Veterans League, which opened Friday night at the Petworth alley.

Officers Installed At Costello Post, No. 15

Officers for the Vincent B. Costello Post, No. 15, of the American Legion, Department of the District of Columbia, were intsalled Tuesday night at an open meeting held in the main ballroom of the Arlington Hotel.

The installation was followed by dancing and was visited by departmental officers. The meeting was addressed by Departmental Commander Rice W. Means, National radio officer, Samuel Rose; National legislative officer, Col, John Thomas Taylor; past department commander, F. G. Fraser, and others. Commander Tatspaugh was presented with a brief case by Kate Briggs, commander of the Jacob Jones Post of the legion, on behalf of a group of comrades of her post. Retiring Post Commander Norman W. Grant was presented with a past post commander's signet ring. Vocal selections were given by Forlence Yokum, accompanied by Prof. Harry Wheaton Howard.

Past Department Commander Julius I. Peyser officiated as installing officer. Those installed were: Commander, A. P. Tatspaugh; first vice commander, F. A. Thuee; second vice commander, J. H. O'Connell; third vice commander, George Frye; historian, Martin Goerl; sergeant at arms, Joseph Droney; master at arms, James F. Harold; quartermaster, Abraham D. Sherman. Post Surgeon James F. ## Odd Fellows Look Forward to Busy Week

Reception for Grand Sire and Two Out-of-Town Visits Planned.

This week will be a busy week for the membership of the I. O. O. F., functions occurring every night of the week.

Monday evening the grand master and his Grand Lodge officers will accompany the president of the Rebekah Assembly, Mrs. Amy V. Glossbrenner, on her second official fall visitation to Esther Rebekah Lodge No. 5, meeting in I. O. O. F. Temple.

Grand Patriarch James E. Griffith, accompanied by his Grand Encampment staff of officers and a large delegation of the encampment members, will go to Baltimore Tuesday night to witness the conferring of encampment degrees on a large class. The newly-elected grand sire, James H. Davis, of Washington, and the deputy grand sire, William A. Pittenger, of Minnesota, will be present.

Will Attend Frederick Rally.

Wednesday, at 5:15 p. m., Grand Master Morris L. Dreeben, accompanied by his grand officers and delegations from all branches of the order, including the Rebekahs, encampment members and subordinates, will leave Odd Fellows Temple in busses for Frederick, where they will participate in the mammoth rally. The event is being held in honor of the new president of the Rebekah Assembly and Grand Sire Davis and Deptuy Grand Sire Pittenger.

Past Grand Master Elmer S. Brown, chairman of rally, states this event will be one of the largest ever held in Frederick. The District of Columbia will participate in the parade, which will start at 7 p. m., headed by the District's own band of 35 pieces. On the arrival of the Washington members, supper will be served by the Rebekahs of Maryland, following which the parade will form. After the parade degrees will be conferred by various lodges, two subordinate degrees, one Encampment degree and one Rebekah degree.

Reception Thursday.

Thursday evening, this jurisdiction will entertain the grand sire and deputy grand sire at a reception in the auditorium of the Odd Fellows Temple at 8:15 o'clock. A program of entertainment has been arranged, but no addresses will be given except by the grand sire and deputy grand sire. This will be the first time that a grand sire and a deputy grand sire will be present at the same time on such an occasion.

On Friday evening, Grand Master Morris L. Dreeben, accompanied by the grand lodge officers, will visit Amity Lodge, No. 27, in Odd Fellows Temple. Amity Lodge is the home lodge of Past Grand Masters Richard A. Ford and Lemuel H. Windsor and the latter's father, John H. Windsor, who has been a member for more than 55 years.

Many Going to Pittsburgh.

Following the visitation, at midnight, a large delegation from Columbia Lodge, No. 10, and Dorcas Rebekah Lodge, No. 4, and members of other lodges will take a special train for Pittsburgh, where a two-day entertainment and reception by the Pittsburgh brethren and sisters await them. A banquet, luncheon, sightseeing trips, entertainment and many other activities will take place during their stay. Columbia Lodge will exemplify the third degree and Dorcas Rebekah Lodge the Rebekah degree.

Grand Warden James H. Solt, chairman of the committee on arrangements and reservations, announces that reservations close Wednesday evening.

Eastern Lodge, No. 7, had a large turnout last Wednesday evening and the degree team conferred the initiatory degree on a candidate. Many of the older members were present for the first time in many months. Several other applications have been promised in a few weeks.

Martha Washington Lodge met October 12 with Noble Grand Lillian Wilcox in charge. Miss Mable R. Wilson, candidate for membership, was elected. Brightwood Rebekah Lodge will confer the degree on a candidate of Martha Washington Lodge on October 24, in Brightwood Hall, Georgia and Colorado avenues northwest.

On November 4 a tacky party will be given at the home of Sister Florence Walters, 4501 Illinios avenue northwest. On November 10 there will be a demonstration dinner for the benefit of the lodge at Wilson Memorial Church, Eleventh and G streets southeast, at 6:30 p. m. The next meeting will be held on October 26, at 7 p. m., to transact urgent business, after which the members will attend the reception of the grand sire and deputy grand sire of the order.

Mount Pleasant Chapter.

Mount Pleasant Chapter No. 34, O. E. S., will serve a Boston dinner at the Masonic Hall, Fourteenth and Kenyon streets northwest, on Thursday, October 26, from 5 to 9 p. m. Cards will follow the dinner.

Will Give Card Party.

The ways and means committee of Ruth Chapter No. 1, O. E. S., will hold a card party in the Masonic Temple, in Brightwood on Monday, October 30 at 8 p. m.

V. F. W. Plan for Big Crowd At Party on Armistice Day

All Posts Join to Promote Gala Event at Wardman Park.

The depression has no terrors for the committee planning this year's armistice military ball, to be held at Wardman Park Hotel on the night of November 11, under auspices of the Veterans of Foreign Wars. Arrangements are being completed to handle a large crowd. Walker Colston is chairman of the box committee.

Maj. Gen. Smedley D. Butler, U. S. M. C., is honorary chairman of the distinguished guests committee, headed by Dr. Don S. Knowlton, who has the following committee members: Brig. Gen. Henry J. Reilley, U. S. A.; Col. Joseph J. Staley, U. S. M. C.; Col. Dunlop P. Penhallow, U. S. A., and Maj. Harvey L. Miller, U. S. M. C.

The music committee is headed by Comrade B. G. Carson, with Edwin W. Warren and W. E. Marshall as the other members. Leon Brussiloff again will lead the dancers, as he has during the last two years.

Queenin Heads Committee.

Raymond J. Queenin heads the floor committee, with Joseph F. Beattie, Harry V. Krichton, H. S. Burke, William H. McGrath, Howard W. Woerner, John G. Robbins, Paul Gray and P. W. Graves as members.

Admiral Robert E. Peary Ship Post has its present commander, Sid Bright, and Commander-elect P. Roach serving on the floor committee. This post, which is the largest single unit of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, with a membership of 3,000, has again joined the District of Columbia Department for this year's ball, besides ordering 500 tickets.

Senior Vice Commander Nathan D. Golden is general chairman of all committees, and is assisted by Dr. Knowlton as vice chairman; Comrade Walter P. Boehm, department quartermaster, treasurer, and director of publicity, and C. B. Herman, secretary. Isaac Gans is honorary chairman.

V. F. W. Recruiting Campaign.

Instructions for District participation in the national veterans' defense rally, planned by the V. F. W., have been received from National Chief of Staff A. D. Vandervoort. The veterans' defense rally, scheduled to begin on November 11, will be a great membership campaign. The campaign will be subdivided into State, department, and local post units, with a quota of new members for each unit. The campaign will continue until June 30, 1934, when every post attaining its quota will receive a placque of acknowledgement from national headquarters, and special awards will be given departments and posts showing the greatest numerical increases and the greatest percentage increases.

Plans for a fall and winter program of campaign activities are being made by the District of Columbia department, and addresses by prominent speakers will be arranged as part of the local veterans' defense rally, so named because it will be a first step in the counterattack the V. F. W. will wage at the next session of Congress against the so-called economy act adopted March 20, 1933. Repeal of the act is one of the major objectives of the V. F. W. 1933-1934 program, and leaders believe that increasing the present membership to even more impressive proportions will assist materially in achieving this result.

V. F. W. Legislative Program.

Measures concerning veteran welfare will be submitted to Congress in January to include restoration of adequate national defense and equalization of pay and pensions for the officers and enlisted personnel of all branches of national service. Other measures of particular importance include Government pensions for widows and orphans of all veterans, regardless of the cause of death, immediate cash payment of adjusted service certificates, and the return of more than 175,000 Spanish-American War veterans to the pension rolls from which they were removed by the last Congress.

The 1933-34 legislative program of the V. F. W. comprises the following six objectives: Federal responsibility for the care of the veteran; adequate relief for veterans suffering from injury or disease incurred in actual war service; relief for those veterans suffering from disabilities due to injury, disease or old age, who are no longer able to carry on; relief for the widows and orphans of all veterans, regardless of the cause of the veteran's death; removal of existing regulations making it necessary for veterans and their dependents to prove they are paupers before they can receive compensation, pensions or hospitalization; immediate cash payment of adjusted service certificates.

Internal Revenue Post.

Arrangements are being made for a gala event of Internal Revenue Post at the installation of the newly elected officers, Monday, November 20, at 8 p. m., in Pythian Temple. Comrade Marshall has been appointed chairman of a special program committee. Commander Greaney presided at the meeting October 16. The following officers were elected: Commander, J. M. McCollum; senior vice commander, G. G. Davis; junior vice commander, W. E. Marshall; quartermaster, J. P. Moore; advocate, R. A. McMillan; chaplain, T. W. Walker; surgeon, Ed Mahan; officer of the day, E. O. Henry.

National Capital Post.

At the last post meeting, held at Pythian Temple, October 10, Commander Charles P. Galpin presided, and more than 60 members and visitors were present. The following new members were admitted: Sheridan Fillmore, who served with Company C, Nineteenth U. S. Infantry, in Puerto Rico, during war with Spain; George A. Crabtree, who served with the 302d Bakery Company, in France, during the World War, and Berkeley Inge, by reinstatement.

The following officers were elected: Commander, Col. Harry Coope; senior vice commander, Walter J. Yebbins; junior vice commander, William W. Burnet; quartermaster, Ernest Wickstrand; judge advocate, Daniel J. Leahy; surgeon, Dr. John L. DeMayo; chaplain, Charles A. Neff; officer of the day, Charles A. Musselman; guard, Henry G. Roth; sentinel, Tony Rosetta.

V. F. W. Bowling League.

Great enthusiasm has been aroused among the comrades of the several posts in the organization of a bowling league, with the following-named officers: President, Abram Grudd; honorary president, Department Commander D. E. Campbell; secretary, Sigmund Millbrandt; treasurer, A. W. Masters, and scorer, W. Megaw.

Eight teams are entered in the league, with other teams in the formative stage. The captains are John D. Wischhusen, for Equality-Walter Reed Post; William J. Keefe, for Front Line Post Team, No. 1; E. F. Clark, for Front Line Post Team, No. 2; Walter P. Boehm, for Front Line Post Team, No. 3; Maurice F. White, for Major General Clarence R. Edwards Post; Joseph Clements, for Potomac Post; Walter J. Yebbins, for National Capital Post, and Joseph Donohue, for Advance Post. The games are rolled at the Petworth Bowling Alleys, 3710 Georgia avenue northwest, starting at 8:30 p. m. on Fridays.

Mineola Tribe, Red Men, Fetes Great Sachem

Schedule of Visitations Will Get Under Way on November 10.

Mineola Council, No. 8, Improved Order of Red Men, and Degree of Pocahontas held official visitation on Saturday, when they received Great Sachem Harry J. Thompson and Great Directress Anna Jarboe and the board of great chiefs. The unwritten work and duties of the chiefs were exemplified under the direction of Council Instructress Annie Armstrong. Mary Douglas, chairman of the good of the order, was in charge of refreshments and dancing afterward.

The Pocahontas, Mary Gayle, extended an address of welcome. Mary Pittman, great prophetess of the State of Virginia; Earl A. Hastings, Great Sachem of Virginia, and Past Sachem William Pittman were the guests of honor.

Independent Council.

Independent Council No. 2 celebrated its thirty-seventh birthday and honored its treasurer, Past National Councilor Hattie M. Miller. The council was instituted on her birthday, October 7, 1896. It also was the occasion of welcoming back its deputy, Past Councilor Renna Corry, of Kenmore Council, No. 23, and celebrated the appointment of Ada Sylvester, past councilor, on the State Council law committee. All line officers of the State Council offered their congratulations to the second oldest council in the District of Columbia.

A banquet was served under supervision of Past Councilor Ada Sylvester, chairman of the good of the order. Invocation was given by Past State Councilor C. O. Bohrer.

The resignation of Myrtle Audrey Williams as recording secretary was accepted, and her sister, Alice Mothershead, was elected and installed.

Past National Councilor Naomi Swann, National Deputy Mildred G. Rock and State Councilor Ella Stone gave a brief history of the early days of the council. Gift presentations followed.

Fidelity Council.

Fidelity Council, No. 4, convened on October 10, with the councilor, Miss Audrey Sadler, presiding. The new deputy, Mrs. Viola Thompson, was received. Mrs. Thompson was one of the council's past deputies for thirteen years, and also instituted it.

Initiation was exemplified under the direction of Mrs. Mamie Howell, drill captain, and her team, staff officers and initiatory officers. Those who received degrees were Miss Patsy Vincent, Miss Mary Hardy and Miss Iola Stout.

Anacostia Council.

Anacostia Council No. 14 was conducted by Councilor Gertrude Everhart. The annual State Council visitation was held.

The warrant of Mrs. Ruth Warren, of Pride of Washington Council No. 26, having been read, she was received with escort of flag bearers, Mrs. Grace Greer and Mrs. Daisy Smithson, Conductor Helen Van Wormer and Warden Lillie Hazel.

Miss Addie Mathews was elected a member.

The State officers were invited to take chairs of honor. State Councilor Ella Stone congratulated the council on its work. Roll call showed an attendance of 285, Anacostia Council having 64, past State councilors 29 and deputies 21. She also congratulated Mr. and Mrs. Burdette, who recently celebrated their fiftieth wedding anniversary.

John S. Driggers, of the State committee, urged a membership drive. Theme songs composed by Past National Councilor Naomi E. Swann and Junior Past State Councilor Mrs. S. Belle Gibson, were given preparatory to the trip to Richmond. Past State Councilor Mrs. Elizabeth Shepherd and others made brief remarks.

Presentation of gifts by the chairman of the good of the order committee were made.

After the meeting those present were entertained by the Golden Page Class of the Anacostia M. E. Church, which presented an old-fashioned circus.

Junior Mechanics of Benning Council Near Member Goal

Plans Laid for Banquet; Chapters Initiate Candidates.

With only 26 days more to go in the membership drive of Benning Council, Junior Order United American Mechanics, the goal of 200 new members appears assured. Councilor Clifford Long presided over the session of October 15 and initiated Elmer Young, Norman Martin, James Windham and Theodore Schrum into the order and received three other new applications. Last night Liberty Bell Council, No. 55, conferred degrees upon Albert James Stauss, from this council.

The chairman of the good of the order committee, Archie T. Gray, announced that all arrangements have been completed for the entertainment and dance in the Northeast Masonic Temple, 523 Eighth street northeast, next Saturday evening. # Sailors and Marines Join in Land, Air and Sea Show to Celebrate "Navy Day" Friday

Divers, Fliers, Machine Gun Crews to Show Their Wares

"Open House" to Be Held at Yard Here Throughout Morning and Afternoon; Whale Boat Race Among Features.

"Open house" in the Navy will be observed Friday in celebration of Navy Day.

A continual succession of events will mark the festivities at the Washington Navy Yard. With the morning program beginning at 8 o'clock and ending in the evening, the premises will be open for inspection by visitors until 6 p. m.

Featured at the opening will be a tour of the forge shop, where visitors will be shown the manufacture of torpedo heads and the breaking-down of ingots. A band concert will be presented at 8:30 o'clock.

Formal guard mounting followed by close-order drill in Leutze Park will be executed by a company of Marines from Quantico, Va.

Divers to Exhibit.

A special exhibition of deep-sea diving will be held from the diving boat Crilley at 9:20 a. m. and will be presented each hour until 4 p. m. The diving school also will present a series of exhibitions. The 75 MM. Pack Howitzer Platoon of Marines from Quantico will go through their maneuvers on the Navy Yard waterfront.

At 10 a. m. an airplane will be launched from a catapult and shortly after sailors and marines will parade in the vicinity of the yard. Methods of saving the crew of a ship in distress will be demonstrated by the U. S. Coast Guard life-saving crew from Chicamacomico, N. C. The Marines will give a machine-gun drill exhibit in Leutze Park shortly before noon.

Whaleboat Race.

The program of the morning will be repeated during the early afternoon and at 2:15 p. m., whaleboat races between members of the crews of the U. S. Coast Guard cutters Mendota and Apache will be held on the waterfront for a money prize.

Rear Admiral Henry Varnum Butler, commandant of the yard, will present the winners of the race with the prize and at 3:15 p. m. will be attended by his staff in reviewing a parade of sailors and marines. The last official land exhibit of the day at the Navy Yard will be a landing gun drill and company maneuvers by sailors from the receiving ship on the waterfront at 3:45 p. m.

Activities will continue in the air with planes from the naval air station at Anacostia and Marine barracks at Quantico, flying in formation for 40 minutes. Their formation flight will end with a smoke screen exhibit.

The ceremonies at the yard will close with presentation of colors at the main gate.

Admission by Card.

Admittance to the Coast Guard cutters docked at the waterfront for the celebration will be granted to adults by card only. The cards will be issued at a booth at the waterfront. Motion pictures of the "Navy in Action" will be shown each hour in the Sail Loft.

A model Marine camp will be open on the waterfront as will a Coast Guard life saving station. The naval air station will be open from 8 a. m. to 6 p. m.

The naval observatory will be open for inspection throughout the day and in the evening by special card.

Directs Program for Navy Day

REAR ADMIRAL HENRY V. BUTLER.

D. C. Reserves Schedule Six Staff Sessions

Quartermaster, Chemical Corps Men to Meet Tomorrow.

By A. S. DeAgro, Staff Sergeant.

Six meetings will take place at headquarters of the District Reserve officers this coming week.

Sixth Marine Medical Units Given Training

Prepare for Advancement in Field Exercises Next Year.

While the line units, rifle, machine gun, signal and transport companies of the Sixth Marine Reserve Brigade are having their officers and noncommissioned officers attend regular classes of instruction at brigade headquarters in conjunction with the Marine Corps schools, the brigade medical troops, under Lieut. Comdr. Don S. Knowlton, are also preparing for more advanced field conditions for next year's camp.

With the brigade making excellent progress in preparation and study and winning letters of commendation from the major general commandant and praise from the board of observers, it is a matter of pride in the brigade that its medical troops were especially mentioned in the board of observers' report and also in the report of Brig. Gen. James C. Breckinridge, who accompanied the hike through Southern Maryland under field conditions.

The Medical Detachment operated march collecting posts and administered to the needs of the entire personnel of the brigade in camp.

In winter, in addition to attending classes in military medical subjects, the Medical Detachment conducts recruiting nights for physical examinations of applicants for enlistment and enlisted applicants for commissioned grades.

Lieut. Comdr. Knowlton, an overseas veteran, has been the brigade's senior medical officer since its inception in 1929. Other brigade medical officers are:

Assistant brigade surgeon, Lieut. W. L. Schafer, an overseas veteran, and now the health officer in Alexandria, Va.

Lieut. Howard H. Strine, battalion surgeon, First Battalion.

Lieut. A. Victor Cercell, dental surgeon, another overseas veteran.

Lieut. Lester M. Lucas, dental surgeon.

The brigade medical troops will hold a turkey shoot November 27 in the brigade armory on John Marshall place. Prizes will be large turkeys.

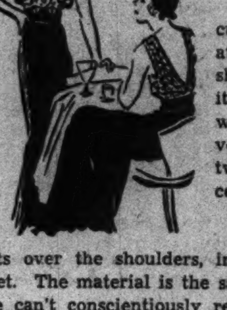
Gown of Black Satin and Crepe Enriched by Gold Brocade Delights Autumn Shopper

Designs Accentuate Vivid Colorings of Fall Season

Paprika Lives Up to Its Name in Afternoon Frock; Bibs Not Babyish as Mainboucher Makes Them; Red Dahlias Lend Dash.

We're all a-dither from searching for a word that will adequately describe a new dinner gown. Scintillating? But it's more, much more than that. Glamorous? No, it has more verve than is usually associated with glamour. Ravishing? Well, at least that gives an approximate idea.



Rich gold brocade in tiny flowerets on heavy. black satin makes the bodice, with soft cowl neck in front and a deep, wicked V in back.

The floor-length sheath skirt is intricately cut so that a little additional length hangs at each side. The material is lightweight, sheer basket-weave crepe and so subtle is its beauty that it makes us wonder how we were ever satisfied with mere silks or velvets for dinner wear. A flame-colored, twisted crepe girdle encircles the waist, accented with two gold ornaments in front.

The Right Setting for Drama.

Wide, sharply-pointed lapels and deep points over the shoulders, in lieu of sleeves, characterize the bolero jacket. The material is the same as the gown's bodice.

We can't conscientiously recommend this model for the small, intimate dinner. It's much too decorative to waste on a few, no matter how appreciative they are. Wrap its swishy folds about you when there will be an opportunity for a dramatic entrance. If the remainder of the evening isn't dramatic, it won't be the gown's fault.

Those luxurious birds of passage who flit to Palm Beach or Bermuda at the fall of a snowflake are thinking, even this early in the season, of the most satisfactory clothes for traveling. They're quite particular, these women. They want things that are wearable, yet smart; striking, but not too sensational; candid, but not commonplace. They let themselves go when it comes to formal wear. For traveling, however, they prefer more conventional things.

Suit of Blue Velour Yarn.

A perfect example of this type of costume is a dark blue velour yarn suit with shell pink handmade lace jumper. The seamless skirt, with slight flair, will not bag or stretch, according to the Connecticut avenue shop where we found it. White pearl buttons fasten the sleeveless, high-necked blouse. The little masculine collar looks fetching above the plain neck of the cardigan jacket.

The price of the suit is $49.50.

As piquant as paprika is the new color of that name, especially when combined with brown dragonette crepe in an afternoon frock. The one-piece dress has a two-tone bib effect in front which terminates in streamers that tie in back. Two shaggy, paprika chrysanthemums are placed at the throat, in the center of wing-like lapels. Drop-shoulder sleeves are set in the bodice with tailored, pressed-down tucks. Two small fan pleats give back fullness to the narrow skirt. It's really a love, that dress.

Bibs Take on Sophistication.

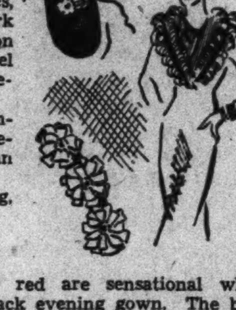
When you tie a bib beneath your chin it doesn't mean that you're reverting to childhood days. It signifies that you're smart and fashion-wise. In Mainboucher's hands of genius this little article with the utilitarian name becomes a provocative bit of sophistication. Nothing could be sweeter for filling in the neck of an afternoon frock or evening gown.



Three carnations, in luscious brown tones, are grouped engagingly at the top of a dark brown crepe back satin one for afternoon wear. Fluffy ostrich trims triangular, pastel ones that look positively angelic with evening gowns.

Although these bibs have nothing in common with the nursery, they do give a decidedly youthful appearance; and no woman is adverse to a little thing like that.

When you get ready to go bib shopping, try an F street store.

Velvet Dahlias Lend Color.

Three huge velvet dahlias in lacquer red are sensational when bunched beneath the chin, on a slinky black evening gown. The brilliant color of the flowers puts a sparkle in your eyes and makes your skin look whiter and more lustrous. These flaming dahlias will also transform an ingenuous white formal gown into a crisply distinctive costume.

Since clips are attached, it's a simple matter to wear the flowers at the waist or shoulder, as well as under the chin, without ripping them off the dress each time your fancy changes.

The dahlias, in a variety of glowing colors, are priced at $1.95.

The same store has a flower shoulder strap. Seven lovely blossoms make the delectable affair. Bittersweet, a golden orange shade, is exceedingly attractive for late autumn gowns. The price is $2.95.

A Hat for the Football Game.

So you've been sitting up nights, wondering what hat to wear to the big game. You want something that will have a casual, sportsy sort of look while you're yelling your head off on the sidelines. And yet you want it to be capable of weaving a bit of magic when you're seated across the dinner table from the particular "man of the hour" following the gridiron struggle. Above all, it must be newer than new, and oh, so different.

Well, here's a suggestion that will bear looking into. A red felt sailor, stitched in black to give a jolly plaid effect, is in a Connecticut avenue shop, just crying its little felt heart out to witness a few touchdowns. It if were an ordinary sailor we'd say, "Let it cry!" But it isn't ordinary. A happy cross between a musical comedy hat and the new pork-pie shape, it really deserves some consideration.

The bright, clear red would be stunning with black, gray, or dark blue. If your coat or suit isn't in one of those colors, you may purchase the hat in other shades. Price, $10.50.

Dress Coat of Chelga.

You'll look and feel as dashing as a Cossack on his fiery steed if you yield to the Russian influence in a dress coat with high, Persian lamb collar. Chelga is the intriguing name of the glorious, ribbed fabric. The sleeves fit smoothly over the upper arm but interesting fullness is released below the elbow by means of an ingenious square cut.

"How in the world can we describe those sleeves?" we asked the owner of the Connecticut avenue shop.

"They were never meant to be described with mere words," said he. "They were meant to be seen, to be enjoyed through the sense of sight. The creation of a great designer is as hard to put into words as the score of a sonata."

Perhaps he is right. At least we came out of the shop convinced that sleeves can be as lyric in loveliness as a chansonette.

As if those sleeves weren't enough for any one garment, the coat has small, stiff, double peplums at the waistline to give a svelte, trim appearance to the hips.

If you like, you may wear the collar open. It ripples becomingly at the throat.

Daughters of 1812 Hold First Fall Meeting

The District of Columbia Society of the United States Daughters of 1812 held the first meeting of the season at national headquarters October 14.

The newly elected president, Mrs. Mary Logan Tucker, presided and other new officers were present.

The report of the treasurer, Mrs. Sparrow, showed a substantial balance.

Preceding the business meeting, Mrs. Tucker entertained the members of the executive board at a luncheon.

The society was represented at the national board meeting held in Chicago October 17 by the president, Mrs. Tucker; Miss Evelyn L. Yeomans, historian; Mrs. Sol Lansburgh, librarian, and Miss Mary Captola Custer, national flag custodian.

Cultus Club Plans Birthday Celebration

The Washington Cultus Club held the first meeting of the 1933-1934 season at the home of Mrs. William Steuart, in Chevy Chase on Tuesday, October 17. Twenty-two members responded to the roll call and there were two guests, Mrs. Henry Steuart and Miss Yeatman.

After the luncheon the meeting was called to order by the new president, Mrs. Ralph Barnard, serving in this capacity for the first time since her election to the office at the annual meeting in May.

Papers were read by Mrs. Appleton Clark and Mrs. Lucy Copeland.

Plans are being made for the thirtieth anniversary of the founding of the club, which will be celebrated with a luncheon and a program, November 17.

Gold lame gleams through the dark brown cut-velvet blouse of a brown transparent velvet afternoon gown for the older woman. She'll feel as assured and debonair as her dashing young daughter if she wears this model to the matinee. Teas and musicales would also be a felicitous background.

An authentic copy of a Mainboucher toque is a happy complement to this gown. Sleek brown and green coq feathers are softly draped over brown pressed checked velvet.

As thick as stars on a winter night are cream and green beads, arranged in rows and rows, on the dolman sleeves of a brown sheer crepe dress. The bead decoration extends across the back of the neck in a wide band. Curled ostrich adds a touch of coquetry to a brown felt hat.

Seasons come and seasons go, but the combination of black and white goes on forever. In this particular instance, white galyak sweeps daringly across one side of a black velvet hat to inestimable advantage.

These models were sketched especially for The Washington Post from models at Jelleff's.

Shoe Designs Tempt Shopper

Some enterprising shoe designer looked at the calendar the other day and discovered that Christmas is coming.

Immediately he hit upon the brilliant idea of making a pair of slippers in red and green, and so delectable is the result that it will take a marvelous amount of self-control for daring souls to wait until the Christmas season to purchase a pair. It's a safe bet that they won't. The unusual combination has all sorts of possibilities. Can't you just see them twinkling beneath a Spanish evening gown?

Not to be outdone by the man who looked at the calendar, another designer was inspired to create an opera pump in five tones which will harmonize with any evening gown. The heel, like that of all the new shoes, has the new high backward movement as a thoughtful complement to the high neck lines of fall dresses.

One of the most unusual and, at the same time, most practical slippers is a patent leather trimmed suede that comes up high on the instep, thus giving any ankle a svelte, firm appearence. It is practical, despite its frivolous design, in that it would look adorable with a dinner gown, could be worn with an afternoon dress and wouldn't be ridiculous with a street costume or tailleur.

For the woman who does lots of walking there is nothing smarter nor comfortable than a ghillie oxford, especially if it is made of lizard, which will outwear almost any other leather. Lizard is also used for a neat street shoe, ornamented with a dignified sort of buckle.

It will be difficult to keep "heads up" this winter when there are so many interesting shoes to be seen by keeping one's eyes on the ground.

2. Five-tone ribbon effect to wear with any evening gown.

3. Street shoe of lizard.

5. Suede with patent leather.

Delphian Society Discusses Comedy

The Delta Sigma Chapter, of the Delphian Society, held its semi-monthly meeting September 16, at the Shoreham Hotel, the president, Mrs. Pinckney J. Harman, presiding.

The literary program was "Greek Comedy," led by Mrs. David Bethune. After the preliminary survey on "The Beginning of Comedy," given by Mrs. Harman, the following topics were given: "Old Comedy," Mrs. Frederick T. F. Johnston; "Analysis of 'The Birds,'" Mrs. Harry James; "Middle and New Comedy," Mrs. Guy Mason; "Menander's Plays," Mrs. Willard Nalls, and "Character of New Comedy," Mrs. James A. O'Shea.

The first and last acts of the Latin play, "The Brothers," by Terence, was read in character for comparison by Mrs. F. T. F. Johnston, Mrs. Homer R. Hendricks, Mrs. W. B. Hayes, Mrs. Harry James and Mrs. Willard Nalls. The synopsis of the othefs acts was given by Mrs. Ruth Snodgrass.

Mrs. Helen Cranston gave a description of the play, "The Silent Woman," by Ben Jonson, as recently given by the Shakespearean Club.

The field secretary, Mrs. Eleanor R. Wilson, was a visitor and addressed the chapter.

Velvet Coat Retains Its Dignity in Black

Coats are a glorious addition to the velvet family which includes afternoon and evening gowns, hats, gloves, shoes and bags. These velvet coats, however, leave the colors to other members of the family. They stick to black and are at their best when trimmed with silver fox.

Monk Styles Are Shown In Woman's Footwear

The gentlemen of the retail shoe association dropped into New York the other day for a conclave about shoe trends, and with the aid of their faithful women scouts, managed to decide a lot of things:

First, the ecclesiastical influence in clothes is rapidly affecting shoe design. High-throated monk styles will just about put everything else in your shoe closet out of the picture.

Light-treated moccasin designs will be right in the top ranks, and gored elastic step-ins with plenty of cut-out straps, &c., will walk in for the Mae West type of rich afternoon costumes.

The girl without an evening slipper dyed in multicolors will be a poor little nobody, and about the only styles worth saving from your present asortment of shoes are those with perforations or stitchings as ornamentation.

Beta Sigma Phi Unit Holds Initial Meeting

Beta Chapter of Beta Sigma Phi Sorority, of which Mrs. Ellis Logan is sponsor, held its first meeting of the season October 9, at the home of its president, Miss Mary V. Lauderdale, 1424 Webster street.

New officers include Miss Ruth Nicholson, president; Miss Ella Kaubler, first vice president; Miss Viola Palmer, second vice president; Mrs. Theresa Adams, treasurer; Misses Manie C. Eakin, recording secretary; Ruth Spicer, corresponding secretary; Lida Lea, auditor, and Mary V. Lauderdale, press correspondent.

The next meeting will be Friday evening at 8 o'clock, at 2400 Sixteenth street.

Cavalcade Hat Shown in Paris

Pheasant's Feather Blooms Out of Crown.

Paris, Oct. 21.—Of course there is a hat called "Cavalcade" and it is designed by Mme. Agnes. It is small and of brown taupe trimmed with a pheasant's feather, brown and coq de roche shades. The pheasant's feather blooms directly out of the crown of the head and trickles down over the crown in a leisurely manner.

As far as French millinery is concerned, a new tendency toward a freed movement at the back is in evidence everywhere, dressmaking in general having broad shoulder effects and the fur of the coats being set with width.

There are a large number of good felts, a clear tendency toward fur, especially in the toques, broadtail felts, Astrakhan felts, &c, and there are many with ribbon and feather trims.

"Patati-patata" is the name which Mirande gives to one of her superelegant dinner creations made of black and white "Reddor"—that exciting fabric by Roubaudi. It is a glazy material with a diagonal thread of silver through it as stripes every two inches.

The gown, as Mirande conceives it, is of the fabric in black, tight to the knees and full from there to the floor, and the short hop-jacket is of the same cloth but in white with wide circular reveres and simple sleeves which widen from the elbows to the wrists where they turn back in a bias cuff.

Delegate Reports on Sisterhood Convention

Mrs. Bruce Baird entertained members of Chapter G, District of Columbia P. E. O., last Thursday at tea in Woodward & Lothrop's tea room. This followed the first business meeting of the autumn.

Mrs. Johnston B. Campbell gave the program, which consisted of an account of the supreme convention, held in Kansas City, Mo., early in October, when Mrs. Campbell was a delegate from Chapter G.

Mrs. Campbell said that 127 new chapters had been organized during the past year, and that the P. E. O. Sisterhood numbered over 53,000 members, the educational fund now amounts to $702,000 and 1,829 girls are at present holding loans with which to continue their education. Over 900 women, in attendance at the convention, made a pilgrimage to Cottey College in Nevada, Mo., which is owned by the P. E. O. Sisterhood.

Mrs. Harry O. Hine will be hostess at the next meeting of the Chapter G. on October 26, in her residence, 3204 Highland place.

Year's Plans Made By Writers' League

First Meeting of Season Held at Center.

The Writers' League of Washington held its first meeting of the season at the Thomson Community Center Friday evening. Plans for the year were discussed, and reports given on informal meetings held during the summer, one at Hains Point, others at the homes of Miss Georgia Redway and Miss Julia M. Escher.

Mrs. L. W. Tilton read a story, which was discussed.

Mrs. Elizabeth S. Osgood presented two booklets, "Sketches of Washington" and "Four Songs," and the president, Mr. M. Hugh Irish, read two of the poems.

The next meeting will be Friday, October 27, at 8 o'clock at the community center, when a charter member, Miss Marie Dallas, will appear on the program. Other numbers will be short stories by Miss Nellie Thomas, Miss Gladys Smith, Miss Georgia Redway and Mr. Clark Palmer Cole, and verse by Miss Anna Priestley.

Halloween Dance Opens Season for Chi Sigma

Iota Chapter of Chi Sigma Sorority will open its social season with an old-fashioned Halloween dance at the Hayloft October 27. Mrs. Margaret Moffat is chairman, assisted by Misses Jane Hovermale, Betty Martin, Frances Sullivan and Olive Summers.

The sorority met October 16 at Park Towers, home of Miss Betty Martin. Among the guests were Misses Loretta Mansfield, Mary Neubeck and Marie Dobrin. Miss Mary Lou Colliflower reported on the New Year's Eve dance. The rush program will open with a tea on October 29.

Auxiliary, Railway Unit Have Dinner

Mail Association Members Hosts to Mrs. Wiley.

The Washington Women's Auxiliary to the Railway Mail Association and the association had a dinner, October 16, at the Capitol Park Hotel, sponsored by the delegates to the national convention. B. N. Burleyson, D. M. Tice and W. M. Collins, with Mrs. Harvey W. Wiley, president of the D. C. Federation of Women's Clubs, as guests of honor. The auxiliary president, Mrs. B. N. Burleyson, gave a short address of welcome and presented Mrs. Wiley with a corsage.

At 8 p. m. the auxiliary held its monthly business meeting. Mrs. W. L. Marshall was given a vote of thanks for the bridge luncheon given at her home. Mrs. Wiley spoke on Federation activities.

Mrs. Burleyson read her report given at the national convention and the delegates in turn reported on the convention. The ways and means chairman, Mrs. A. F. Lingle, announced a rummage sale for November 6-7.

Note of Another Era Observed In New Gowns

Svelte Lines, Bell Skirts For Evening Wear; Costumes Noted.

The svelte lines of the turn of the century and the bell skirts, which stand out about the hems to billow into sweeping trains in the back, give a note of another era to the scene when women and girls gather in the homes and ballrooms of our National Capital after nightfall.

There is nothing of a New Woman effect to the costumes worn for dinner and evening parties by women helping to run the Government. Masculine clothes are left for the daytime if the suits are tailored ones. Many a feminine-looking daytime costume is worn by women who work all day at their desks.

For evening the dignity and becomingness of black is taken as a matter of course. Any one who has a black dress of lace or crepe de chine or satin or velvet left from last year and thinks it will do well enough this year will feel sadly out of the picture. The lines are different. Although very long, wide-at-the-hem skirts were worn last year, there was a lot of extra fullness over the shoulders. Now the lines of the body are really curved instead of there being just a suggestion of a curve—and the dresses must be cut to conform with this idea.

Drop-Shoulder Effect.

There is fullness at the shoulders, but those shoulders often are made so that they "drop off." The drop-shoulder effect, finished with wide ruffles or fur or ostrich trimming, is one of the very latest fashion notes, although it must be acknowledged they present the woman with thin shoulders in a most unbecoming aspect.

Most of the skirts are molded tightly to the figure to the point where the bell effect begins and are held out at the hem by means of wires or crinoline. One of the prettiest dresses worn by a debutante at one of the small informal dances so important in these weeks before the first coming-out dances was of lovely white lace with lace for ruffles at the hem of the bell-like skirt and across the drop shoulders, which are primly starched. Of course, there is a train, because even very young girls like to wear trains with evening dresses, although some of them who like to dance with freedom have the train ripped off after the first wearing or two.

Mrs. Roosevelt, who is something of a devotee of knitted suits, is wearing just now one of Oxford mixed wool with the gray tone predominating. This is made with a plain skirt and sweater having a belt, and with it she wears a soft flowered silk blouse.

Mrs. Harold L. Ickes, wife of the Secretary of the Interior, has a penchant for tailored clothes and had on a particularly smart black silk costume at a recent luncheon. It was made on tailored lines, with a tailored jabot faced in white. With this she wore a small black felt hat.

Mrs. Isabella Greenway, newly elected representative from Arizona, always has her hats and costumes made to harmonize. She wore at the White House and other luncheons last week a dress of soft green cloth of a very fine silk-like weave with hanging sleeves to the elbows heavily embroidered in silver. Tight-fitting gauntlet cuffs came to the wrists. With this Mrs. Greenway wore a hat of dark green velvet made with a soft crown and a brim wider in the front than in the back.

Other Costumes Observed.

Mrs. Lawrence Townsend was dressed at the first concert of the National Symphony Orchestra in a smart costume of black silk, made on tailored lines, with which she wore a silver fox fur and small black felt turban.

Miss Irene Boyle has a smart costume of black silk with a vestee of embroidered material. With this she wears a small black turban hat.

Mrs. Charles Graves Matthews has a fall costume of blue crepe de chine made in coat effect with which she wears a white ermine collar and a small blue hat with a band of ermine.

Mrs. Charles Bell, who always is one of the best-dressed young matrons at any gathering, has an ensemble suit of black duventyn The coat is the fashionable one of just-above-the-knees length and is quite loose. The dress has insets of silver lame and a narrow collar with a huge jabot in front of the lame. With this Mrs. Bell wears a soft hat of stitched duvetyn with a band of silver lame.

Mrs. Charles Cary Rumsey has a black velvet dinner dress heavily embroidered about the bodice in gold beads. The skirt has a graceful sweep. Since this is a dinner dress it has sleeves—fine gold net ones. With this Mrs. Rumsey wears a black velvet coat, almost as long as her dress, and a rolled collar finished with handsome fur.

Girls' Friendly Society Has Supper Conference

At the Epiphany Branch, Girls Training Society, supper was served at 6 o'clock Monday evening. Services were held at 7 o'clock, and Frederick Snyder talked on "Current Events" at 8 o'clock. Tomorrow the services will be held at 7, and classes in dramatics, personal religion and singing will start at 7:30.

The Younger Branch of the Epiphany G. F. S. elected the following officers: President, Mary Stuart; secretary and treasurer, Jessie Carleton, Elmyra Parrish and Mary Stuart gave their report of the Younger Members Conference held at the Holiday House.

St. Paul's Rock Creek Parish G. D. S., held their regular meeting. Miss Margaret Waldecker was elected secretary, and Louise Helff, treasurer. Owing to the large attendance at the meetings it is necessary to divide the girls into two groups.

Lord Baltimore's Charter Gave Him Kingly Powers

Ruler of Infant Maryland Permitted to Bestow Titles and Inflict Death Penalty in Colony.

By William Rufus Scott.

Maryland early next year will celebrate the 300th anniversary of the founding of the State. This is the second of a series of articles on that event.

INDEPENDENCE of the American colonies from England already was in the making, though faintly developed, when King Charles issued the charter for Maryland in 1632. In fact, the Maryland charter was the king's maneuver in the struggle with the colonies, which never ceased until 1776, with its defiance of the mother country and final separation.

King Charles, however, was not looking that far ahead. He simply was taking steps to exercise more direct and firmer control over future colonies than he had found practicable in his dealings with Virginia and Plymouth. the former founded in 1607 and the latter in 1620.

There had been stormy times over the Virginia enterprise. This colony was asserting itself, and defending its concept of its charter rights, in ways distasteful to the monarch. Whereupon, the king provided a new type of government for Maryland. He would have no more of the joint stock companies, which had founded the other two colonies, and instead instituted the proprietary, or one-man ownership, type of government for Maryland.

Germ of Independence.

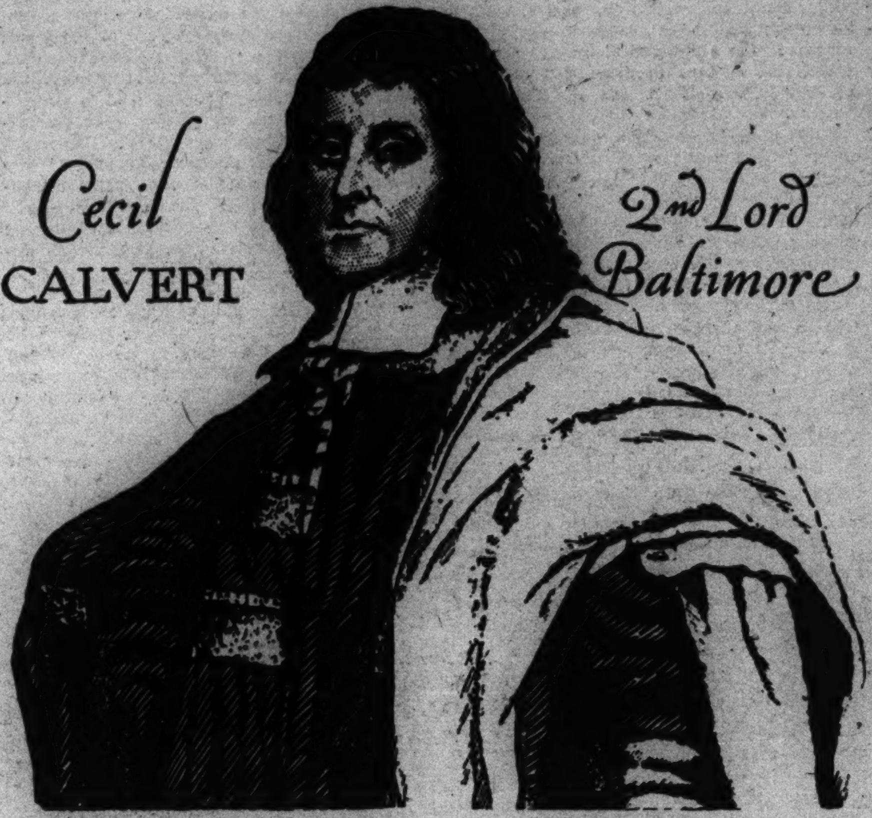
As a model for this innovation the king took the County of Durham in England. The Bishop of Durham is cited in the Maryland charter as exercising authority, under the king, which was to be copied by Lord Baltimore in governing Maryland. The bishop was a Protestant, whereas Lord Baltimore was a Catholic. The significance of this will become apparent in discussing religious toleration in Maryland, which is reserved for a later article, since the political aspects of the charter will require all the space available for this installment.

From Maryland onward every other English colony had the proprietary form of government in varying degrees. As we look backward now it is plain that the germ of independence in America was too strong to be either stifled or controlled by any form of colonial government the English monarchs were able to devise, and Maryland ultimately was in line with all the other colonies in demanding freedom.



Cecil CALVERT 2nd Lord Baltimore

Before examining in detail the Maryland charter some account must be taken of the young man to whom it was issued and who successfully established the third English colony in America. George Calvert, the first Lord Baltimore, died in April, 1632, after having brought the charter up to the point of issuance and having accomplished the principal organizing work for the colony. To his eldest son, Cecilius, or Cecil, then 26 years old, fell the task of carrying the project through to success.

The charter was issued to him under date of June 20, 1632. Charter day accordingly is celebrated on June 20 in Maryland, and it is this date which is selected by the Maryland Tercentenary Commission for the chief observance of the founding of Maryland, next June, at St. Marys, the site of the first settlement. The colonists, however, actually landed on March 25, 1634,* at a nearby island, but the June date will assure better weather for the celebration.

Cecilius Calvert was born in 1606. At 15 he entered Oxford University but there is no record that he was graduated. When about 18 years old he married one of the beauties of England, Anne Arundel, whose musical name is borne by one of the counties of Maryland. Though he guided the colony from starting time to his death, Cecilius, the second Lord Baltimore, never set foot on Maryland soil. His presence seemed necessary in London to protect the enterprise from its opponents, including Virginians who resented the Maryland colony because they believed it occupied territory justly belonging to Virginia. Other ob-

In the sonorous diction of the public documents of that period King Charles bestowed upon Lord Baltimore not only the area we now know as Maryland but rather indefinite boundaries which included what we now know as parts of Virginia, West Virginia and Pennsylvania and all of Delaware.

"Whereas, our well beloved and right trusty subject, Cecilius Calvert . . . treading in the steps of his father . . . being animated with a laudable and pious zeal for extending the Chrisian religion, and also the territories of our empire . . . to parts of America . . . occupied by savages having no knowledge of the Divine Being," and for various other reasons set forth, was given for himself and his heirs forever the area of Maryland defined in the charter.

Through five generations the Calverts held the province, sometimes with rebellion on their hands and almost losing it now and again, but the king's intention that they should have it forever went down, as the proprietary rights of Pennsylvania and other colonies went down, before the surge of self-government that became irresistible in America.

Kingdom Within a Kingdom.

The idea of one-man ownership was not unique in the Maryland charter. The first Lord Baltimore had sent a colony to Newfoundland in 1621 and in 1623 was given a charter for that colony, known as Avalon, by King James, who also based it upon County Durham and its peculiar form of government, usually called a palatinate. The Avalon and Maryland charters are virtually identical. Lord Baltimore abandoned the Newfoundland venture in favor of the more desirable climate of mid-America adjacent to Virginia.

A palatinate was a kingdom within a kingdom. Its ruler exercised powers like the king's on a miniature scale. Usually a palatinate was set up in a county or other subdivision which, because of its remoteness from the central government, or its exposure to invasion, necessitated quick action for defense and arbitrary authority. County Durham was on the border of England next to Scotland. Its ruler, then a bishop, could do pretty much as he pleased in governing the people, such as raising troops, appointing judges, fixing taxation, and so forth. Nevertheless, the king reserved direct allegiance of the people to himself and otherwise retained sovereignty.

Maryland was conceived in this light, as a remote province, subject to sudden attack by savages, and requiring law-making and other governmental functions to be exercised on the spot without waiting for the tedious and usually ill-informed judgment of the government at London. But Maryland was to have more democracy than did Durham.

Had Power of Death.

The proprietor, Lord Baltimore, was held short of complete autocracy by numerous provisions in the charter. The laws were to be made subject to the consent of the freemen of the colony, who were to be called into assembly. Both proprietor and freemen were limited in their law-making by the rigid stipulation that all laws, ordinances and institutions passed or established must be agreeable to the laws, customs and institutions of England. King Charles meant that Maryland should be patterned after the government of England and that the colonists there should have the same privileges as if they were in England. They were in no way to impair their allegiance to the king or to England, nor could they recognize any sovereignty above the King of England.

Representative government as provided in the charter was not the first introduction of this system in American colonies. Virginia has the distinction of organizing the first representative assembly in America, in 1619, or a year before the Pilgrims landed at Plymouth, and 15 years before the Maryland colony landed in 1634. The first Maryland Assembly met in 1635.

Lord Baltimore was given power to bestow titles and other honors, he could name judges and execute the laws, even unto the death sentence, could open ports and foster foreign trade, could cause churches and chapels to be erected and have the patronage thereof subject to the ecclesiastical laws of England, could call citizens to arms, put down rebellion, declare martial law and other military functions, could rent and control land, lay duties, tolls on ships, coin money, and in general govern Maryland as a kind of constitutional monarch.

These were broader powers than those specified in the Virginia charter, and, it must be admitted, more suitable for governing a province in a virgin land 3,000 or 4,000 miles from the mother country. Everything would depend upon the kind of administration. The Calverts, with critical neighbors in Virginia and an equally citical eye always trained upon them in London, steered a moderate course, often being on the defensive to retain their rights in the colony, and sometimes temporarily dispossessed of them.

Two Arrows Rent.

The rental the king charged Lord Baltimore for the province was a ceremonial payment of two Indian arrows annually, and Lord Baltimore also was to give to the king one-fifth of the gold and silver found or produced in the colony, but as none was found, none was paid.

Finally, to assure Lord Baltimore of a fair deal the charter commanded that in any legal disputes that might arise as to the meaning of the charter or any part of it the English courts were to resolve doubts in favor of Lord Baltimore and construe the charter favorably to his interests wherever possible, but the king added:

"Provided, always, that no interpretation be admitted thereof whereby God's holy and truly Christian religion or allegiance due unto us, our heirs and successors may in anything suffer prejudice or diminution."

If we would understand adequately the obstacles met by both the first and second Lords Baltimore, it is only necessary to realize that getting a colonial charter in England 300 years ago was much the same as getting a code through the National Recovery Administration today.

King Jealous of His Rights.

Just as employers, labor and consumers are represented at every hearing on a code for a particular industry today, so in the Calverts' day were large and influential groups standing by in the negotiations for the Maryland charter to see that their viewpoints and interests were not ignored or impaired. Human nature was the same then as it is today—only the clothes worn, the manner of speech and other surface elements being different.

King Charles was just as particular and exacting about his rights as were any critics of the charter. He had not the slightest intention of giving any power to Lord Baltimore that undermined the monarch's sovereignty, as shown in the last preceding quotation from the charter, and could be substantiated by numerous other citations. Lord Baltimore had to satisfy them all that it would be a good thing for England, a safe thing for Protestantism, and especially that it retained to the king every right he possessed or claimed.

That, in spite of all these conflicting interests, real progress for mankind was evolved in the Maryland charter is the outstanding fact for historians today. As it turned out there was much more freedom of every sort in Maryland than in England of that period. Now and then some political upheaval in the mother country was reflected in a grafting of intolerance or tyranny upon the colony, but this fungus growth was shaken off in time and the charter finally merged into the perfect flowering of liberty in the Constitution of the United States.

The issuance of this charter did not end Lord Baltimore's troubles, but, rather, intensified them. Those who objected to it on political and enonomic grounds, as well as those who opposed it on religious grounds, were more numerous than those who favored it or were neutral about it, and powerful private and official resistance was encountered by the 26-year-old baron at every step. While Lord Baltimore unquestionably had mature and wise counselors, it still must be conceded that he also must have had then, as he proved he had in later years, exceptional gifts of leadership.

Analysis of the religious phase of the Maryland colony will be the subject of the next article in this series, to appear in this magazine in the near future. It is of such importance as to warrant discussion apart from all other phases.

Tree Fragment Slight Clew to Eternity's Roll

"Doth tease us out of time
As doth Eternity . . ."

Keats had in mind the Grecian urn to inspire his thought upon Eternity. There is an old figure; a gigantic mountain is imagined, and a tiny fowl of the air is pictured in the dim foreground. Conceive that mighty mountain carried away, grain by grain, the bird coming to pick each grain but once in a thousand years. When that pile has been removed, says the geologist, Time, Eternity, will have just begun!

Before the home of the National Education Association, 1201 Sixteenth street northwest, is likewise a spectacle that epitomizes Time, Eternity, for the thoughtful. It is the preserved cross-section of a giant California redwood. Statistics are appended to enable the observer to understand just how ancient this wood is.

When the tree fell, in 1915, it was 1,995 years old . . .

In 79 B. C. some freak of nature dropped there in California a seed. Christ was yet to be seen, although prophesied. This tree was to have passed its threescore and ten almost a decade—it was venerable, even then—before Christ came. It was as large as most trees one will see about Washington before our modern measure of time was begun.

Rome was sacked in 455 A. D. by the Vandals . . . Six centuries later, in 1066, the Normans conquered England, and her history began. Columbus, seeking new fortunes, stumbled upon an unrecorded land, in 1492.

Out in the new country, far to the West, a hoary old tree grew on . . . Savages brushed its mammoth trunk, rested beneath its vast spreading foliage; beasts had used it as sanctuary for centuries.

Two hundred years later a group of adventurers landed at Plymouth . . .

1776 . . . 1812 . . . 1865 . . . 1898 . . .
1914 . . .

In 1915 nature looked West and sent her own destroyers.

Five million pounds of ancient, weather-beaten redwood crashed in the forest. The Department of Interior found it so, and cut out for exhibit a section 9 feet and 8 inches in diameter, which was 70 feet above the base of that tree. At that height it was less than half the diameter of the foot.

Oldest of living things, scientists say, the redwoods, and many still stand, older than the one represented by 1,995 rings of years, in Washington.

IN WASHINGTON

By Katherine W. Smith

Street Scenes.

1. School—Go Slow.

Children stand, in rainy weather
On the corners of the street,
Dressed like pertly wet canaries,
Yellow poncho—hat, complete.

Now they stop the moving traffic,
Guide their school-mates safely by,
Like small, golden guarding angels
Dropped from out the dripping sky.

2. Southeast—Summer Evening.

The rocking chair moves to and fro
Patiently . . . Small children call
To one another—one of them
Has found a tiny rubber ball . . .

Past a window someone walks
Blackening the feeble glow
Of a lamp. . . And in the yard
The rocking chair moves . . . to, and fro . . .

3. Fifteenth and the Avenue.

Beneath the spreading parasol
The big policeman stands,
While autos crouch submissively
Awaiting his commands.

Here kings and paupers, dukes and thugs
That ride along must stop,
And pause until they hear the shrill
Decision of the cop.

4. Wandering Minstrel.

A sound comes wheezing through the air—
A silly, gentle dancing tune—
The organ grinder! . . . I can see
A balcony, a hanging moon

And you beside me—eyes on eyes—
The interchange of whispered vows—
I find a penny in my purse,
The monkey lifts his hat, and bows.

5. Dress Model—Connecticut Avenue.

Wax lady silent in the window,
Poising on a dainty toe,
Smoothly swathed in silks and satins,
Do you like it, being so?

Do you never tire of seeing
All the passing wistful eyes
Of other lesser-lovely ladies
In the street? You may be wise

To smile unknowing when their glances
Linger on your lustrous furs—
A pale girl dreams outside the window
Wishing that your gowns were her's.

18-Year-Old Girl Made Capitol Lincoln Statue

In the rotunda of the Capitol is a statue of Abraham Lincoln which is the work of an 18-year-old girl, Vinnie Ream, who afterward became the famous sculptress, Vinnie Ream Hoxie, whose works adorn so many public buildings and grounds.

Vinnie Ream was an art student whose talent was toward sculpture. She was only 17 in 1864, but her genius was so great that Congress adopted a resolution that she be given the commission to make a statue of President Lincoln from life to be placed in the Capitol.

Day after day, in the midst of a thousand burdens, Lincoln posed for this gifted child. As he posed he told her quaint stories and her statue is considered very life-like and presents the great martyr in his most attractive mood. Congress accepted her finished work and it still gives its message to the thousands that throng through the rotunda yearly. Congress next gave her a commission to execute the statue of Farragut, the gallant sea fighter, which stands in Farragut Square.

In 1878 Vinnie Ream became the bride of Brig. Gen. Richard H. Hoxie, of the United States Army.

350 Diverse Laws Beset Motorist on Short Trip

Hazards of Journey to New York City, Because of Absence of Uniformity in Traffic Codes, Portray Road Confusion.

RIGHT TURN WITH RED AND GREEN ARROW ONLY
POLICE DEPT
TURN RIGHT ON THIS RED SIGNAL
POLICE DEPT

BY motor it is 250 miles from Washington to New York. In driving this distance any motorist so inclined has an opportunity of violating something like 350 different laws, ordinances and regulations, all having to do with traffic.

About the only two things similar in the traffic codes encountered are these:

Green means go.

Red means stop.

Amber, in the lights, might mean anything at all.

So, motorists, beware of the lights.

In America, the land of the free wheelers and the home of the brave pedestrians, anything may happen, depending, of course, on the locality.

By the time a man or woman drives from the Zero Milestone back to the White House, to the Hudson Tunnel, for instance, he runs into 350 chances of being arrested for something he may know nothing about—so divergent are the traffic laws of America.

44 State Legislatures Act.

Yet—and this is a happy thought—America is moving nearer the goal of uniformity in basic traffic regulations. An analysis of motor vehicle legislation, enacted in 44 States where the Legislatures were in session this year, has just been completed by the American Automobile Association.

Until the day comes when all States, and the District of Columbia, adhere to uniform traffic laws, the lowly motorist is up against the problem of knowing what to do and when to do it. In this task he is confronted with as many different laws and regulations as the villages, towns, hamlets, cities and States in which he travels.

Some of the outstanding laws that hamper real free-wheeling are: Regulations covering accidents, registration and license requirements, speed limits, right of way, overtaking on hills, passing on hills, grades and curves; passing street cars, dimming of headlights; use of spotlights and stopping at grade crossings.

These are what might be called the basic requirements of motoring.

It is all very confusing, the A. A. A. officials say, and what makes for confusion makes for accidents.

Take, for instance, the speed laws.

Speed laws vary all the way from 50 miles an hour in North Dakota to the 25-mile limit in Missouri.

Night Driving Confusion

Nineteen States in the Union have entirely discarded setting a speed limit, defining a rate of speed that is "reasonable and proper" in view of traffic conditions, or a speed limit that permits stopping within the clear distance ahead.

In some States a motorist may pass a street car on the left. In others, not.

Some cities have safety zones for pedestrians waiting for street cars. Some have not.

In night driving, the motorist meets with more confusion. Some States require that headlights be dimmed when cars meet and pass. Other States require the lights to be on full capacity. The District of Columbia prohibits spotlights. Some States encourage them.

One of the triumphs of motordom in the last year was the abolition of speed limits on the rural highways of 22 States.

It still remains for the motorist to learn what States these are; for only in those States is he free from the menace of speed-trap operations.

And so it goes.

The poor, old motorist is up against it in about 48 different languages, including one framed by the District of Columbia.

About the only universal traffic law in this country is pointed against the hit-and-run driver.

Capital Sees All Styles.

In all the 44 States, aforementioned, and the District of Columbia, the laws are fairly uniform in requiring that a driver involved in an accident, whether it involves personal or property damage, give his name to occupants of the other car.

After that, it is every man for himself.

No one knows this any better than the average Washington traffic policeman.

Washington, the mecca of the motorist, has cars on its streets from virtually every town in America.

Every American driving his car to Washington comes here with a different set of traffic rules and regulations under his hat.

So, when the simple matter of making a left-hand turn presents itself, the policeman on the corner is liable to have a traffic jam at any time—if there are several out-of-town cars in the parade. It just happens that Iowa and Virginia laws are not one and the same even on this simple subject.

A left-hand turn ought to be a left-hand turn in any man's language, in any man's town; but you can make a left-hand turn in a fancy way or in the plain, old-fashioned manner. Just how you make a left-hand turn determines at once, to the eye of an all-seeing Washington traffic officer, the place of your birth, or at least of your training in the art of manipulating a motor car.

Two Billions Annual Loss.

It was all so different in the days of the horse and buggy.

Since those days—those good old days—the confusion of motordom has been added to until now a man who braves the traffic laws of several States in succession is like unto a hero venturing forth in search of adventure.

Someone with a mathematical mind has figured out that every year in America two billions of dollars are lost in traffic congestion.

Just how these figures are arrived at is nobody's business; but they imply that, time being money, a lot of money goes up in gasoline vapor every time the traffic is tied up on Main street.

Take, for instance, the matter of the left-hand turn. It is not as simple as it sounds.

A Washington motorist, going from here to New York, would find almost as many methods of making the left-hand turn as there are left-hand turns in the journey.

Philadelphia permits a left-hand turn on the red.

So does Baltimore.

Both cities also permit the left-hand turn on the amber and green, depending on what part of the city a motorist happens to be in at the time of making the left-hand turn.

Why Drivers Are Timid.

However, having been bawled out downtown for making a left-hand turn on the green, the timid motorist is sometimes rather shy about repeating the performance in the suburbs. Yet, if he does not make the left-hand turn on the green, in the suburbs, he is liable to catch caustic criticism from the traffic officer.

And there you are.

There is, of course, one way to avert all this; by carrying along a copy of the latest edition of "Summary of Motor Vehicle Regulations, United States and Canada."

The book is published each year, and they do say it makes for light summer reading; but——

By the time a man has read and digested all the rules and regulations governing traffic in the various States through which he hopes to travel—well, the mind being what it is, he is apt to forget.

To forget is court trouble.

There is an alternative.

The unhappy motorist may get in touch with the Albert Russel Erskine Bureau for Street Traffic Research, Harvard University.

Children's Safety at Stake.

Up at dear old Cambridge they have gone in for this sort of thing in a serious way. It is a major subject. As such, the research artists are in direct touch with every change in code, and bulletins are issued at regular intervals. So the well-informed motorist, with the latest Harvard reports in his lap, might be able to make the journey from Washington to New York without violating a single one of the 350 laws, rules, regulations and ordinances.

Of course, the average motorist, being just a common, ordinary sort of fellow, with no sheepskin to guide him, is perhaps unfamiliar with Harvard's Albert Russel Erskine Bureau for Street Traffic Research.

The day may come, to be sure, when this sort of knowledge will percolate down through the curricula of colleges, high schools, grammar schools, and graded schools—even to the kindergarten.

That day may not be so far off as it seems. Every day in every way America is becoming more motor conscious. Children going to school nowadays are quite unlike the children who went to school in the horse-and-buggy age.

These children of the now and here must first learn to dodge traffic before they can settle to the study of the Three R's.

Serious Study Must Come.

Traffic to them is an all-important problem. If a boy or girl can not get past the intersection nearest his or her school there is little chance to pass the examinations at the end of the year.

This, then, is a good sign. It means that America must come to a serious consideration of traffic; that it must be studied, thoroughly and diligently—if only to save the school children.

School children who remain in the same sector become, in time, used to the traffic laws in that sector; but those children whose parents move from city to city will always remain objects of concern. As soon as they become used to one set of regulations they must familiarize themselves with another.

With a new deal in traffic laws, with a uniform system, all will be well along the Potomac, as well as other towns in the country.

Now, no man knows just what is what in any given locality unless he has taken the Harvard course in advance of making a motor trip.

Signs That Help Little.

Most States try to help the visitors. Most cities and towns are lenient to the visitor. Upstate in New York, in Binghamton, the motorist is helped some by signs displayed on the outskirts of the city. One of these signs reads:

Green signal means go.

Red signal means stop.

All this is well, but it doesn't help much. It doesn't say, for instance, how to make a left-hand turn.

Men who have given the problem serious thought believe that America will save its two billion dollars a year, lost in traffic, just as soon as America gets around to shaping traffic laws on State and regional plans, taking the whole job out of the hands of the municipalities.

Were this done, Washington, Baltimore, Philadelphia and New York would all have the same rules and regulations. Then, instead of a motorist standing a chance of coming to grief 350 times during the course of a 250-mile journey, he would be at the mercy only of his own folly in violating the laws he knows.

Beer Gardens of Old Capital Added Froth to Life

City Was Liberally Dotted With Harmony-Filled Oases of Cheer.

By John J. Daly.

A gas-lit beer garden of old Georgetown and some of the family and customers.

WITH the waning summer Washington witnessed the opening of only one beer garden. Next summer it may be different.

Maryland and Virginia having welcomed the outlaw, beer, back into the fold, the neighboring territory also may again spout beer gardens as it did in the long ago.

Nearby Maryland and Virginia boasted of several celebrated outdoor drinking places where the "sports" of other days gathered. Washington, too, had its quota of beer gardens, all contributing to the gayety of the Nation.

One of the first beer gardens to open in this city was down on Pennsylvania avenue, next door to the old Kernan's Theater, later the President Theater.

The principal variety theater in Washington then was Kernan's Theater Comique. Kernan decided to open a beer garden on a lot adjoining his theater. A stage was built and singers engaged, with an orchestra. No leader at hand, some one suggested a boy over on Capitol Hill who might make a good orchestra leader. That is how John Philip Sousa got his first job of conductor—and in a beer garden.

Was Capital Institution.

That was soon after the Civil War.

Afterward, beer gardens sprang up along the Avenue, from the Capitol to Georgetown and beyond—even out to Cabin John Bridge.

Until prohibition blasted the peaceful existence of the old-fashioned beer-bibbers, the beer garden was an institution in Washington. Places that provided beer and entertainment in the open air were welcome relief to the sweltering citizens of other summers.

There was the Alhambra. Some called it The Last Chance. It sat upon a stately knoll east of the Capitol—a brewery nearby. Night after night the swains and lassies gathered there and quaffed golden brew. They danced to the strains of a German orchestra playing good Teutonic music—and American popular tunes, "The Sidewalks of New York," and "Aufweidersehn."

Over the hills in Maryland, out on the old Queens Chapel road, was the Ram's Horn Inn. It was a good three miles away from the Soldiers' Home—and students at the Catholic University walked out there, night after night, in the late spring and early summer, emulating the example of the students at Heidelberg.

Necklace of Beer Gardens.

Beer, glorious beer, ruled at these places, stretched like a necklace around the border of the city—Maryland beer gardens and Virginia beer gardens.

On the way into the District from the North, back over the Queens Chapel road was the Red Rose Inn. After the winter season the proprietor threw open his rose garden, transforming it into a beer garden for the passers-by.

There Was an Organ in the Parlor.

There were beer gardens as far away as old St. Asaphs Race Track, on the Alexandria pike, and beer gardens out Benning way, where the bang-tails ran even before they had pari-mutuels at Pimlico and Bowie and Laurel.

However, these were the outsiders, the Maryland and the Virginia beer gardens that may come to life again next summer, now that beer is legalized in these two States.

In the District proper there were so many beer gardens that even the old-timers can not recall all of them. Even the Fatherland itself could furnish no better beer gardens than Washington, some venture to say.

An open-air city, it was but natural that Washington should take to this form of beer drinking in the summer. There were bands aplenty, and orchestras, and the beer garden became a diversion of the masses before the advent of the movies.

Gerstenberg's Students.

Next door to The Washington Post, where the "University of Gerstenberg" granted its degrees, a beer garden flourished in the back yard; but it was a small, intimate beer garden, that went out of business when an addition was built on the "university." Across the Avenue, back of Dennis Mullaney's, there was another wee beer garden, its clientele mostly men.

At Eleventh street and New York avenue the Endreses ran a beer garden that flourished almost up to the time of prohibition. At one time this place was the center of Washington night life, summer and winter. Many celebrated vaudeville artists got their start there, and one famous song was born in this beer garden, "My Dream of the U. S. A.," composed by Charlie Ross, who played piano in the garden.

Good food, soothing music and splendid entertainment were the watchwords of the old-fashioned beer garden. There were, of course, all sorts of beer gardens; good, bad, and indifferent.

There was Hall's Summer Garden, down by the Seventh street wharf. The main attraction there, in summer, was the crab feast. It was a place where gentlemen took off their coats, stretched them over the backs of chairs, and went to the serious work of shelling Chesapeake Bay hard-shelled crabs, with foaming seidels on the side.

Music with meals was an unheard of luxury at Hall's; but the crabs were always heavy and plentiful and the beer glorious. Off from the distance, sometimes, came strains of mandolins and banjos strummed by the darkies on the wharves.

On upper Fourteenth street, just below U, was the dandy of all beer gardens—Geyer's. Out in the back yard, covered with gravel that persistently got in low shoes, a band blared away while waiters rushed to and fro with seidels, steins, and schooners.

Geyer's was the Mecca for young love; for the young blades of the day. It was packed and jammed nightly.

Famous among the beer gardens of old was Abner's—Abner's Summer Garden—on the south side of E street between Seventh and Eighth streets northwest.

Just a block away was Kolb's—on the north side of E street between Eighth and Ninth.

An orchestra was the chief attraction, aside from the beer, at Abner's. At Kolb's there was a vaudeville show, with George Graham in command.

Further up E street, where the Munsey Building now stands, the Hotel Lawrence had a beer garden in the rear that attracted all the theatrical people, the National Theater being only a few door away.

Sam Gassenheimer ran the beer garden at the Lawrence and such celebrities as Jim Thornton, author of the song, "When You Were Sweet Sixteen;" Lew Dockstader, Neil O'Brien, Honey Boy Evans, and all the minstrel men "did turns" there—whenever they came to town.

At Schneider's Summer Garden a free crab feast was the lure. All the crabs you could eat were piled up on a table, while waiters ran at top speed with trays full of beer.

Perreard's, for many years on E street, between Twelfth and Thirteenth, and later on Thirteenth street where the Earle Theater is now, was another place. There the "Count" and "Countess" Perreard carried on in "the grand manner." It was a beer and wine garden that courted the nobility.

Georgetown Attraction.

Other beer gardens had a German tinge, but Perreard's was French. Grand opera stars sang there on occasion. Diplomats made the place their headquarters.

In Georgetown, Joe Schladt's beer garden was the center of attraction on a summer's night. Joe Bailey, who was senator from Texas, and John Sharp Williams, from Mississippi, foregathered there.

All over Washington the beer gardens had their fling—some of them small, some pretentious. Wherever there was a license, and a small plot of ground near the center of beer distribution, a beer garden was inevitable.

The town was plentifully sprinkled with German societies—Saengerbunds, and organizations like the Teutonia Maennerchor—and some of these had beer gardens in the rear of their clubhouses—for members only.

Rhine wine and lager beer, music and the drama, made up the quartet that livened the veins of the old-fashioned beer gardens.

It was life as they lived it in the nineteenth century—and it seems on the verge of coming back.

Buried Treasures Found in Museum's Odd Cache

Rare Examples of Architectural Beauty Housed in Hidden Court for Lack of Floor Space.

HIDDEN from the eyes of visitors to the National Museum for years, a series of treasures from all parts of the world has been brought to light. Because of lack of space inside, and because of their weight and bulk, these art objects have been placed in the east and west wing courtyards, surrounded by the building walls proper, four stories high on all sides. Curators and their assistants occupy the offices and laboratories on all floors around these courtyards, thus making it impossible for visitors to view the collection of rare items thus inclosed.

Dr. Walter Hough, head curator of the department of anthropology, among his other titles, proved to be caretaker of the objects, and offered himself as cicerone to examine the collection. Because of their secluded location. Dr. Hough said he himself had not seen them for 20 years and therefore had some personal eagerness to look at them and check them over once more.

Famous Capital Doorway.

As guide, Dr. Hough began:

"First, and finest, object is the famous Richardson-designed doorway of the old Warder home on K street. It presents one of the most beautiful pieces of this type of architecture America has. When the house was removed, the doorway and drawing room mantelpiece, which is shown in the east wing of the museum, were given to the Smithsonian Institution. Note the solid stone approach, those massive, square-cut hinges, the fine iron grill work on the door, and the huge knob itself. It took two hands at once to turn it!"

Approaching the door, Dr. Hough solemnly pushed the tiny button which once rang the bell in this fine, old mansion.

"There is no one home today," he said, smiling. "We shall have to call again."

Turning, then, to the gaunt, weather-beaten Chinese ceremonial gateway, which occupies the central section of the court, Dr. Hough explained its significance and history.

Rare Examples of Tile Work.

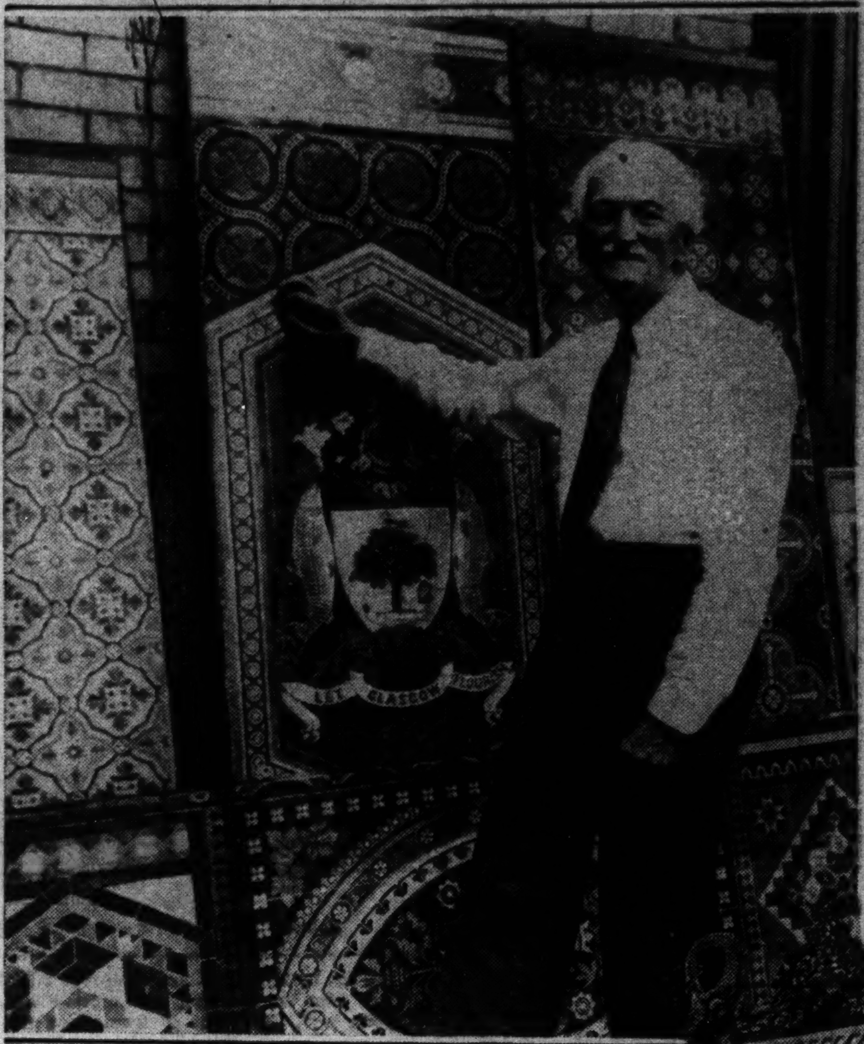
"The doorway, painted in its gaudy reds, greens and golds, is hand-carved of a wood as hard as teak. It was originally intended to commemorate the status of widows who didn't marry again, and its characters give warning to all such in China."



The gateway was sent from China for the Philadelphia Centennial Exposition in 1876, and removed, piece by piece, after the exposition, to be set up here in the courtyard, where it now rests. Once gorgeously colored, the wind and the rain have beaten and faded its reds and yellows and gold so that it remains a finely carved, centuries old, but forlorn "museum piece."

Around the four sides of the court are samples of some of the world's finest examples of architectural ceramics and tilework. Here are English hearth tiles and building ornaments, a marble column and pedestal. A pair of fine Persian hand-painted tiles which Dr. Hough lingered to touch. An odd Turkish tombstone; a wonderfully wrought onyx religious piece, a Syrian Station of the Cross, "only about 300 years old," said Dr. Hough, when asked its age. There is a pair of grotesquely-carved Nicaraguan ceremonial alligators, gods of the heathen. And giant-sized glazed American potteries, by Grueby—vases, urns and pots.

Whole Being De-Greased.

Countless tiles there were of Maw and Minton, of quaint and odd design, glazed, hand-painted, inlaid in marbles of the world over, kaleidoscope patterns, greens, yellows and reds, light and dark, with a patina from the weather.

Dr. Hough was curious, too, about a box on a sill. Closer, he smelled something. Some small animal whose skeleton was sought, was being "dermestes-ized," with the aid of that fearful museum pest, the flesh and fur-eating scavenger worm, the dermestidae.

Once believed nothing more than that—a useless museum scourge—this tiny worm has been utilized by science for work which man, with all his skill and cleverness, can not duplicate. The sharpest scalpels and the tiniest points can not clean a bone so well as the minute cutting and chopping apparatus of the dermestes' mouth.

As the beetle or butterfly is buried in the sand of an ant hill, so that the lacy skeleton of that insect may be cleaned, so the dermestes is employed to eat away fur and flesh from the smaller animals.

And last he peeked under a large canvas—"the circus tent." A sperm-whale, in two pieces, is being "de-greased" in the weather, instead of in a sand-pit, as is customary. The grease oozes to the surface, it was explained, from whence it is scraped two to three times a year.

It was planned at one time to roof over these open courtyards, but it was decided they were essential for ventilation of the building proper. So until the proposed wings are added to the museum, the rare pieces outside will have to face the elements al fresco.

Emergency Hospital Grew From Two Small Rooms

Solarium of Emergency Hospital.

62-Year-Old Institution Led City Away From Archaic Handling of Injured and Sick.

A WAILING siren is Emergency Hospital's battle cry and fleeting ambulance its trademark. Located in the heart of the city, it is the downtown area's clearing house for heart-throbs, arm fractures and brush burns.

Up to 1915, when it was established in its present building on New York avenue near the White House, Emergency was the "movingest" hospital hereabouts. Since its founding in 1871, the institution has occupied six sites, all within a few blocks of one another.

Conceived 62 years ago as Central Dispensary, it gave the Capital's indigent sick their first opportunity to receive general medical attention at little or no cost. Georgetown College donated the use of two rooms in its building at Tenth and E streets northwest. A call for funds netted $150 and this, combined with $278 appropriated by the District, was the total expended for the year ended May 7, 1872, in treating 511 patients.

Four years later it was decided to find larger and independent quarters. Overcoming financial obstacles which constantly threatened to end the enterprise, the dispensary boldly transferred its splints and operating tables to a wooden building at 514 Sixth street northwest.

Archaic Handling of Injured.

The emergency department was added in 1880. Equipment consisted of two cots in a rear room at 416 Tenth street and two physicians. Heretofore policemen had removed minor casualties to the station, there to await the police surgeon. Now the victims, station for medical attention, were taken directly to the luxuriously outfitted place in Tenth street.

The next location was at 521 Twelfth street, which served from 1886 until a new hospital was constructed at Ohio avenue and Fifteenth street in 1892. This intersection has since been obliterated by the Mall building program.

In 1915 the Central Dispensary and Emergency Hospital, its full and official name, moved into its $1,500,000 plant in New York avenue. Today it has 280 beds, 300 employes, laboratory and X-ray departments, a large nursing school and all the other facilities common to general hospitals. Emergency claims to be the first hospital in Washington to have an X-ray department.

Its chief sources of revenue are paying patients, a contract with the District, and the Community Chest. During the year ended June 30, 1932, receipts totaled $324,172.86, $44,000 and $97,844.60, respectively, from these three supports. Contributions were a mere $3,450. Operating expenses were more than $500,000.

196 Years of Care in Year.

Between July 1, 1932, and June 30, 1933, a total of 7,974 individuals made 28,075 visits to the various clinics for treatment. During the same period 6,537 persons were hospitalized, 18,221 emergency cases handled and 8,240 ambulance calls made. Altogether, 53,043 patients were given care.

Those 6,537 "in-patients" received 70,512 days' attention; more than 196 years of care crowded into the brief space of one year. The average stay is 11 days, according to B. Brent Sandidge, superintendent. Some surgery patients remain only a day, as in the case of children's tonsillectomies, and at the other extreme are the few who stay for months, even years. An appendicitis operation strikes the average, 10 days to 2 weeks hospitalization usually being sufficient.

MISS JANET FISH, Chief of Emergency's Nurses.

Economic conditions are reflected not only by the ominous increase in dispensary service, but by 21 shaded, undefiled rooms in the new east wing, which was erected a few years ago. Fourteen of them have never been occupied, and the other seven have been used but little. Reason: Too expensive.

Bad debts provide additional worries for Superintendent Sandidge. During the last fiscal year $12,507.69 in fees eluded collection. But for this worrisome item, the balance sheet would have shown a small surplus instead of the customary deficit. Total income was $435,310.07, while expenditures amounted to $441,303.36. A $50,000 bequest by the late Simon Kann, department store owner, prevented a deeper dip into the red.

The thousands who visit Emergency's clinics annually are treated for almost every disease under the sun. Plastic surgery and diabetic departments were added recently. The others are for heart, eye, gynecology, skin, ear, nose and throat, medical, neurology, surgery, genito-urinary, orthopedics and fractures, hay fever, varicose veins, hemorrhoids, neuro-surgery and goitre.

Prominent Women Assist.

A social service department, consisting of two workers, secretary and clerk, is the liaison agent for dispensary patient and doctor. During the past fiscal year this branch made 379 home visits and expended $448.84 for relief purposes.

Working in close relation with the social department is the ladies' board, whose roster bristles with prominent names. The president of this bulwark is Mrs. George Scriven and her vice presidents are Mrs. Herbert Slocum and Mrs. Walter Tuckerman. Mrs. Chauncey Depew, Mrs. Hamilton Fish, Mrs. Lewis Douglas, Mrs. Hamilton Fish Kean, Mrs. John W. Stenhouse and Mrs. Chauncey Parker, jr., are among its 42 members.

Another interesting and indispensable unit is the dietary department, whence comes dishes prepared with scholarly precision.

Approximately half of Emergency's student staff of 100 nurses were enrolled in the six-months dietetics course in 1932-33. Two were graduated and will continue in this specialized field.

Mr. Sandidge is a member of the provisions and actuarial subcommittees of the general committee on group hospitalization for the District and is an ardent supporter of the movement. His hospital already has voted to join.

Head of Emergency Hospital since 1920, Mr. Sandidge came here from Baltimore, where he was superintendent of University of Maryland Hospital. His experience as an administrator also included 17 years in the financial branches of the Willard Hotel here and the Belvedere Hotel, Baltimore. He is a resident of Arlington County, Va.

War Hero Head of Many Nurses.

When the World War broke out many years ago, a young woman doffed her mantle as one of New York's society leaders and took an early boat for the cannon zones to become a nurse. Attending maimed and wounded French soldiers at the front was a far cry from the frothy atmosphere of Baileys Beach, but she made good. The republic of France decorated Miss Janet Fish with the Croix de Guerre and Legion of Honor. Today she is superintendent of Emergency's 130 nurses.

Representative Hamilton Fish, jr., her brother, also interrupted a career in politics to don a uniform in the American forces and he, too, received the Croix de Guerre. When this country entered the conflict Miss Fish applied for a transfer from the French army, but was rejected because she had received only limited nurse's training before taking up service in the war.

With the end of hostilities, she returned to the United States and set herself to the task of obtaining the formal requisites for her arduous calling. Later she returned to France to do tuberculosis work. Now she is Janet Fish, R. N., a graduate of Presbyterian Hospital, New York City.

Before coming to Emergency only seven years ago as superintendent of nurses, she was attached to a hospital in Newport, summer retreat of the elite which only a few years earlier had known her in sheer organdie instead of starched linen.

Woodbury Blair's Interest.

With two members of the family in the Ladies' Auxiliary, the name of Fish is a formidable support at the downtown hospital. Mrs. Hamilton Fish is Miss Janet Fish's sister-in-law and Mrs. Hamilton Fish Kean, wife of the New Jersey senator, her cousin,

But linked most indelibly with the rise and development of Emergency Hospital is the name of the late Woodbury Blair, whose family house at 1651 Pennsylvania avenue northwest was long since established as an historical landmark. The eldest son of Montgomery Blair, President Lincoln's Postmaster General, he was president of the hospital since the Fifteenth street and Ohio avenue days until his death a week ago.

At the age of 81 Mr. Blair took an active personal interest not only in its administrative affairs but in the actual care accorded patients until he was stricken ill recently. For years his distinguished figure was a familiar sight in the wards and corridors. He was particularly attentive to charity and emergency patients.

His predecessor as president of Emergency Hospital was William J. Boardman, father of Miss Mabel T. Boardman, who is National secretary of the American Red Cross.

Maimed Man Finds Success Conducting Gold Fish Farm

J. W. Robinson, iron worker in a Baltimore plant, thought the worst possible luck had overtaken him when his jaw was broken in a plant accident, incapacitating him for work. Now, as he goes about his daily chores in connection with a very profitable fish-raising business, he thinks otherwise.

The "mishap" occurred when a lolly bar broke loose in the factory in which he was working. The manner in which it struck him not only made small pieces of his jawbone, but exposed the nerves under the skin in such a way that doctors told him he never would be able to work inside—that he would have to be out in the air.

Being city-born and city-bred, the idea of moving to the country was distasteful to Robinson. But he did, but with misgivings, and then spent most of his time wondering what kind of a job he ever would be able to get there.

Destiny, however, took a hand. Near the cottage in which he was living were several ponds, of no use to any one. Robinson took note of them. He wondered some more. Then he began to think that they should be of some use.

After a little investigating, Robinson secured a lease on the property containing the ponds. Next he bought and planted in the ponds certain special species of grass. The culmination came when several hundred fish, mostly varying types of goldfish, were installed in the hitherto despised waters.

Robinson now has built up a thriving and profitable business selling live goldfish all over this section of the country, and is very, very thankful for the accident.

Cigar-Making by Hand Diminishes To Almost Lost Art in Washington

IN 1878 Henry Ofterdinger, sr., came to Washington to learn the cigarmaker's trade from his uncle, Theodore, who already had been established some years in the Capital. Theodore's shop was at 910 F street northwest. Exactly 10 years later the nephew hung up his own sign at 506 Ninth street northwest. He had himself and one cigarmaker, plus an ambition.

Another decade passed and Henry purchased the building adjoining his original shop, at 504 Ninth, and there grew up one of the first completely outfitted cigar stores in the United States.

By 1912 the original store had been expanded to include a new structure, 508 Ninth street, with five floors in front and four on the rear lot; and from one roller, the factory now employed 150 men and women, strippers, rollers, and other factory workers. Every club and hotel in Washington featured from 2 to 25 of the 130 private brands of cigars made in the Ofterdinger factory. The four famous trade names—Deer Head, Anitra, Ofte, and After Dinner—are still remembered by old Washingtonians when speeches are over at the club gatherings.

The World War changed things in every trade, and the cigar trade, too, began to feel the effects of mechanization. The 50 men who had been at their benches rolling only by hand, and shape, any size, for all the years, went to war; the 60 women, one of them the best cigarmaker, Ofterdinger recalls, that he had in his entire shop, drifted away into Government positions. They had been "learners" in the special department where instruction in the business of rolling fine cigars was carried on as an adjunct to the regular work.

"There will be no more cigar factories in Washington," declared Ofterdinger, now retired, "because good cigarmakers are neither born nor made here any more. It is not and never really was an attractive center. I sold my business in 1924—but—sentiment is a strong thing; it took me a full two years to come to that decision."

That firm, the largest the Capital ever had, has been gone a decade, now; but the trade lives on in the back-room shops of two men, still in Washington. Both of these remaining cigarmakers, incidentally were at one time or another in some capacity, connected with the Ofterdinger factory.

One, more than 41 years in the business, still has a few of the old-type customers, by the way, who specifies stock, size, style, and wrapper, requiring altogether his own private brand, boxed, banded, and tubed to order.

"When times were better," he says, "lawyers, doctors and all the well-known men of the town had their private smokes. A big box of them with their names on the band was always on their desks. But these older customers die off . . . only a few are left."

Pride in workmanship, however, lives on in the hands of these two men, in their hands which are curiously brown and mottled, like the leaves from Sumatra, and Puerto Rico and Cuba they roll so deftly.

"Beggar's Opera" Was Produced Nearby in 1740

TURN back the calendar to 1712. A slave insurrection is terrorizing Little Old New York. The Wars of Queen Anne are raging in Europe. And in Southern Maryland a mansion is being constructed. Today that mansion still is standing in Waldorf. To open its doors is to turn back the calendar to the days of Lord Proprietary Charles Calvert, Third Lord Baltimore.

The origin of the L-shaped, two-storied, 23-room building, generally referred to by natives of southern Maryland as the Governor Pratt Mansion, is somewhat obscured, but the date of its erection has been set by local historians as 1712. Who built it has not been established.

There is one definitely bright spot in its dim early history. John Gay's robust "Beggar's Opera," a pronounced success on the continent since its premiere in 1728, was brought to this country in 1740. It was planned originally to open the production in Philadelphia, but the sturdy Quakers objected to Gay's Rabelaisian libretto. So the opera opened in Annapolis. It was performed for the second time in America in the ballroom of the Waldorf mansion.

Local legend insists that Gen. George Washington attended the performance. As George Washington was a lad of only 8 at the time, the legend can hardly be credited. Later the mansion served as an inn and here again local legend connects the building with Gen. Washington, who reputedly spent the night there. To have spent the night at all the old buildings for which the distinction is claimed, the Father of His Country would have had to be a very peripatetic individual, indeed.

Some 15 of 20 years prior to the Civil War, Thomas G. Pratt, Governor of the Maryland Free State from 1844 to 1847, made the mansion his home. Thus the property's present local name.

In the spacious, beautifully lawned grounds that surround the building are two flat pieces of stone, one atop the other, whose usefulness ceased with the signing of Lincoln's Emancipation Proclamation in 1863. At one time a large brass ring, used to fetter its human merchandise, was imbedded in the slave auction block. About two years ago vandals removed the ring, cracking the stone in doing so.

In later years, the property has been at various times a private residence and inn. Its present use as an antique shop is most appropriate. On its small porch are two ancient spinning wheels and a victoria-topped baby buggy of ancient vintage.

Inside are harpsichords, old bottles, dueling pistols, Duncan Phyfe tables, elaborately gilded sofas, colonial silver candlesticks and many other mementos of its heyday.

Field Artillery Qualifies as "Triple-Threat"

Chief Tells How, as Supporting Arm, It Provides Infantry With Interference in Modern System of Team Play.

By Maj. Gen. Harry G. Bishop, Chief of Field Artillery.

"Over hill, over dale, we have hit the dusty trail,
And those caissons go rolling along."

FROM the earliest days there has been field artillery. The first field artillery weapons were merely adaptations of gunpowder to the ancient catapult and ballista, and were employed as early as 1247. At first these crude weapons were built up of wooden or iron staves, held together by rawhide or iron hoops shrunk on.

The projectiles were round stones, often weighing as much as 700 pounds. This type was followed by smooth bores of cast iron or brass, firing spherical iron shot. These in turn were displaced by rifled pieces, firing elongated shot and shell. Finally came the present breech-loading steel piece.

In our Army the field artillery dates from the Revolution. The oldest organization has a direct descendant in the present-day Battery D, of the Fifth Field Artillery, at Fort Bragg, N. C. It was organized in 1776 as "Alexander Hamilton' Battery." Another of the oldest batteries is Battery D, of the First Field Artillery at Fort Sill, Okla.; it was originally organized in 1792 as "Porter's Company of Artillery."

Streamers" Tell History.

Glorious history has been made by some of our field artillery regiments, on the basis of which they are entitled to carry "streamers" on their colors denoting their participation in various celebrated engagements of all wars in which our Army has engaged.

From the beginning the field artillery has proven itself the main reliance of the infantry for support. This is but natural, for the main reason for the existence of the field artillery is to furnish [illegible] support—to make the job of the infantry easier and less dangerous. The support given the infantry or cavalry may be likened to the interference which the football back must have if he is to get anywhere against an alert opponent.

In football the interference has the job of mowing down the opposition or of neutralizing his defense by pinning him to the ground. In warfare, the artillery must be able to neutralize the enemy in such a way that the infantry—which alone can hold ground gained—may move forward with the minimum loss of personnel.

Notwithstanding our experiences at Antietam, Gettysburg, and Santiago, the full importance of field artillery fire was not realized practically until the bloody days of Soissons and the Meuse-Argonne proved conclusively that troops cannot advance in the face of organized resistance without the help of preponderant artillery fire. It is interesting to note that the World War was the first war in history in which the field artillery inflicted more casualties than were inflicted by small arms.

Functions of Various Types.

In order to provide this heavy fire which permits the advance of the infantry, guns of small caliber, operating in close touch with the advancing front line troops, are needed. These guns are termed light field artillery. Heavier guns are required to silence the hostile artillery, breach his light entrenchments, and interdict his movements in rear of the engaged lines. Such are called medium artillery. Still heavier guns, classified as heavy artillery, are needed to breach permanent field works and reach far into his rear areas for the attack of important localities and objectives, such as storage depots and transportation systems.

Fire power is generally stated as the predominating characteristic of field artillery, just as the "wallop" is the predominating characteristic of a boxer. But just as the boxer's feet and legs are absolutely essential for transporting his fists to where he wants them, and just as his eyes and nervous system are absolutely essential for the operation of his fists, so, in the field artillery, transportation for its guns and ammunition and a reconnaissance and communication system to develop its missions and control its efforts, are characteristics coordinate with fire power.

A battery no longer gallops into position, unlimbers, and opens fire on a visible enemy. More often than not, it slinks in under cover of darkness or fog after a careful preliminary reconnaissance by its officers, conceals itself as best it may and fights for days without glimpsing the enemy. Its commander usually is hundreds of yards away from the position of the guns. A communication net must knit all the separate parts of this plant into an intelligent whole, and, most important of all, communication with the troops it is supporting must be certain and secure.

Training for Mobility.

There must be teamwork throughout an army in order to make that army successful, just as in football teamwork will defeat an aggregation of stars playing without teamwork. All the efforts of the field artillery in peace times are bent toward the perfection of its role in this team. Thus we find the artillery drilling daily to develop its personnel along the varied lines, which, when tied together, assure a successful culmination of its efforts.

As has been indicated above, there are three essentials of field artillery—fire power, or the ability to place fire where wanted, when wanted, and in sufficient amounts to insure success; mobility, or the ability to move the guns with rapidity from place to place, and communication, or the ability to insure proper command of artillery by means of various systems of communication—radio, telephone, visual signals, runners, &c.

To insure its ability to deliver fire power, yearly target practice is essential for each battery. During this practice, all types of fire usually met in active warfare are carefully studied and employed so far as limited appropriations permit.

Training in mobility must be carried on throughout the year. Whether the guns be horse-drawn, tractor-drawn or truck-drawn, it is necessary to keep drivers in constant practice, and the motive power in proper condition.

In the case of horse-drawn artillery, this

MAJ. GEN. HARRY G. BISHOP.

at" Player in the Army's Great Game of War

training must be daily, for horses, like men, get soft and flabby from lack of exercise. In this training, all sort of ground must be covered—good roads, bad roads, mud holes, steep inclines, and rough cross-country. Generally, in the vicinity of its home station, a unit can find all these kinds of ground.

Communication training involves the teaching of the various means of communication to the men upon whom the battery commander must rely for his system. Not only must one know thoroughly the materiel to be used but how it fits into the complete whole.

Finally all three of these essentials are fitted together. If proper instruction has been given in time of peace, we may look playing its part in the Army team in time of war.

During peace time, endeavors of the field artillery are also bent towards the perfecting of new materiel. New types of guns, new radio sets, new telephones, new types of trucks, all are being constantly developed, tested, and approved or disapproved. Only during peace can the necessary time for rational development be found.

The field artillery of our Army is at present scattered throughout the United States and its possessions. Generally, at least, a battalion is stationed together in order that proper training can be given it. In the Philippines we have a regiment; in Hawaii a brigade of three regiments.

Officers' and Men's Training.

In each corps area in the United States a unit is stationed in order that it may be used as a training cadre for Organized Reserve and Reserve officer training corps units. This training, coming as it does as the culmination of the theoretical work of the year, is very important and is considered of great value to the regular unit as well as to those being trained.

At each post where field artillery is stationed, unit schools are conducted for the officers and selected enlisted men. These schools serve as a preparation for attendance at the Field Artillery School at Fort Sill, Okla., where each year courses are held for officers of the Regular Army, the National Guard and the Organized Reserves, and for enlisted men of the first two components mentioned.

For the men, courses are held to prepare the student to become an excellent motor mechanic, horseshoer, saddler, battery mechanic, or communication man. Each of these courses for enlisted men is of four months' duration, and a detail to attend one of them is considered a worthwhile prize for excellent work in the organization.

Distinguished Artillerymen.

In order to provide field artillery Reserve officers for use in times of emergency, the field artillery maintains Reserve officers training corps units at various colleges. Theoretical and practical work is given the students during their four college years and a camp of six weeks is attended during the summer.

All of this instruction is given by regular field artillery officers and enlisted men specially detailed to each institution. At the successful termination of this course the graduate is commissioned as a second lieutenant in the field artillery section of the Organized Reserves. Their training from this point on is supervised by regular field artillery officers detailed for this purpose.

In addition to the attendance of National Guard officers and enlisted men at the field artillery school, the personnel of the National Guard is aided in its work by the presence of regular officers and men who are placed on this duty for a period of four years. In this way field artillery units of all components of the Army of the United States—the regular Army, the National Guard, and the Organized Reserves—are taught the same doctrines so that, in the event of war, all will be able to function as parts of the same team.

In the late war, many of our ablest field artillery officers gained high rank and distinction. Among these were March, chief of staff of the Army; Snow, chief of field artillery; Hinds, chief of field artillery, A. E. F.; Summerall, division and corps commander; Menoher, division and corps commander; Kenly, director of military aeronautics; besides many other battle commanders, and highly talented and efficient staff officers.

Gen. Bishop Decorated For World War Feats

The author of the foregoing, the present Chief of Field Artillery, Gen. Bishop, was born in Grand Rapids, Mich., November 22, 1874, and was appointed to the Military Academy from Indiana. After graduation in 1897 he rose through the grades by service in this country and in the Philippines.

In 1917 he received his colonelcy and shortly thereafter was assigned to duty on the War Department general staff as chief of the training section. On June 26, 1918, he became brigadier general, National Army, with command of the 159th Field Artillery Brigade, at Camp Taylor. In August, 1918, he went to France with this brigade, where upon arrival he was transferred to the command of the Third Field Artillery Brigade of the Third Division, then in the line at Montfaucon. He participated in the succeeding battles of the Meuse-Argonne offensive—remaining in command during the march into Germany.

By direction of the President the Distinguished Service Medal was awarded to Gen. Bishop "for exceptionally meritorious and distinguished services. While in command of the Third Field Artillery Brigade, during the battles of the Argonne-Meuse, and in the subsequent advance to Sedan, by his skill and able leadership he rendered exceptionally valuable service."

In August, 1922, he again sailed for the Philippines and became chief of staff of that department. Upon his return to the United States in the spring of 1925 he was placed in command of the Fifteenth Field Artillery at Fort Sam Houston; in 1927 he was assigned to command the Sixth Field Artillery at Fort Hoyle. Due for foreign service again, Gen. Bishop was transferred to Hawaii, where he commanded the Eighth Field Artillery until he was selected chief of Field Artillery for a term of four years beginning March 10, 1930.

MARTHA DODD, daughter of William E. Dodd, American Ambassador to Germany, has her first printed story published in the November issue of Story. This is no casual honor. Story, though in the jargon a "little magazine," is one of the most distinguished periodicals in America. According to the judgment of Edward O'Brien in his recent "Best Short Stories of 1933," this magazine's rating of superior stories published was 100 per cent. With that may be compared the rating of Harper's at 95 per cent, Scribner's at 95 per cent, Midland at 93 per cent, American Mercury at 92 per cent and Atlantic Monthly at 77 per cent. Story is edited by Martha Foley and Whit Burnett, at 20 East Fifty-seventh street, New York.

Lloyd George's Story of War.

"WAR MEMORIES OF DAVID LLOYD GEORGE," Vol. 1. 1914-1915. Illustrated. Little, Brown & Co., Boston, $4.

During the World War, we used to say of Mr. Lloyd George that here was one statesman who did not fear to give us the facts; one who was ever, in his passion for getting things told and getting them done, flouting the proscriptions of D. O. R. A. and other alphabetical annotations with which Britons, in those troubled times, were bound about, even as you and I today.

And in the immediate postwar period, when he was chuckling over Clemenceau's blunt obscenities at Versailles, or blustering at Arthur Griffith across St. Georges Channel, or remonstrating with Rakovsky at Genoa, the volatile little Welshman always could be counted upon to speak his piece to the delight of an audience fed up on halftones.

With what keen anticipation, therefore, now that he has retired to the cloisters of Mynddednyfed to give us his war memoirs, may we look to Mr. Lloyd George for plain talk of those fateful years when the world was torn asunder with shot and shell and patched up with hatred and stupidity?

In this first of four volumes of his memoirs, Mr. Lloyd George does not disappoint us.

With a fluent style which passes easily from the stark horror of military blunders to the raveled intrigue of diplomatic predicaments, the author takes us swiftly and deftly from crisis to crisis in which, as chancellor of the exchequer, minister of munitions, secretary of state for war and finally as prime minister, he played such a dominant part.

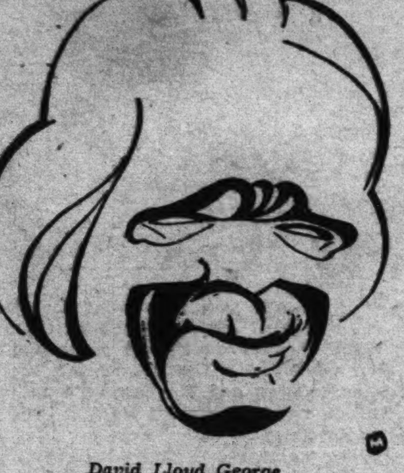
Having waited until virtually all his distinguished contemporaries, confreres and critics have thrown the first stone, Mr. Lloyd George naturally enjoys a distinct tactical advantage in bringing out his war memoirs at this time. But somehow the astonishing vigor, the convincing self-confidence of the man, which carried him roughshod over enemies in war and "peace" times, is transmitted to the printed page in this always entertaining volume and makes us overlook that some of what he has to say may be second guessing.

While as for drama, there is nothing in fiction to equal Mr. Lloyd's George's word picture of the British cabinet as it sat waiting for the stroke of 11 on the night of August 4, 1914, the hour when the ultimatum to Germany would expire.

"As the hour approached," he writes, "a deep and tense solemnity fell on the room. No one spoke. It was like awaiting the signal for the pulling of a lever which would hurl millions to their doom—with just a chance that reprieve might arrive on time. Our eyes wandered anxiously from the clock to the door, and from the door to the clock.

"'Boom!' The deep notes of Big Ben rang out into the night the first strokes in Britain's most fateful hour since she arose out of the deep. A shuddering silence fell upon the room. Every face was suddenly contracted in a painful intensity. 'Doom!' 'Doom!' 'Doom!' to the last stroke. The big clock echoed in our ears like the hammer of destiny."

In a series of briskly moving chapters, Mr. Lloyd George traces the period from "The Brewing of the Storm," with the signing of the Anglo-French entente in 1904, to "The Serbian Tragedy," one of the last of a long series of appalling blunders he attributes to Lord Kitchener, in the fall of 1915.



David Lloyd George.

Of his own contributions in "saving the city" during the financial crisis which followed the declaration of war, of his fight for munitions, which was his greatest single contribution to the allied cause, of his memoranda, which, if heeded, might have changed the course of the war, Mr. Lloyd George speaks with engaging frankness. He has horrible things to tell of the Russian debacle on the eastern front, of the unnecessary slaughter of British boys in Flanders, of the tragedy of the Dardanelles, and he tells them well.

His conclusion to this first volume is its keynote, sounding from a speech which he delivered in the House of Commons December 20, 1915, a phrase which rang through Britain:

"Too late in moving here, too late in arriving there, too late in coming to this decision, too late in starting with enterprises, too late in preparing! In this war, the footsteps of the allied forces have been dogged by the mocking spectre of 'too late!'"

FRANK GETTY.

Life in Old South Georgia.

"LAMB IN HIS BOSOM," by Caroline Miller. (Harper & Brothers, New York.)

It is difficult to believe "Lamb in His Bosom" is a first novel. Caroline Miller writes too simply, too smoothly and too surely for a beginner. Perhaps she has written many novels, and stored them, unpublished, in the attic.

"Lamb in His Bosom" is a story of pioneer life in South Georgia, in the days when South Georgia was a sandy plain brushed with pines and palmettos, with alligators in the mosquito-laden swamps, a land where there were only trails for roads, and trails that periodically showed the fearsome track of the rattlesnake in their lazy dust.

Chiefly it is the story of the day-by-day life of Cean and Lonzo, and of the love that ran richly through their life. As contrasting material there is the triangle of Lias and Jasper and Margot, love of a more tempestuous sort, edged, as it were, with tragedy.

In the background Mrs. Miller has placed the life of Cean's family, the curious pioneer routine that expressed itself so often in the tyranny of the head of the clan—not particularly a harsh tyranny in this case, but tyranny nevertheless. And the annealing agent is the struggle for existence, sewing and dyeing and plowing and reaping.

This last is astonishingly well done most of the time, and represents, one imagines, a great deal of research. Mrs. Miller is a South Georgian herself, however, and some of the "color," particularly the more intimate detail of the household, may very well have been absorbed by her from the neighborhood patriarchs. The dialect itself (and it is never annoying) is too deftly handled to have been come by any other way.

The reader who must have snarling gangsters handling hot machine guns in his fiction will not care much for "Lamb in His Bosom." It is written for those with normal pulses.

A Huntress in Tanganyika.

A narrative, "MY FARM IN LION COUNTRY," by Joyce Boyd, illustrated. Frederick A. Stokes, $3.

Mrs. Boyd-Moss lives with her husband and two children in a forest clearing in Tanganyika Territory, East Central Africa. The nearest neighbor is eight miles away. Dairying appears to be the main industry of the farm; though coffee and Indian corn are grown, and there is a garden of cultivated flowers. All about stretches the vast, primeval forest, wherein wild game abounds. Leopards, sometimes, and elephants often stroll into the garden; lions roar nearby; occasionally a rhinoceros appears, and jackals, hyenas and wild dogs slink about the borders.

Here is an exceptional setting for a narrative of stirring adventures, and the author has made admirable use of her scene and material. Though she had never handled a firearm before she emigrated from England to Africa, she soon learned how to use the rifle and to stalk her game effectively. Apparently there is not enough adventure in occasionally dropping a lion or a leopard near the house, since she and her husband often invade the dark forest, where every step is fraught with danger, in their search for the big cats. They go, moreover, unattended, and it is with some disdain that the author speaks of the hunting parties that can not move without swarms of native spearmen to protect and serve them.

There are thrills aplenty in the book. One can not doubt the assurance of the author that nothing has been exaggerated, that every incident related was an actual happening. She writes with an engaging simplicity and straightforwardness, and her style might well serve as a model for those who are prone to over-ornament their literary wares.

Costume in Cuba.

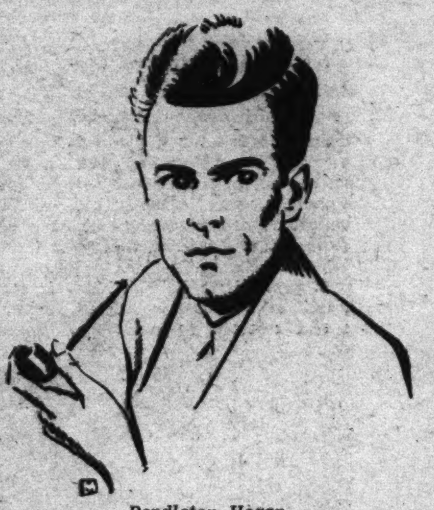
A novel, "THE BISHOP OF HAVANA," by Pendleton Hogan; Ives Washburn, $2.

It will interest Washingtonians that Mr. Hogan brought the manuscript of this novel with him and rewrote it in the Sigma Chi House on N street while he took postgraduate work at George Washington University. This must have been in very recent years; he is now 26. Mr. Hogan was born in Roanoke, wrote a novel at the age of 14, attended Roanoke College in Salem, Va., where he edited the college weekly. The summer he was 21 he drove to Florida and from there made a sudden trip to Cuba which so fired him that he started "The Bishop of Havana." Mr. Hogan is now living here.



Pendleton Hogan.

Set in the late eighteenth century, the novel narrates the rise of a gypsy boy in Spain to the post of bishop in "the Pearl of the Antilles." It is an unambitious tale; the story moves smoothly along, gathering a set of essentially "story" characters who react straightforwardly to mild incidents. Sunshine, beggars, a marquesa, priests, desperadoes, a pirate captain—these fill the novel with pleasant color. If you enjoy costume stories, if you relish plots which make no demand upon your attention, if you like to be carried off gently in time and space, "The Bishop of Havana" will entertain you for an evening.

Now it is seldom considered quite cricket for a reviewer to cast an eye on the "blurb," those hosannas which the publisher prints on the inside of the paper jacket. I can't imagine why this should be, unless the publisher scarcely expects his words to be taken seriously. Yet nothing warms the cockles of a publisher's heart more than to have them taken seriously by a purchaser.

By multifold proxy, then, I assume that right. And because I disagree so heartily with certain terms in this "blurb," I must do what I can to defend the tradition, at least, of accuracy in words. The promotion department of Ives Washburn has stated of this novel that "the incidents have a full, meaty flavor." By no use of these words known to me can this be true; the incidents are rather thin and unrealized. "The humor is richly Rabelaisian"—if that adjective means, as I take it, an enormous rollicking lustihood, the use of it here is something more than an exaggeration. There is scarcely an humor at all in the novel. Further "the style is highly polished and thoroughly sophisticated." Opening the book at random, I read: "Such a handsome ship! * * * Once anchored the swarthy senhor captain and his dangerous crew came swearingly ashore. They had not walked on land for many months, in fact not since they left the Madeira Islands, where they had put to rout two ships belonging to one of the many fleets of England." By every sign such writing is soft and unmistakably "young." This is no oblique attempt to belittle Mr. Hogan's work. The swollen adjectives are in the "blurb," and Mr. Hogan would be the first to deflate them.

"The Bishop of Havana" exhibits a ready eye for color and a contagious joy in sheer narrative. When half the writers in the world are bent on dissecting their own souls, Mr. Hogan is content to tell a tale. He stands, there, in a great tradition.

THEODORE HALL.

Gorky Speaks Out.

"ON GUARD FOR THE SOVIET UNION," by Maxim Gorky. International Publishers, $1.50.

Gorky for a time was a bitter foe to Bolshevism. Later he made his peace with Lenin and became an ardent supporter of the Soviet regime. This book is a collection of miscellaneous papers written during the last few years, with an introduction by Romain Rolland, who also at one time entertained grave misgivings about Sovietism.

Most of the book is controversial. Rolland, who prefers the letters and addresses in which Gorky "acts as mentor to the Soviet workers, encouraging and enlightening them," seems to deprecate the tone of the contentious papers. They are, he says, "in most cases, couched in a caustic, violent, ruthless style." The characterization is apt.

Apparently the main business of Gorky is to justify the ways of the Soviet regime and to discredit its critics. All Russia emigres and all others who oppose the present social and political set-up seem much the same to him, and such epithets as "idiot," "imbecile" and "decadent" are strewn rather thickly through his pages. There is, he maintains, no such thing as violent repression in Russia. He concedes there is such a thing as "compulsion," but this is very necessary, just and proper. "If the mass of peasantry," he writes, "is as yet unable to grasp the real degradation of its position, the working class must impress it with a consciousness thereof even by means of compulsion."

Nor is there such a thing as a dictatorship in Russia. "In the Soviet Union," he writes, "the laws originate from below, from the depths of the toiling masses." The supposed oligarchy of dictators acts merely as recorders and executive agents of the mass, and can not function except by the popular will. How different from the conditions in capitalist nations, he exclaims, where the people stupidly imagine that the ballot gives them a voice in government! They have no such voice, and the personal freedom of which they boast is a sham. They are really ruled by the capitalists, who lead them or drive them this way or that as the interests of capitalism determine.

As a defense of the Soviet regime from an extremist's standpoint the book is interesting and informing. As propaganda, however, its value is doubtful. It is the kind of book that is likely to have the same effect on both the converted and the unconverted—to strengthen and confirm their present attitude.

Recent Achievements of American Painters Shown by Gallery School

Some Startling Canvases on View at Inaugural Exhibit of Group.

ALL that American art is and all it hopes to be may be discerned in the really remarkable collection of recent American paintings which form the first exhibition of the Gallery School of Art in Studio House, adjacent to and affiliated with the Phillips Memorial Gallery at 1614 Twenty-first street northwest. Some of the paintings in this collection are rather startling, even to the radical minded in the art world. But they all represent current and counter current of artistic thought in this American era. Some of the conservative paintings are so much in their own class that they stand apart from most of the other pictures as much as those of a really radical school.

C. Law Watkins, director of Studio House; Robert Gates, assistant director, and Margaret Casey Gates, executive secretary, have given to the Washington art world a very good promise of what can be expected from the new enterprise in this exhibit. They have brought to Washington a really representative cross-section of American painting, including every school of art followed by American artists today important enough to be preserved by private collectors and the directors of many of the large galleries.

Jury-Picked Pictures "Grow."

This exhibition also has value to art students and art lovers alike in that it gives them a chance to study at first hand the trends of American art as presented by those who are engaged in the creation of art today. They have an opportunity to accept or reject.

The educational value of this exhibition is recognized by all those who are of the opinion, as many of the leaders in the art educational world are, that art appreciation of the public must be directed and fostered rather than art itself conforming to an undirected conception of what comes up to the standards of the artistic. In recent times it is noteworthy that the pictures picked by the juries and not the public have, as the years went by, become popular favorites. The directors of many galleries here point out this fact regarding many of the pictures that have permanent place in the collections.

These pictures, representing the great cross-section of contemporary American tastes, were assembled and loaned to Washington by the Frank K. M. Rhen Galleries, of New York. Through the eyes and art of many American artists visitors to the exhibition see expressions of intimate and companionable subjects as the collection's theme is of pictures suitable for living rooms and home bedrooms.

George Luks' New Work.

Those familiar with the painting by George Luks in the Corcoran Art Gallery, "The Woman With the Black Cat," which won the gold medal in the thirteenth biennial exhibition of contemporary American art last year, will view with special interest another outstanding work of this 65-year-old artist, "Head of a Boy," painted in the same sure bold strokes with nice appreciation of strength of color which characterizes the work of this American artist. It is almost possible to envision Mr. Luks in this painting putting in the contour of the face and head with the sureness and the rapidity for which he is noted, keeping up a running fire of comment while he works, scoffing good naturedly at the younger artists who think they are old enough to really paint.

A sympathetic smile greets the Peppino Mangravite's year-old baby, rolling so lifelike on his quilt and painted with the attention to detail, but with the widespread originality which gives this American artist's work its own place in the world of contemporary American painting.

There is gay friendliness which appeals to moderns in the audacity of the rather sardonic Reginald Marsh as he gives his own idea of just what a Fourteenth street shopping crowd looks like on his canvas.

The lyric smoothness of "Springtime," by Charles Burchfield, exemplifies the artistic adaptability of this artist in painting homely scenes.

"Tug End and Mount Everett," by J. C. Claghorn (above) and "Little River," by Benson Moore.

Andrew Dasburg's portrait of his friend has sympathy and shows realization of character that lies beneath the surface countenance. The still life paintings which have their places in all exhibitions are represented in this one by several excellent paintings, including "Glass Pitcher," by Henry Lee McFee; most carefully and perfectly painted; an example of the real technic of art.

Those who admire the frank lucidity of the works of Edward Hopper will welcome the chance to see "Lobsterman" that fills ordinary American life, men and women, factories, homes, babies, flowers, hillsides, prize fights, mines, railroads, ships, and so forth. Besides the artists mentioned are George Biddle, Paul Rohland, John Carroll, Harry Hering, Leon Kroll, Morris Kantor, Kenneth Hayes Miller, Charles Rosen and Robert Riggs.

The exhibition will remain open until November 15.

Charles Adams Platt Excelled In Etching, Among Other Arts

Admirers of the genius of the late Charles Adams Platt as an architect and painter are calling attention to the general oversight of the fact that he also excelled in the art of etching, although his production along this line was not great because of his pursuit of the art of architecture.

He was a member of the famous old New York Etching Club, organized in 1877. His first notable etching was finished in 1880 when he was only 20 years old. This was a view of Gloucester Harbor and later he made a number of other very fine etchings of Gloucester and Marblehead.

This man, who gave to Washington the design of the magnificent Freer Gallery and other notable works, made beautiful etching plates during his wanderings about the world. Although he studied under masters like Boulanger and Lefevre in Paris he did not lose any of the individuality or artistic style which pervaded all his artistic endeavors.

Landscape Club Work On Exhibit at Art Clubs

WITH the wide open fields and brooksides and woods as their meeting places, the members of the Landscape Club of Washington form a unique organization which adds interest to the current exhibition at the Arts Club.

The Landscape Club was formed in the spring of 1913 by a number of artists who had met in the outdoors in pursuit of their art. Out of these chance meetings were formed lasting friendships, which developed into the formation of this group. There is a real spirit of comradeship within this club, which has as its prime objectives the promotion of general interest in art and the advancement of the prestige of the painting profession.

The members are high in their praise of the landscape material in and around Washington and insist that it is as fine and varied as in any part of the world.

Mutual Criticism Helps.

These painters work alone or in groups. There is an unwritten law among them that criticisms are always in order and the work of many of them has been improved because of the liberty their fellows exercise in pointing out best efforts and also weaknesses.

"Autumn Landscape," by Minor Jameson, has a special appeal in this exhibition, presenting a familiar view of the rolling hills and blue mountains and fast-flying, windblown clouds, which seems to be a proper companion for the subtle, yet skillfully painted "Spring In Maryland."

J. C. Claghorn has a well-selected exhibition of sketches and etchings and a painting, "Jug End and Mount Everett," in oils, evidently done on a recent visit to the Berkshires.

Water Colors Also on View.

"Cat Bird in the Thorn Tree," by R. Bruce Horsfall, and "Alligators," both illustrations in water color for Nature Magazine, stand out amid the painted landscapes in the exhibition. Mr. Horsfall also has contributed excellent canvases in "East Tennessee" and "Linville Gorge."

Picturesque Harpers Ferry, W. Va., has been the inspiration for two canvases by Garnett W. Jex. "Hog Alley" is a composition of mellow century-old houses. "Hell's Acre," a settlement on the Shenandoah Canal above the city, is now familiar to motorists. In this collection Mr. Jex has contributed charcoal portraits of famous naturalists.

The work of Benson Moore always has a great vogue in this city and he has two very interesting paintings in this exhibition. These are "Little River," with a vista of Georgetown through stately trees, and "Beeches," a sun-filled corner of wooded Montrose Park.

R. S. Meryman has contributed two characteristic works, clear and bold and true, as his work always is. "Provincetown Sand Dunes" sketches are shown by Rowland Lyon and there are important pictures by A. H. O. Rollo, Robert E. Motley, Paul E. Rolando, A. J. Schram, William Walter and others.

Independent Artists Show.

The National Society of Independent Artists will hold its fall exhibition from November 13 to December 2. Artists wishing to exhibit, who are not members, should immediately address the secretary, Russell C. Parr, 1416 Twentieth street northwest.

Soups Serve Dual Purpose on Menus

Are Useful as Appetizers and for Giving Family Hearty Nourishment.

SOUPS fall under two classifications, light and delicate appetizers, and hearty, satisfying nourishment.

Thin, clear consommes and boullions, on the one hand, give a distinctive touch to the dinner de luxe; while rich chowders and filling cream soups may afford the main dish at luncheon or late supper.

Thus, the choice of soup depends on the rest of the menu, whether it is rich or lean, heavy or light; whether it requires something that will "stick to the ribs," or whet an appetite for more to follow.

For example, a clear soup like consomme or Julienne is a good appetizer when you are having a rich roast meat dinner with several vegetables. A soup made with mixed vegetables may sometimes take the place of a second vegetable with the meat course. This is a convenient way of using odds and ends of leftover vegetables for an economical meal.

America Likes Milk Soups.

Again, some of the very filling soups—bean, pea and lentil, and those made with many vegetables, including potatoes, macaroni or rice, like the Italian minestrone or the French pot-au-feu, are practically meals in themselves and need little else to supplement them.

Americans are very fond of milk soups with vegetable flavors. These soups are just as nutritious as the milk they are made of, plus whatever value the vegetables have. When dinner is hearty, a milk soup is not needed, even though it may be a favorite. Save it for a lighter supper or for lunch, when cold meat in limited quantity, a vegetable plate or a salad is to be the main dish. The milk will provide just enough additional protein and other nutrients to constitute a balanced menu. Evaporated or dried milk does quite as well as fresh milk in making soups.

One of the finest of all the vegetable milk soups is cream of corn. It can be made any time of year with canned corn, of course, but in season, ears may be selected right from the garden with all the delicious flavor of fresh corn. Buttered popcorn makes an intesesting garnish.

Recipe for Cream of Corn.

Use 2 cups canned crushed corn, or fresh corn cut from the cob

1 cup water
1 quart milk
1 onion, cut in half
1 tablespoon flour
4 tablespoons butter or other fat
Salt and pepper to taste

Combine corn and water, and cook for 10 minutes, stirring constantly to prevent scorching. Sieve the mixture. Heat milk and onion in double boiler and thicken with flour and fat which have previously been well blended. Add the corn pulp, salt and pepper. Heat, remove onion, and serve. Use croutons or popcorn for garnish.

The water in which vegetables have been cooked, and left-over cooked vegetables can be used in making cream-of-vegetable soups. Many vegetables soups, and all cream soups and bisques, are best when slightly thickened to bind ingredients together. Quick-cooking tapioca, because of its thickening quality and attractive translucence, is excellent for the purpose. Once thickened to desired consistency, soups should be kept hot over hot water. Evaporation caused by prolonged cooking makes them thick and pasty, and no soup should be obviously thick.

How to Make Meat Stock.

Meat stock, brown or light, and fish stock are excellent substitutes for the vegetable or

Home Preparation of Jellies Gives Pride of Achievement

WHAT pride of accomplishment is felt by the woman who through her own efforts annually stocks her jam cupboard with row upon row of tempting jellies!

Often the juices of two fruits are mixed to give jellies of delicious blended flavor, of particularly attractive color. Good combinations are currant and raspberry, raspberry and gooseberry, apple and quince, grape and crabapple, cranberry and quince. Such combinations, moreover, are often necessary to bring together the acid and pectin which are the foundation for good jelly.

Fruits affording these two essentials are tart apples, such as winesaps, blackberries, crabapples, cranberries, currants, wild or uncultivated grapes, such as the Concord, wild goose or beach plums, tart quinces and raspberries.

Juices suitable for jelly making are definitely acid in flavor. If acid seems lacking, a wise precaution is to add it in the form of one tablespoon of strained lemon juice to each standard measuring cup of fruit juice. This not only facilitates jellying but adds to flavor.

Equipment All-Important.

The right kind of equipment is all-important in making good jellies. While the initial outlay may sound somewhat dismaying to the woman of limited household budget, she will find that, once obtained, it represents an endlessly gratifying investment.

She will need pans for washing fruit, brush for hard fruits, large colander, stainless steel paring knives, scales, quart cup, standard measuring cup, large kettle for cooking fruit, long-handled spoons, jelly bag, which may be made of canton flannel with nap side in, or two or three thicknesses of good quality cheese cloth, or a sugar bag; support for jelly bag, large tray, jelly glasses, large pan for sterilizing jelly glasses, large saucepan for cooking jelly, tongs for handling jars, paraffin and small pan for melting it, and labels.

Overripe fruits should never be used. Slightly underripe fruit contains more acid and pectin and the ripe fruit furnishes more desirable flavor.

Wash fruit thoroughly, discarding damaged parts. Berries must be washed quickly and carefully. Currants should be left on their stems, and the skins left on grapes and plums. With apples and quinces, stems and blossom ends must be removed and the fruit cut in pieces, without removing cores and skins.

Suggestions for Preparation.

Prepare small lots of fruit at a time and carry the jelling process through promptly. For example, cook and extract juice from about 6 quarts of currants at a time, or 8 pounds of grapes or apples. If a large quantity of jelly is to be made, start a second lot of fruit cooking as soon as the first has finished dripping from the jelly bag.

Cook the fruit in a broad, flat-bottomed kettle and stir to prevent scorching. Crush soft fruits to start the flow of juice. Count time only after the fruit begins to boil.

Berries, currants and grapes need 5 to 10 minutes to cook soft; apples and quinces need about 25 to 30 minutes, depending on the firmness of the fruit.

Pour the hot cooked fruit at once into jelly bag. Let the juice drip out; do not squeeze the bag. When the drops are few and far between, press the bag lightly with the flat side of two knives to start the flow again.

Some fruits, such as currants, crabapples and wild grapes, are so rich in jelly-making juices that two extractions of juice can be made from the same fruit. As soon as the juice ceases to drip after the first cooking, turn the pomace back into the kettle, barely cover with water, and boil gently with frequent stirring. An asbestos mat beneath the kettle will help to prevent burning. Cook 15 to 20 minutes and extract the juice as at first. Some jelly makers mix the juice of the first and second extractions. Others prefer to keep the two extractions separate and make jelly from each lot. There is little choice in the two methods, providing the juice has good color and the fruit yields plentiful and strongly flavored juice.

While the fruit juice is dripping is the proper time for sterilizing the jelly glasses. Place them on a rack in a pan of cold water and bring to a boil. As the glasses are filled and set aside, others can be immersed for sterilizing to receive the next batch of jelly.

By the use of bottled fruit pectin, the process of jelly-making can be shortened somewhat. Recipes taking into account the use of this commercial product demand the mixture be brought to a "full rolling boil" and allowed to boil hard for one-half to one minute. This "full rolling boil" is a vigorous foaming boil which no amount of stirring can stir out. It should continue for the exact brief time stated in the recipe; no longer, no less.

Bottled fruit pectin makes possible the use of many delightful fruits not otherwise suitable for jelly making. Think of being able to make strawberries, blackberries and pineapple into delectable jellies!

When jelly is firm and well set, be sure that the inside rims of the glasses are free from drops of jelly. A good seal can not be obtained with paraffin unless the glass is clean and dry. Pour melted paraffin over the top and rotate each glass in the hand so that the hot paraffin runs up to the rim to form a good seal. Cover, and label with the name of fruit and date of making. Store in a cool, dry place

Popular Songs' Identification By Writer Subject to Chance

Why is it that sometimes a well-known song is automatically identified as the work of the composer while at other times the author of the words receives recognition? When "Sylvia" is heard one naturally thinks of Oley Speaks, who wrote the beautiful music. But the lyric is worthy, too, and yet how many know that Clinton Scollard wrote it?

Conversely, "On the Road to Mandalay" immediately suggests Kipling, author of the words. But would the song be so universally known without the melody that was furnished by Oley Speaks? So sometimes it is the author of the words and at other times the composer of the music who gets all the popular glory.

And often there is the utmost confusion in the identification. For instance, it is not unusual for the radio to announce "Home, Sweet Home" by the "great American composer," John Howard Payne. Payne, of course, wrote the words. The affecting melody is an old Sicilian air.

Tricking Up Vegetables.

The good old every-day potato and carrot have come into their own at last. They are appearing at dinners dressed to look fit to be eaten. The secret is this: There is a small knife that makes all this possible. It is the French curl knife. Just wind it into a nice big potato, carrot or beet, and out comes a spiral of twin curls.

A clever thing to do is to unwind these and then entwine them with curls from a vegetable of another color. The yellow and white of potatoes and carrots treated in this fashion is really quite an addition to the Sunday roast.

7 Headed Cabbage Manna.

Nature showed a generous heart and an accurate count when she deposited a seven-headed cabbage in the garden of Berry Carr, Nego, Pittsburgh, Pa. He has seven children.

Paris Trends Reported By Washington Woman

When I left Paris a few weeks ago, one heard German spoken in my "quartier" almost as much as French. France has been amazingly kind to the refugees and once more has opened her doors to the Jewish exiles, as she did for the Russians, Italians and Armenians, who now make a considerable percentage of her population. Belgium, Switzerland and Czechoslovakia are taking care of a large share, while England allows one every three days to enter. She can not handle any more.

So far, France seems to be controlling the situation easily, although her unemployed problem grows. The Little Sisters of the Poor drive about in a funny little high carriage with a barrel between the seats, collecting from hotels, restaurants and private homes all stale bread, leftovers and scrapings from dishes. Nothing in France goes to waste and these scraps, which we would treat as garbage, they make into a strong and delicious soup for the poor.

The City of Paris provides for its old, but curiously enough one sees pathetically old men and women everywhere, in the "metro" (subway) entrances, along the "Quais" and under the bridges, sleeping and resting and, if the police are out of sight, begging. They prefer this independent life to being comfortable in an institution and depend for food on the "leftovers" and "throwouts" from "Les Halles," the large market. These they cook on the banks of the Seine.

The Way of a Beggar.

I have a favorite beggar whom I pass every morning going to my work. She is incased in several layers of rags, held together by dozens of safety pins, and greets me smilingly with, "Bon jour, ma belle comtesse." (Good morning, my beautiful countess.) She always gets a franc (4 cents) for this.

I saw few tourists, and the fashionable Rue de la Paix, with its luxury trade, was almost silent. One night I visited three of the popular cafes, different in type, and in different "quartiers." First, the Dome, center of Montparnasse and Bohemian life. I didn't hear a French voice, though French was being spoken. Lots of representatives from the Central European countries, plenty of Germans and a sprinkling of American students, most of them trying to look like their ideas of French artists. A large crop of beards, uncut hair and general untidiness.

I sat on the terrace and a woman at the next table, very made up, with heavy-weighted eyelashes and a flashy costume, startled me by bursting forth in a high-pitched American voice: "He said I was from North Carolina and I said 'You are a d—— liar, I am from Virginia.'" I took another look and hoped she wouldn't ask me where I came from.

Oldest Cafe in Paris.

From there, I went on to the oldest cafe in Paris, the Deux Magots, which is also on the left bank, and my favorite. There I found nearly all French people, except a few American writers and newspapermen. I saw Ford Madox Ford, who formerly collaborated with Conrad. Bernard Shaw, when in Paris, seldom misses being seen there. Then, I wound up the night on the right bank, again at the Cafe de la Paix, where one always saw so many of the floating population of Americans having supper after the opera and theaters. They were noticeably missing, and in their place were Germans reading various German papers now printed in France.

The French were talking and planning their vacation, which as usual, was to be spent with their families. These family parties do not mean just parents and children, but grandparents and innumerable cousins, uncles, aunts and in-laws. It is a mystery to me how this is a holiday, but they seem to be able to make it a pleasure. Those who can afford to go farther from Paris than the small places around the city, go to the Normandy, Brittany or the Riviera coasts, taking a house for a month.

It is delightful to find in every family, from the peasants to the university people, a keen interest in outside things and in books, poetry and the arts. They are educated: I find many more American and English books being translated than formerly.

I have enjoyed our Warrenton and Berryville Horse Shows since my return. The only one I saw in France was under cover, the "Concur Hippique," the Grand Palais on the Champs Elysees. I saw a splendid display of horsemanship and riding, but I did not think they were up to our quality in horses, nor for that matter, in equipment and tact. Their variety of hunt liveries was picturesque, but not so gay as our pink coats.

McGoofey's First Reader

By H. I. Phillips.

WHAT is this?

This is a flag.

What kind of flag?

A direction flag. It is used on golf courses.

Why is it used on golf courses?

To give golfers the direction in which to shoot for the green.

Where is the green?

(We don't know; we are still in the rough and have never been on one.—Ed.)

When the golfer sees the direction flag, what does he do?

He feels better about it.

About what?

About the golf game. It relieves him to feel that he has a general idea where the ball should be driven.

So what?

So he takes his stance, looks at the flag two or three times, grunts and—socko!

Does the ball go straight for the green?

No, the ball does not go anywhere near the green.

Why?

That's what the golfer would like to know.

Didn't the flag help him?

Not at all.

What does the golfer do next?

He throws a fit and denounces the course, the club, the fairways committee and the game in general.

Then why are golf direction flags used on golf links?

It's an old Scottish custom.

Dual Purpose of Soups Aids Housewife's Menu

milk base in soup. Meat stocks are seasoned, sometimes thickened and often made more palatable and inviting with addition of chopped vegetables or vegetable puree. In making meat stock for soup it is important to secure maximum of flavor. As a rule soup meats should be cut in small pieces, put on to cook in cold water, and simmered over low flame for several hours, tightly covered.

There is a quickly made meat stock recipe, however, which requires

1 pound round steak, ground, or chopped in small squares
1 teaspoon salt,
6 cups cold water

Place meat in kettle, add salt, and cover with cold water. Cover and simmer gently for one hour, removing scum as it forms. Strain through cheesecloth. This should make about five cups of stock, which may be used in vegetable or cream soups.

For clear soups, one may choose between consomme or bouillon. The former is highly seasoned, and made from the cleared and strained stock of two or even three kinds of meat. Often light stocks of veal and chicken are combined with beef stock for consomme. Bouillon made from lean beef stock, delicately [illegible] is best.

In clearing meat stock, always season to taste before clearing. Cool the mixture. Skim off fat. Add [illegible] beaten whites and crushed shells of two eggs. Heat slowly, beating constantly. Boil five minutes. Let stand about 20 minutes to settle. Strain through double thickness of cheese cloth. Reheat before serving. To remove any remaining fat, draw strips of unglazed paper across [illegible] of stock.

Recipe for Consomme.

An excellent recipe for consomme calls for 3 pounds shin beef

1 pound marrow bone
3 pounds knuckles of veal
6 quarts cold water
6 celery stalks, finely cut
1 tablespoon peppercorns
6 medium onions, sliced
6 carrots, finely cut
3 bay leaves
1½ tablespoons salt
3 sprigs parsley

Cut beef in half-inch cubes and sear in hot skillet until well browned. Place in large kettle, add water, veal bone and meat cut in pieces, and marrow bone. Partly cover, heat slowly to boiling point and simmer gently five hours, removing scum as it forms. Add remaining ingredients and cook three hours longer. Strain through cheesecloth and set aside to cool. When nearly cool, remove fat by drawing strips of unglazed paper across surface. Chill until jellied. Remove any remaining fat. Break with spoon and serve in bouillon cups as jellied consomme; or bring to rapid boil and serve as hot consomme. This recipe makes three or four quarts of consomme.

Soups present a more attractive appearance if garnished with chopped parsley, dash of paprika, a few croutons, grated cheese, or a few tiny round crackers. Cream soups may be garnished with a spoonful of whipped cream in center, and sprinkled with chopped parsley.

ALTHOUGH upward of two hundred players participated in the staggered events over a period of three weeks to determine the official champion contract bridge team of Washington, in the contest conducted under the auspices of the United States Bridge Association, only five teams were able to stand the pace and enter the final heat. The others were eliminated in the series of preliminary matches and in the early part of the final events.

The winners, and hence the champions, were Mr. and Mrs. James H. Lemon and A. P. Stockvis and Roy Thurtell, whose match point score in the finals was 43½. This team got away to a flying start on the first night of the finals, winning 16 out of 20 boards, while the best that the Nolan-Rudd-Lord-Adams team could make was 13½ boards out of 20 to gain second place in the initial event of the finals.

After that the winning team had a comparatively easy canter to retain first place, although the race among the next four teams was close and exciting. It was not until the last board had been played in the game at the Mayfair Club that the runners-up were determined to be the Perkins-Gray-McCain-Blasdale team from the Army and Navy Club with a match point score of 38½. The remaining teams finished as follows: The Guest-Williams-Johnson-Gerber team, 38; Nolan-Rudd-Lord-Adams team, 37; the Corley-Cake-Bishop-Perkins team, 37. The last-named team, which had been lagging behind throughout the events, made top on the last night of the play, which enabled them to come in bunched with the others in the final score.

The winning team will be entitled to play in the regional events embracing teams from Maryland, Virginia, West Virginia and Delaware, and if successful in that contest, will go to St. Louis the last week in November to take part in the grand national championship tourney. No other bridge event in Washington has commanded such sustained interest and enthusiasm since the first bridge tournament held under the auspices of The Washington Post more than two years ago.

* * * *

The most sensational hand of the entire series developed on the last evening of the play, with the score ranging all the way from 1,040 to 4,000 points for the side holding the big hands, the minimum being for a small slam bid and a grand slam made in no trump, and the maximum being for a set of five doubled and redoubled on a bid of one spade.

The board was as follows:

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| | S x-x-xH A-J-x-xD A-J-xC A-K-QNorth | |
| S J-x-x-xH x-xD x-x-xC 10-x-x-x | W Ee as st t | S Q-x-xH 8-x-xD x-x-x-xC x-x-x |
| | SouthS A-K-xH K-Q-10-xD K-Q-x-xC J-x | |

East, Dealer; East and West vulnerable; North and South nonvulnerable.

The North and South players, who reached a grand slam bid in no trump, made the contract without any difficulty, scoring 2,040 points; those who were timid and stopped at six no trump also made a grand slam without any trouble and scored 1,040—bottom for the board with one exception. Strangely enough, the team to plunge to the depths with a loss of 4,000 points on the board was the Lemon-Lemon-Stockvis-Thurtell winning foursome. Mrs. Lemon, sitting east, was dealer. Because of her extremely weak holding she sensed a slam for the opposing side. In an effort to forestall it she made a psychic bid of one heart. Mrs. Guest, sitting south, doubled, whereupon Mrs. Lemon switched to one spade. This Mrs. Guest also doubled and as a signal to her partner that she was in distress and wished to be taken out in one of the minors, if he could do no better, Mrs. Lemon redoubled. This was a true S O S call, a red rocket sent up for help, a plaintive plea for assistance, but of relief there was none. Poor "Jimmie" was lashed to the mast and the ship was sinking. His partner had plunged vulnerable into the troubled sea and he was totally unable to rescue her. Spades were the best he had, and there the contract remained; set five tricks; under trick penalty 4,000.

Of course, Mrs. Lemon, being an excellent player, would have not made the bid in a rubber game, nor would she have done so had it not been that her side was far out in front and she could take a long chance, which she did. It was simply one time when a psychic did not succeed in its purpose. It resulted in a terrible match point bottom, but it did not affect the final result.

Lieut. Comdr. W. A. Corley, United States Navy, retired, the newly elected president of the Washington Bridge League, has inaugurated his administration by preparing plans for the forthcoming league tournament, which will be the third in the history of that organization. The tourney will be, as heretofore, the classic contract event of the local bridge season, and will determine the league championship both for pairs and teams of four for the District of Columbia. Players from Maryland and Virginia, however, will be invited to participate.

The pair championship in last year's tournament was won by an out-of-town pair, Mrs. Emery and Mrs. Marston, of Baltimore, and they will be expected to defend their title in the coming event. The team championship of the league is now held by the Gray-Hamlin-Coe-Muncaster foursome of the Army and Navy Club, captained by Maj. E. B. Gray, United States Army, who, with Col. A. S. Perkins, won the pair championship for Washington in the recent tournament of the United States Bridge Association. The prize for the local league's pair championship will be the Woodward Cup presented by Donald Woodward and that for the team championship will be the Eynon trophy offered by "Eddie" Eynon. There will be various other prizes for event winners at each session of the tournament.

Commander Corley has designated to have charge of the arrangements the following tournament committee: A. P. Stockvis, chairman; Herbert Shepard, Van Clarke, Miss Mazie Buie and Lawrence Cake. The tournament will be held on November 9, 10 and 11, probably at the Hotel Shoreham, where previous tournaments of the league have taken place. Russell J. Baldwin, of Cleveland, official scorer of the American Bridge League, will act as scorer. Applications for entry will be received by Commander Corley and Mr. Stockvis.

Having recently closed its spring and summer series of games, the American Association of University Women has inaugurated its fall and winter session, with Mrs. W. J. O'Leary in charge. Winners in the most recent contest were Mrs. Alfred Brooks and Mrs. W. J. O'Leary, first; Miss Marguerite Atchison and Miss Janerio Brooks, second, and Mrs. John Barber and Mrs. Ellen Hoffman, third. The games will be played hereafter on Thursday evening instead of Wednesday, except the third game in October, played on Friday.

The Areos have crowded the Patent Office foursome out of first place in the 22-team tournament of the Federal Bridge League and are now leading them by an average of .644 to .635, with the Weather Bureau No. 1 team running third and the Treasury Amateurs fourth. The N. R. A. foursome, which was the only team to enter the tournament with a handicap of 20 boards, by reason of not having participated in the first evening's play, won top score in the third session and thereby leaped into fifth place on basis of averages.

In the Navy service game at the La Salle on Monday night the winners were Lieut. Comdr. and Mrs. Bertram Groesbeck, first; Commander and Mrs. C. B. Platt, second, and Mrs. Marguerite Lord and Miss Ruth Lord, third.

The Thursday evening game at the La Salle was marked by the success of a novice in the team of four match, Miss Eleanor Jones, playing with Mrs. Dixie T. Wright as her partner, winning top score. Her team mates were Miss Catherine Titus and William Phelan.

The series of fall and winter games conducted by Mrs. DeWitt Milligan at Stoneleigh Court began on October 19 and will continue until April 15, 1934, making a total of 24 plays. In order to be eligible for the season's prize, players will be required to participate in at least 16 games. Prizes also will be awarded to the winners at each weekly play. Last week's duplicate winners were E. B. Everett and Mrs. Eva Milligan, first; Mrs. T. M. Boyle and C. N. Shaw, second, and Miss Myrtle Standiford and Miss Goldberg, third.

Mrs. Katherine Fenton, well known in social and bridge circles in Washington, and her daughter, Mrs. Johnson, while visiting in Chicago recently, were North and South cup winners in the contract bridge tournament at the Allerton Hotel.

Walter Wyman Instinctive in Play and Analysis of Interesting Hands.

By Ely Culbertson.

MR. WALTER F. WYMAN, of Boston, Mass., is well known to American bridge players as a very keen analyst in his own right and as a close associate of Mr. Milton C. Work, one of the men to whom bridge owes a tremendous debt. Mr. Wyman, in both play and analysis, recognizes instinctively the correct line of play. Hence, I am very glad to have the opportunity to record two hands which he was kind enough to send me. The first was one which he was defending, having as a partner Mr. R. M. Kimball, of Bostou. The play, a splendid defensive maneuver, was made in a team-of-four match at the Winchester Country Club.

East, Dealer.
East and West vulnerable.

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| | Mr. W. F. Wyman♠ A 9 6 4♡ Q J 6 3◇ 10 8♣ 7 4 3 | |
| ♠ K Q 10 7♡ 10◇ J 2♣ K J 10 9 8 6 | NW ES | ♠ 8 3♡ A K 9 8 7◇ A Q 7 6 4 2♣ — |
| | ♠ J 5 2♡ 5 4 2◇ K 9 5♣ A Q 5 2Mr. R. M. Kimball | |

The final contract was three notrump by West—perhaps not the best contract on the hand, although the hands are obvious misfits.

North's opening lead was the spade 4, and West won this trick and led the diamond Knave, which was permitted to win. Mr. Kimball won the second round and returned a spade, which Mr. Wyman won with the Ace. Mr. Wyman now led the six of hearts being unwilling to give the Declarer a count on the hands by a fourth-best lead and unable to lead a high heart because of the high intermediates in the Dummy. The Declarer's dilemma here is, of course, apparent. North and South have taken a spade trick and a diamond trick. If she wins the trick in her own hand with the Ten, at the end she will be compelled to lead from her minor tenaces in clubs or spades and almost inevitably lose three more tricks. If, however, she can force the lead up to her hand after cashing a total of seven tricks in the two red suits and make only one more trick, her game is home.

After winning the heart in the Dummy, she led the diamond Ace, on which Mr. Kimball followed suit and Mr. Wyman discarded a club. On the next diamond Mr. Kimball played the Queen of clubs and followed with the deuce on the third. Naturally this made it imperative for Mr. Wyman to discard both his spades, with the result that the declaration was set one trick.

The outstanding point of this splendid defensive play by Mr. Kimball is that he made it all but impossible for his partner to go wrong and infinitely easy for him to go right at the earliest possible moment and before Mr. Wyman could discard the three small clubs with which he was marked. As Mr. Wyman points out, there is altogether too little discussion of the art of protecting partner, which is the backbone of many fine defensive plays. It is granted that the average player has a hard time of it on the defense to protect his own thirteen cards, but is is only when a player learns to consider his own holding as a part—and only a part—of partnership assets that true team work can come into existence.

North, Dealer.
East and West vulnerable.

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| | ♠ K J 10 9♡ 7 5◇ 6♣ A Q J 9 7 4 | |
| ♠ 7 5 4 3 2♡ A 3◇ 7 5 4 2♣ 10 6 | NW ES | ♠ A Q♡ Q J 10 9 8 6◇ 8 3♣ 8 3 2 |
| | ♠ 8 6♡ K 4 2◇ A K Q J 10 9♣ K 5 | |

The final declaration was five diamonds by South, and the Opening lead was the heart Ace. What should East play—and why?

The great majority of Easts played their lowest heart so as not to encourage a continuation of the suit. When Mr. Kimball played the Queen, his partner's doubts were ended.

First of all, this positively denied the King. Then, it showed Mr. Kimball's desire to tell his partner that since all he held was a long sequence headed by the Queen, she must shift. For had a continuation of hearts been desired some other high heart—but not the Queen—would have been played.

The shift to spades was inevitable and the contract defeated in place of Declarer's scoring six odd—six diamonds plus six clubs.

Commerce Employes Evolve New "Wireless" Communication

Underclerks in Department of Commerce offices have evolved a unique method of "long-distance" communication, in which wires, transmitters, receivers and all the other elaborate paraphernalia are missing. At lunch time and after working hours, when they wish to exchange gossip or arrange appointments and are not within common speaking distance, they use the echo of the courtyard.

Leaning out of various windows giving on the open space on the Fifteenth street side, they bring into play a megaphone which consists of a milk container with the bottom knocked out. The acoustics of the courtyards seem to permit a voice raised only slightly above conversational pitch to carry across the intervening space. Several pairs of communicants may operate simultaneously, all that is necessary being to aim the makeshift megaphone in the direction of the receiver—and talk.

Holy Thorn of Glastonbury Has Descendant in Capital

The Holy Thorn of Glastonbury, noted in art and story, is represented in Washington by a sturdy tree in the Close of Washington Cathedral which was grown from a grafting of the original Thorn in Glastonbury Abbey precincts, England.

This is the Thorn that, tradition says, was brought into England by Joseph of Arimathea, who gave up his garden tomb in Jerusalem for the crucified body of Christ. St. Joseph became a Christian in after-years and made his way to England as a missionary. When he reached what is now Glastonbury, on the west coast of England, he planted the staff he had brought with him from the Holy Land into the ground as a token that there he would remain and start his mission. The staff he thus planted took root and grew into a tree which, tradition says, blossomed twice yearly, once at the regular summer blooming and again at Christmas, as Tennyson wrote "Mindful of Our Lord."

The Glastonbury Thorn at Washington Cathedral has had several dual blossomings. When the Prince of Wales was here in 1919 it put forth several blooms in time to have them plucked, placed in a silver box and, in accordance to an ancient custom, presented to the prince, who was greatly touched by the incident.

The Glastonbury Thorn is just below the Little Sanctuary in Washington Cathedral Close.

Fascinating Lore of Measurement Found in F Street Instrument Shop

THERE'S more than meets the eyes—those two great, gold-rimmed, flat, glass eyes—on the front of the basement optometrist's shop in F street northwest. Inside is an extensive variety of fine instruments, many uncommon, for the measurement of phenomena all the way from altitude to humidity and footsteps in a given terrain.

Archie D. Engel, who has been interested in more than eyesight for his 22 years in business here, became quite willing to explain certain of the more unusual mechanisms on his shelves. Two makes of pedometer, that delicate recorder of pedestrian mileage which registers steps and turns them into miles, one of American, one of dainty French design, were shown. Great walkers, like the late Edward Payson Weston, made frequent use of these instruments; surveyors, in addition to the single-wheel pushed cyclometer, use the pedometer in their work.

A Swiss thermindex, which records temperatures and predicts weather with unerring accuracy, hangs next, a combination centigrade and Fahrenheit thermometer with circular tube instead of the more familiar vertical type. Spirit compasses, with splinter-sized needles floating in alcohol and the whole apparatus swung in a nontippable standard; a barometer, which likewise registers variations from dead sea level.

Altimeter Registers on Chair.

A practical demonstration of an altimeter, about an inch in diameter, was made. The operator stood on the ground floor of the shop, holding the 'meter, then stood upon a chair: The tiny needle showed an infinitesimal, but definite, variation. A magnetic compass reveals the fact that Washington streets, although topographically considered as running due east and west, or north and south, are about six degrees off in actuality.

The tourist who desires to know accurately what distance he will have to go on his projected journey, may apply the tiny spiked wheel of a map-distance marker to the thin line of his route, run it from start to destination on his map. The mileage is registered on the dial of the marker.

The hygrometer, Mr. Engel pointed out, may be put to good use by the home-owner in determining moisture content of a room. If the hygrometer shows a lack of proper humidity, that lack probably also indicates that more oil or coal is being burned than is actually necessary to heat the home comfortably. A bucket of water splashed over the basement floor will then go further toward remedying the situation than a bucket of coal or oil in the furnace.

Barometers are slowly coming into their own with the old-fashioned thermometer in most modern homes. Many who buy them, however, are ignorant of the exact workings of the indicator. Noting, at times of what seem extreme storms, only slight variations in the pointer, they believe their instrument broken or inaccurate, and register often humorous complaints..

How Barometers Work.

"The tiniest movement of the needle in one direction or another is indicative of change in weather," Mr. Engel explained. "It is wrong to believe that the instrument will point directly to 'Fair,' 'Storm,' &c. Often even the most severe storms will not pull the needle down to that section of the dial."

For the benefit of those who have barometers in their homes, but do not understand how to foretell the weather from them, the following general rules are reprinted from the United States Weather Bureau bulletins: As a rule, a falling barometer indicates foul weather; a steady barometer, slight weather changes, if any, and a rising barometer, fair or continued fair weather.

Barometer reading reduced to sea-level pressure: Low point is under 30"; medium point is 30"; high point is above 30".

A Rising Barometer.

A rapid rise from a low point, with winds veering to the west, indicates dry weather. A rapid rise from a high point, with westerly winds, indicates fair but wet weather after several days. A slow rise, with south or southwesterly winds, indicates clearing and continued fair for two to three days.

A Steady Barometer.

A Falling Barometer.

A rapid fall from a low point, with southerly and easterly winds, indicates gale, with clearing within a day; with winds from the northeast, severe storms. A rapid fall from a medium point, with southeasterly or northeasterly winds, indicates wet, followed within several days by clear. A rapid fall from a high point, with southeasterly or northeasterly winds, indicates squalls within 12 hours; with winds from east to northeast, indicates rain or snow within the day; with winds from south to southeast, indicates rain within the day and blustery weather. A slow fall from a medium point or below, with winds from southeast to northeast, indicates continued rain from one to two days. A slow fall from a high point, with winds from east to northeast, rain not likely for a few days; in winter, precipitation within one day; with winds from south, southeast and northeast, wet within the day; with winds from southwest to northwest, indicates clear for several days.

Clark Collection Rugs Ultimate of Orient Art

One of the most important collections open at the Corcoran Gallery of Arts this fall is that of the priceless rugs which form part of the W. A. Clark collection. Many of these rugs are hung or placed in backgrounds specially designed for them. They represent the ultimate of the art of rug-making of the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries.

The Polish rugs, which experts declare come under the same category as Persian rug designs, contain a story of the evolution and the subtleties of Persian rug design.

Those who would get the spirit of these rugs are warned by Rudolf M. Riefstahl, who has written a preface on rugs for the current W. A. Clark collection catalogue, that they must have plenty of time to linger to get the proper attitude of meditation and repose.

"Oriental rugs," Mr. Riefstahl says, "are among the greatest achievements of Islamic art. That art does not favor the representation of the human figure; therefore, the great efforts go into this work which, according to our Western standards, are often considered only ornamental or decorative. Nevertheless, the colorful designs of the Orient go much deeper than that. There is philosophy and meditation in their message."

In speaking of the Ispahan or Herat rugs, best known in Persia in the sixteenth century, Mr. Riefstahl points out that this type of rug shows early Chinese influence. He calls attention to the early Chinese influence apparent in the Ispahan rug design derived from the delicate art of the court of the great Mongul dynasty, founded by Ghengis Khan, of which Persia was long an integral part.

"If we examine the Ispahan rugs in this collection," this expert says, "we are able to distinguish the restrained flowing type from the later exuberantly gorgeous, and also to distinguish the angularity of simplified copies from the elegant fluency of original design. Proceeding systematically, we are able to distinguish a chronological sequence based on the psychology of these designs. No rug collection in the United States affords a better study in this psychology."

Magyar Horsemanship Long Proud Tradition

Hungarians are called, on account of traditions of a thousand years, a nation of horsemen. The Hungarians of old were vastly superior in horsemanship to the peoples of Central Europe and this made it easy for them to sweep away obstacles and achieve military purposes. Hungarians of a thousand years ago who settled down in the Danube valley were one with their horse. They hunted, shot the arrow, threw the javelin, from horseback, and excelled in trick riding, their favorite amusement, as well as flat and obstacle races, so old manuscripts tell us.

Sports centered round the horse. Arpad, the prince under whom Hungarians settled down in that part of the world, founded a stud on an island in the Danube and entrusted it to the care of one of his men of the name of Csepel. Even today, the big island immediately below Budapest and the factory town in its northern district are called Csepel.

Though horse breeding was at its best between the fifteenth and seventeenth centuries, racing as an institution is due to Count Stephen Szechenyi, "the greatest Hungarian," who introduced regular horse races in Budapest about 100 years ago. Horses became yet more of a fashion, and it became the habit to drive to the city park even four, five and six in hand.

The greatest horseman of the last century was Count Maurice Sandor, son-in-law of Metternich. His exploits were known far and near and inspired artists and poets. He was greatly admired in England as the winner of many a steeplechase. His boldness had no equal. He never went up the stairs of Fortress Hill at Buda otherwise than on horseback and loved to jump, regardless whether it was over three four-horse carriages, or the heads of soldiers who tried to stop him with their bayonets. He was greatly amused at the consternation he caused. He liked to go to fairs and jump over the loaded carts of terrified tradesmen. He could ride any wild horse and could not be equaled at races and long-distance riding. He was also a marvelous shot. Once, firing from the saddle, he shot an apple from the head of a friend.

Famous Daguerreotype of Poe Richmond Shrine's Treasure

Patrons of the Edgar Allan Poe Shrine in Richmond, Va., celebrated the recent anniversary of Poe's death by viewing the authentic daguerreotype of Edgar Allan Poe placed on exhibition at the shrine. This picture has been purchased from Mrs. Christine Smith Rawson, of Bradford, N. H., by 20 patrons of the shrine and presented by them.

Mrs. Rawson is the niece of John Clark Turner, the journalist to whom Poe gave this picture some time before his death. It was taken in Providence, R. I., Thursday, November 9, 1848. He was at that time visiting Mrs. Sarah Helen Whitman, who played an important part in the romantic history of Poe.

This daguerreotype was used by Timothy Cole in making his famous woodcut for Scribners magazine in 1880. It has been well preserved and shows Poe full-face and carries out the popular conception of the appearance of this American poet.

Halloween Stories, Poems and Drawings for Junior Post Are Due Tomorrow

Work on Little Paper Helped Many Get Start in Art, Editor Learns

Dear Post Boys and Girls: Hurrah, hurrah, for Halloween, Halloween parties and the Halloween number of the Junior Post! Since Halloween comes between two Sundays we will have a Halloween number of the Junior Post next Sunday and print some of the stories, poems, and drawings on Halloween the following Sunday. If you have not sent in your contributions, put them 'n the mail at once because you have until noon tomorrow in which to do so.

The editor of the Junior Post is pleased to learn that some of the boys and girls who have been Junior Post writers but who have outgrown our little paper by reaching their eighteenth birthdays now are able to use the experience they gained as artists and writers on the Junior Post to help them earn money with which to continue their studies in art and writing.

Several Junior Post artists have entered art schools and are receiving the commendation of their teachers. They declare the opportunity to print their drawings in the Junior Post when they began to draw has been of great benefit to them.

The editor hopes the Junior Post artists and writers compare the work they send with the work that is published. If you keep sending pictures and they are not selected for publication, notice carefully the work that is published and you probably will find your own errors. The editor is very anxious that Junior Post writers notice the changes made in the stories. That is the way to learn to write. Do not keep on making the same mistakes. If your stories or poems are changed, study the changes.

Of course, errors in spelling are not changed but the entire stroy is listed not to be published. It is possible to send in stories with all the words spelled correctly. Learn to use a dictionary when you write. If you are uncertain of the way to spell a word, look it up.

The Junior Post does not accept stories about ghosts and haunted houses, or other unpleasant topics. There are so many nice things to write about, such as your school and home and playtime and the interesting events of the day. True stories are very desirable for such a paper as The Junior Post. We like news in our little paper just as much as the editors of the big Post. If you hear any news suitable for The Junior Post, and you think the readers of The Junior Post would like to read it, send it in. Let every Junior Post reader be a Junior Post reporter. If the story is particularly newsy and well written, a prize of $1 will be given for it. EDITOR JUNIOR POST.

The Constitution

On September 17, 1787, in Independence Hall in Philadelphia a draft of the Constitution of the United States was presented to the delegates for signature. These 55 delegates had come from 12 of the 13 States four months before for the purpose of forming a Constitution. Their work was now completed. Fifty-two of them signed. This copy of the Constitution is now kept at the Congressional Library, carefully guarded, where all may see it.

After the Revolution the States, although united, had been working more or less against each other, every State doing what it wanted regardless of how the others were affected. They could not go on like that for long. Something had to be done.

These men, among whom were Washington, Franklin, Madison, Hamilton and others almost as well known, had worked long and hard, trying to form a Constitution that would satisfy all, the North, the South and the East.

Finally, after several compromises between the large and small States in the matter of the number of representatives, and between the North and South in the matter of slaves, the Constitution was finished and ready for the States to ratify.

Delaware led the procession of States, ratifying December 7, 1787, and was joined by Pennsylvania six days later. The other States followed their example till all but North Carolina and Rhode Island had ratified. In November, 1789, North Carolina entered the procession, but Rhode Island, which had sent no delegates to the convention, held out till May 29, 1790.

When the first Congress met, six of the States had proposed 105 amendments for the Constitution. Out of these, ten, which seemed necessary, were chosen, voted on and added to the Constitution. Since then 10 other amendments have been added, making 20 in all.

When the Constitution was first proposed, the States, after having fought so bravely for independence, were doubtful about accepting a government which would control them so completely and fearful of losing their hard-won independence. This was a new and untried thing, which had been composed by a handful of men. They had the courage and foresight to try it out and thus paved the way for our great Nation today.

In School

In school we have the mostest fun,
We cut out pretty pictures,
And paste up posters, too,
We sew and dress up dollies.
Oh, we have lots to do.

A Fire

On the corner of Thirty-fifth street, New York City, stood a large apartment house with over 200 boarders. During the evening of January 1 two men were walking along the street talking excitedly.

One having a lighted cigarette, threw it into the open window of the apartment's basement on an oily rag. It was not long before a raging fire had started.

The long, thick smoke stifled the boarders so that many could not get out. Soon the fire engine came noisily along, bringing crowds of people with it. The firemen immediately began to rescue the people inside the burning building.

After 15 minutes of tedious labor the firemen thought every one was out, when they noticed a woman screaming: "Oh, my baby! My baby!"

No one dared look at another, every one realizing the terrible tragedy, because every one knew that no fireman could get inside the building, now raging with the terrible fire.

A boy of about 18 standing near dashed toward the burning building.

The people, white with terror, stood petrified as the boy pushed aside the firemen blocking the entrance and disappeared into the dark building.

On and on he went, forcing himself through the smoke and flames to the baby's room. He grabbed the baby and dashed out into the hall. But the smoke forced him to retreat. He fell exhausted, but pulled himself up and made his way out and fell unconscious on the sidewalk. When he regained consciousness he made an attempt to avoid the crowd, but was too exhausted.

He received a gold medal for his bravery and he was a very proud boy.

If the brave boy had not been there this baby's life would have been destroyed and been the cause of a broken heart for the mother of this innocent babe.

This fire, which not only endangered people's lives but destroyed property and helped to destroy the beauty of the city, was caused by carelessness.

Nine out of ten big fires are caused by carelessness, and every one can help in many ways to prevent such fires.

President Roosevelt proclaimed "Fire Prevention Week" in order to impress upon the minds of the children the dangers and sorrows caused by fire started by carelessness. So I ask you in the name of the President of the United States to be careful and try in every way to prevent fires.

In the Editor's Letter Box

Dear Editor: I want to thank you so much for the dollar I received. I was very grateful for it. Inclosed you will find a story on Halloween, which I hope will be worthy of publication. My, our Junior Post sure is growing! Respectfully yours,
MARJORIE DUVALL.

Dear Editor: I was very much pleased to find my drawing published, since I am just a newcomer to The Junior Post ranks. I am inclosing another strip, and am hard at work on a drawing for Halloween. Sincerely yours,
MERWYN N. M'KNIGHT, JR.,
406 Hollywood place,
Clarendon, Va.

Dear Editor: I am a weekly reader of The Junior Post and enjoy it very much. I have had a story of mine published in it, I am proud to say. I am sending a story in now, as it is Fire Prevention Week, and hope you will give it your kind consideration, and if it meets with your approval have it published. Thanking you for your kindness, yours truly,
AGNES LATCHFORD (age 13),

Dear Editor: I am a steady reader of The Junior Post and have had some work of mine published in it, I am proud to say. I find The Junior Post very interesting to read and I am sending in a story which I hope you will give your kind consideration. Sincerely yours,
AGNES LATCHFORD,
3520 Thirty-fifth street,
Mount Rainier, Md.

Dear Editor: We have recently subscribed to The Washington Post, and I am especially interested in The Junior Post section. I like to write verses and enjoy reading those other girls and boys have written. I am sending you two of my poems, one on Halloween and one on Thanksgiving. Both were written last year when I was 9 years old. I hope you can find room for one of them. My birthday is November 1, the day after Halloween, and I will then be 11 years old. This typewriter is my birthday gift.

Dear Editor: I am inclosing a letter to Ding-How and a story. I am 10 years old and go to the Chevy Chase Elementary School. Sincerely yours. HELEN GREEN, 10 Quincy street, Chevy Chase, Md.

Dear Editor: Thanks for awarding me the "cartoon prize" last Sunday. Inclosed you will find three Halloween drawings. I have worked hard on them, so hope to have them published. Sincerely yours
FRANCES HOLMES (age 14).
110 Virginia avenue, Jefferson Park, Alexandria, Va.

Dear Editor: Inclosed is my contribution for the Halloween number of The Junior Post. I hope I have sent it in early enough so that it may have a chance for publication in competition with the many other Halloween contributions I'm almost sure your desk is stacked up with. Thanks for publishing my other drawings. I'm not an artist and have no talent whatever in art but I sometimes enjoy making silhouettes and other easy drawings. I am interested more in prose and poetry. Sincerely yours, with regards to Ding-How and my best wishes for the success of The Junior Post.

The Pets' Corner.

Edited by Ding-How of Hydegree, (Mascot of The Junior Post).

Bow, wow, wow, wow! Lots of news today. We went out to the country home for members of the Dog Family, the Pony Family and the Cat Family and their cousins. What a good time we had! On the way we saw Mr. Diogenes Turtle 2d, making his weary way along looking for employment. Of course, as the Diogenes family always does, he was looking for an honest man.

I thought he might be useful, so we brought him back to be the lookout in our garden, so we will be able to tell when anything interesting happens in our neighborhood suitable for the Junior Post. Mr. Diogenes is a born lookout, for he carries his little shell watch-tower with him everywhere he goes.

Meets Girl Editor.

But more about our trip to the country. The driver said she was an editor but look as hard as I could I never saw a single eyeglass—and whoever heard of an editor without eyeglasses? Why I keep talking about mine all the time even when I do not have them on, just to let everybody know I am an editor. Perhaps she can run a typewriter better than she can an automobile, although I must be impartial in my editorial manner and acknowledge we did get there and back.

We did get stalled right on a steep upgrade on a rough byroad. I thought it would be a good time to get out and walk.

Mr. Tweet Canary says that, while we are talking of country homes, he has a pretty good one just now and he is not going to accept the invitation of Mr. and Mrs. Black Bird to go South for the winter with them. Well, I guess Mr. Tweet likes his golden bungalow pretty well in this climate.

Saucy White Dog up the street cocked one ear at me as I came along. Of course, I did not say anything, but it hardly seems right for Saucy to be tearing up a lady's perfectly good brown felt hat on the pavement or anywhere else for that matter.

Mr. and Mrs. Squirrel Active.

I have just been reading all those nice letters the pets that live with Ellen Beatty in Savage, Md., have been sending to The Pets' Corner. I will have to lock up my typewriter so Hop Toy Pekingese and Sandy Orkney. Terrier Gordon can not make it spell wrong and go out to see Ellen and other members of the Pets' Corner at Savage.

Mr. and Mrs. Squirrel just telephoned they were too busy for anything. They believe in preparedness and are putting in quite a few nuts for the cold weather. Well, even an editor likes nuts, if they are cracked for him.

I guess we will have a Halloween party at our house with yellow frosted cake and yellow ice cream and big bright pumpkin faces all around.

---

Bow, wow, wow! Mrs. Yellow Cat and Mrs. Black Cat are going to give a party on October 31 and they are going to have Mrs. Owl and her family with them. I can give a Halloween party myself, because an editor can do anything, even though he is not a black cat, a yellow cat or an Owl. The family of an editor knows how to make pumpkin jack-o'-lanterns better than any of the Cat family or the Owl family.

Meggie White Scottie says she is going to have a jack-o'-lantern herself and just scare Sistie and Buzzie a lot. Of course, those White House children will not be scared, for they know a jack-o'-lantern made out of pumpkin when they meet one.

Anyway, we are going to have ice cream and candy popcorn and a great big cake with yellow frosting and yellow candles right in the middle of the table. Hop Toy says he is coming and Sandy Gordon says so, too. They can come, but they had better write some stories for the Pets' Corner, or I will not give them slices of cake.

I will have to see that the boys and girls on my street study their lessons. I have to lock up my typewriter all the time to keep them from writing on it because they make it spell wrong.

Murphy Fox Terrier Aitchison is jumping about a lot these days because he has learned a new tune. He has no business with it because he overheard the Interstate Commerce Choir singing it and took it away from them, without giving them a single bone for it.

Marsh and Kimball can sing. They are engaging little boys and everybody looks after them, because they are twins. I guess I will have to introduce them to Mr. and Mrs. Red Bird, who sing in the willow trees back of our house.

The Demure Little Miss who is coming to town pretty soon with Sandy Scottie for the winter will find lots of things to do. The sidewalk in front of her house is all ready for roller skating, and how that little girl can roller skate. I hear she knows some songs, too.

Mr. Tweet Canary is singing a lot these days, too. He has to sing a farewell song to all his cousins who fly right past his golden bungalow on their way to the South for the winter.

Mr. Tweet is talking about giving a party again in his golden bungalow. But, of course, he never does, for he would find his home quite crowded with Mr. and Mrs. Bald Headed Eagle and Polly Doak and Old Soak Stimson and all the Pigeon family on his visiting list.

Mr. Pigeon, who went to the ball game, has been in here trying to get his name in the paper. He got enough publicity, so I guess I will save the space for somebody else who does not get in so much.

New York.

Ho-hum, my, what a relief to get off of that old train after traveling all night long! It was early in the morning when we first came to New Jersey. We grabbed our baggage and hustled off the train so as to make the ferry.

Many other people were already on the ferry when we arrived. Every one seemed so tired and exhausted and that is certainly the way we felt, too. As we were moving across the Hudson River to New York we could see the skyline of the metropolis of the United States in the distance. It was not so clear as it might have been because it was a cloudy morning.

When we arrived in New York we had to clean up before starting on our day's travel. Everything was calm and quiet as it was early Sunday morning. We went on the subways and then took a ride on the double-decker bus. We could see so much of New York, sitting way up in the air. I looked back at all of the tall buildings and they certainly did look pretty. We rode past Central Park and all along the Hudson River.

After our long ride, we decided to have lunch. We sighted an automat cafeteria and since we never had been in one, we were all anxious to eat there. It was fun buying our lunch there because everything was automatic.

After lunch we rode on the subway to Coney Island. We did not go in the water because of the crowds. It was a very hot day and it seemed as though every one in New York came there. We took pictures of the Statue of Liberty, and what we saw of it was very interesting.

We returned to the city. The thing we all had been looking forward to had now come, to visit the skyscrapers. We went inside the Empire State Building and it was simply marvelous. We saw Wall street and it looked like I thought it would.

That night we went in the new Radio City Theater. I have never seen such a large and gorgeous theater in my life. After the show (which was about 11:30) we went to Times Square. The lights were beautiful. The Empire State Building and stores looked so pretty at night. The advertisements were huge.

We were very tired after our long day, but we enjoyed everything.

I shall never forget New York.

The Story Book Lady.

"Story Book Lady, Story Book Lady!" shouted little Jack, "let's ride on the magic carpet again this week."

The Story Book Lady laughed. She knew that the new pastime of riding about Story Book Land on a magic carpet would interest her young friends of The Junior Post very much. The number of children had increased because all of them had read about the magic carpet in last week's Junior Post and were eager for a ride on it.

"Very well, boys and girls," she said, "but hold on tightly. We do not want to lose any of our boys and girls through carelessness."

"We will, we will!" replied the children in unison.

"Wait for us, wait for us!" said wee voices at the Story Book Lady's side. She looked down and there were the Story Book Land Elf children, Merry and Jolly, smiling up at her.

"Where shall we go at first?" asked the Story Book Lady.

"I'll lead the way," said a shining fairy as she came up in a golden chrysanthemum airplane and joined the children.

"Goody, goody!" cried little Marian, clapping her hands with joy, "here is the Story Book Fairy Queen. Now we will find some fine book streets. Of that I feel certain."

Away they started, everyone clinging tightly to the magic carpet and glancing down to see all the sights below them. Over rivers and hills and towns the magic carpet flew very, very fast until it came to a beautiful land where the grass was very, very green and the sky very, very blue.

"Oh, it is Bunlahy," exclaimed the Story Book Lady. "See 'The Big Tree of Bunlahy.' There is Padraic Colum, the famous author, and he is writing a story about it for the MacMillan Co., of New York."

"What is the name of that old man with his scarlet coat and his dog?" asked Jim.

"That is old Simon, the huntsman," responded the Story Book Lady, "and there is Grace, the shoemaker's daughter. All of them have good stories to tell to you children. Let's gather about them for a time."

The children enjoyed that book street so much. Finally some one said: "We can not stay here all the time." So up went the magic carpet and it kept on moving until it came to a land where all the barns were a bright blue.

"Look at that group of 'Blue Barns," Mary said. "And see the two big geese and the seven little ducks following the geese. Helen Sewell has written a nice story about this, too, and the MacMillan Co., of New York, has made a beautiful book out of it."

Down the book street the children ran, stopping here and there to pat the little ducks, to gaze open-eyed at a big goose and to peep into the Blue Barns.

"Sorry," said the Story Book Lady, "we can not wait any longer. We must visit another book street before we return to the offices of The Junior Post." So back came the magic carpet flying high over the land until it reached a spot where there were no houses at all, but all woods and open country.

The boys were much excited when they leaned far over the edge of the carpet and saw a great stag running with great strides over the hills.

"It is 'The King of the Hills,'" declared Charlie, "and Stephen W. Meader has written a fine book about him, and Harcourt Brace & Co., of New York, have printed it. Breck and Townsend have a fine game trying to photograph the King of the Hills, but he is a little too spry for them. But they managed to capture the gangsters who wanted to shoot the deer and sell them to hunters who could not bag any of them for themselves."

"Thanks, Charlie," said the Story Book Lady. "All aboard, boys and girls, we have just time to reach The Junior Post offices by press time." And off the magic carpet moved with the children waving and shouting good-by at the King of the Hills as they departed.

The Poet's Gift.

The Poet's gift is not described in greatness.
Thus much for this, in that the other great,
Each foully measured in the common pate.
That for antiquity, the other lateness;
He is not trite aspirer; mark him fateless.
Rather than thus far risen in estate;
Such splittings hopeless give arise to hate,
Whilst the true Poet ever must be hateless.

he Poet need not write, if he but love,
Vith love that's absolute, not indignation;
e need not love, if only he can prove e would have loved, granted his loving ration, nd sings that ever on this earth shall move
he Master Poet, Father of Creation!

Just Think!

Just think of the birds, and the songs they sing;
Just think of the flowers and the joy they bring;
Just think of the grass, and the way it grows;
Just think of the wind and how it blows!
Just think of the mountains and how high they are;
Just think of the deserts that are so dry and far;
Just think of the moon, that is round like a ball;
Just think of the rain and how it falls;
Just think of the night and the stars so bright;
Just think of the day, with plenty of light;
Just think of the trees on the mountain side;
Just think of the world, that is so far and wide;
Just think of the people that are short and tall;
Just think of the one who made them all.

The Junior Post Airship

The Junior Post Airship soared high above the National Capital and headed in the direction of Frederick, Md., one day last week as it started out on its weekly tour of the world for the benefit of The Junior Post boys and girls.

"Why are you going this way?" inquired the editor of the pilot.

"Following the President," yelled back the pilot. His motor was making such a noise it was hard for him to hear anything.

And the editor looked over the side of the cockpit. Sure enough, below them was a shining White House car and in it was the President, his secretaries and some friends.

"The President enjoys an outing, too," mused the editor to himself. "Strange, he is driving along the same way as Braddock once marched in colonial days when he was fighting with the Indians."

Few people remember the things that happened years ago, but Washington is a place where nearly every foot of the land has some historical memory attached to it, and it is well for The Post boys and girls to remember this and try to identify these spots.

By this time The Junior Post Airship was flying very rapidly and the Maryland hills were soon left behind.

"That's Christopher Morley," said the editor as the plane flew over Haverford, Pa. "That man in a cap and gown. He is about to get a degree from that college which is celebrating the 100th anniversary of its founding this week." The pilot looked down. Degrees did not bother him very much, but he had read some of Mr. Morley's stories and essays and that made him eager to see him.

"Due west," shouted the pilot as the plane turned toward the land of the setting sun. When it reached Los Angeles a flock of canaries flew up to investigate. They were trick canaries and had been trained by Mrs. Edna Long and they did many tricks on the wings of the airship, making both the pilot and the editor laugh.

Nearby was Hollywood and as The Junior Post Airship flew over that screen city the pilot pointed at a young lad posing before a camera. "That's the son of Pancho Villa, the Mexican bandit," he called back. "Takes all his excitement out in movies instead of revolutions."

Pancho, jr., was a nice looking lad and did not seem to be eager to do anything rash and—wonder of wonders—he did not carry a gun. His father, the Mexican bandit, always carried a revolver or two and that may be the reason he got into so much trouble.

"There's the college of aquaplaning," the editor pointed out as the airship flew over Catalina Island, Calif.

"My, that's a fine kind of school," the pilot laughed. They gazed down at the students riding on their aquaplanes. The surf was high and it was lots of sport. No doubt, any boy would like to go to that college.

On and on the plane flew until at last they reached New Guinea and watched Dr. Margaret Mean, of the American Museum of Natural History taking pictures of the natives, The pilot, who cares a great deal about good food, expressed a wish to have some of the huge coconuts piled up near the native huts.

"Too far away, Jack," warned the editor. "Even that fish line will not help you."

"There's cherry pie for supper at home," the pilot consoled himself. And so there was. And how he did enjoy it after the hours of flying back to the City of Washington in the United States of America.

The Hurricane

The ship tossed restlessly in the storm. The thunder roared and the flash of lightning was enough to blind anyone. The high waves which washed up on the decks nearly swept the steward, who was hurrying to the captain's cabin, off his feet.

In another part of the ship a cabin door opened. A young girl, barely 19, covered with a rubber slicker and cap, stepped out on the swaying deck. Suddenly the ship gave such a roll that the girl would have been swept away by the high waves which pounded the deck, if it hadn't been for the steward, who caught her just in time.

"Better go back to your cabin, miss," he said. "This is no place for you. A hurricane is coming up and you better be ready in case we have to get in the lifeboats."

"A hurricane!" gasped the girl. "How terrible. No, I won't go back as I must see the captain immediately." And before the astonished steward could stop her, she had pulled away from his grasp and was hurrying in the direction of the captain's office. The girl knocked on the cabin door. A voice from within told her to come in. Opening the door she stepped into the captain's cabin. Looking up from his papers he smiled at her.

"How do you do, Miss Stanely? What can I do for you now?" asked the captain.

"Captain, is it true that we are running into a hurricane?" asked Besty Stanely.

"Who told you that, miss?" asked the captain.

"A steward, sir," answered the girl. "Isn't it true?"

"Well, to tell you the truth, miss," answered the captain, "we are running into a hurricane of some sort. I wanted to keep it quiet from the passengers for a while until we were sure whether it was going to be a bad storm or not. But do not worry, miss," he suddenly said, for the girl began to appear worried.

"If the storm proves to be a bad one I am sure the ship will come through safely, for it has been through worse storms than this and has never been damaged yet; so you just go right back to your cabin and do not worry. If it is necessary to get into the lifeboats I'll let you know."

"Thank you, captain," said the girl. "I'll try not to worry." And without a word she turned and left the cabin. But she did not go back to her cabin. Instead she stood out on the deck, holding to one of the poles, watching the storm. The storm was growing worse every minute, so she decided to go back to her cabin.

Later on, about midnight, Besty was awakened by shouts and cries of the passengers. Besty knew the ship was sinking fast, for the storm was doing much damage to it. Hurriedly she put on her clothes and rubber slicker and hurried to join the group of people who were ready to get into the lifeboats. As she stepped on the deck the ship gave a roll and sent her sprawling against the railing. The ship was sinking very fast, and the water was halfway to the decks. Looking at the crowded boats and then peering through the darkness, she managed to catch glimpses of lights not far away. Besty knew that land wasn't so far away. So, bracing herself on the railing, she dived into the ocean.

The sun beat fiercely upon the sand. Besty had crawled out of that raging sea and, with a prayer of thanks, had dropped down upon the beach and fell asleep until morning.

Roosevelt and the Great Outdoors.

(Awarded $1.)

One of the things I admired most in Theodore Roosevelt was his love for the great outdoors. Never was he as happy as when tramping through the country, making himself acquainted with all the birds and animals that he chanced to meet. The happiest days of his life probably were spent in Africa hunting wild animals. During his winters in Washington he became a familiar figure in Rock Creek Park—then but a bit of undeveloped woods. The passerby could get a glimpse of him almost any Sunday tramping along with his happy family and the "spress" wagon. This "spress" wagon, as the children called it, was always taken along in case one of the younger members became tired and desired a ride. Through these hikes "Teddy" instilled into the hearts of his children his own love for Mother Nature.

Roosevelt's love for nature induced him to travel a great deal, and it was in this way that he became aware of our great natural resources. One of the first steps he took when he became President was the conservation of our national resources. The Nation did not seem to know that we were ruining and bankrupting ourselves as fast as we could. Little did they realize that this globe was the capital stock of the race. It was so much coal and oil and gas. This may be economized or wasted. The same thing was true of phosphates and other mineral resources. Our water resources were immense, and we were only beginning to use them. Our forests had been destroyed; they must be restored. Our soils were being depleted; they must be built up and conserved.

These ideas of Roosevelt were dinned into the ears of the Nation until the Nation heeded. He held these things so high that not only our people but the people of neighboring nations of the continent began to take notice.

This great work was inspiring and actually the beginning of a world movement for staying terrestrial waste and saving for the human race the things upon which a great and peaceful and progressive life can be founded. What statesman in all history has done anything more lofty?

Baby Talk

Oh, you precious little thing,
What can you be doing?
Land alive! Why, it's the lining
Of your buggy that you're chewing.

Naughty, naughty! Mustn't, dear;
Shouldn't try to suck your sock.
Let me lift you, sweet, you're slipping.
Oh, I gave your head a knock!

I'm so sorry, little sister,
Let me kiss the lump.
I think that you're mostly frightened—
Not that you got such a bump.

What on earth will hush your crying?
Oh, I know—the radio.
Hear the pretty music, baby?
Now it's calmed you—I thought so.

So it goes—week in, week out;
She can be such a bother,
But still she's very well-behaved—
Much more so than a brother.

This infant sister is so cute,
So dimply are her smiles,
That many an admirer
Has submitted to her wiles.

A single silver curly lock,
Plump face of rosy hue,
A little rounded "pug" nose,
And her eyes of lovely blue.

Little sister, if I e'er
A real true cherub see,
I'll feel that it can never hold
A candle, dear, to thee.

Theodore Roosevelt

Theodore Roosevelt was the twenty-sixth President of the United States. He was born in New York City. He was a delicate child, so he was educated at home and out of doors rather than at school. From this time on he became a strong, active, vigorous youth.

Theodore was graduated from Harvard in 1880. After returning from Europe he studied law a while. He soon left his studies and became engaged in politics, and in 1881 he was elected to the New York Legislature as an opponent of the Tammany Hall machine.

In 1897 he was appointed Assistant Secretary of the Navy, and his work was of great value in preparing the Navy for its work during the Spanish-American War.

He resigned in 1898 and was active in organizing the First United States Volunteer Cavalry, popularly known as Roosevelt's Rough Riders, of which he was made lieutenant colonel.

Against his expressed wishes he was nominated for Vice President of the United States for McKinley's second term and was elected in the fall of 1900.

Declining nomination for a third term, Mr. Roosevelt left for Africa immediately after the inauguration, where he remained for a year, hunting big game and gathering specimens for the Smithsonian Institution and the National Museum at Washington.

About three weeks before the election he was shot while in Milwaukee, Wis., on his way to address a political meeting. Mr. Roosevelt insisted on keeping his engagement and delivered his speech before receiving medical attention.

His chief writings are "The Winning of the West," 1889-1896; "Life of Thomas Hart Benton," 1887; "Life of Gouverneur Morris," 1888; "American Political Ideals," 1897, and "Theodore Roosevelt," an autobiography, 1913.

Grandma's Trunk

Grandma's trunk is a wonderful thing to me,
There's a beautiful picture of her first Christmas tree;
And dolls and books and clothes and toys,
Even pictures of her school-chum girls and boys.
Buttons and bracelets and beads and rings,
And all kinds of fancy things;
Ribbons and bonnets and locks of hair,
And even a round from the family chair.
Grandma's trunk has a lock with a key,
And she only opens it when she tells stories to me.
Her treasures have a story, every single one,
And with Grandma I always have hours of interesting fun.

Theodore Roosevelt.

(Awarded $1.)

Teddy Roosevelt was born in New York City October 27, 1858. He was the son of a wealthy New York merchant of unbroken Dutch descent, though his mother was a Georgian.

Teddy was pale, thin and nearsighted in his boyhood. He was fond of books and natural history. He was taught at home until he went to Harvard.

At the age of 14 he began to build up his body and in later years spent much time on a Dakota ranch, where he endured many hardships.

He married twice and had two daughters and four sons. The youngest one was killed in France.

In 1881 Roosevelt was elected to the Assembly of New York and in 1883-84-85 he served in the Legislature. When he was chairman of the committee on cities he introduced many reforms beneficial to the people of New York. He ran for mayor of New York in 1886, but lost. He was then appointed Republican member of the United States Civil Service. He was so honest and had so much ability he was greatly strengthened in the popular vote. May 1, 1895, he accepted the office of Police Commissioner of New York.

April 6, 1897, he was made Assistant Secretary of the Navy. While in this office he prepared the Navy for some splendid fighting.

From the men he met on the Dakota ranch he organized the Rough Riders, who did some brilliant fighting in Cuba.

September 27, 1898, he was nominated for Governor of New York. He won the election.

In the summer of 1900 he was nominated for Vice President on the Republican ticket to get him out of the reforms of New York.

September 14, 1901, he became President because of the death of President McKinley.

He served very well, and in 1904 he was elected President. He gave the country a vigorous administration, bettering the country very much.

He left for Africa and spent 15 months in hunting.

In the election of 1912 he sought the election because of his dislike for Taft.

He died January 6, 1919, at Oyster Bay, Long Island, N. Y.

He was an author, soldier, moralist, naturalist, explorer, and because of this he was unique among American Presidents and statesmen.

The STAMP ALBUM

Stamp fans who ponder over their collections of United States issues seldom think of the fact these stamps are made, for the most part, at least, right in the City of Washington—in the Bureau of Engraving and Printing, Uncle Sam's big workshops, where not only stamps, but paper money and Government bonds, are turned out in vast quantities.

Some people think stamps are printed. They are engraved—not printed.

The stamp rooms at the bureau are most fascinating to inspect. There is a marvelous machine that wets the paper, prints 400 stamps, gums and dries them, all in one operation. Later another machine picks them up, perforates them, up and down, crosswise, all at once. Girls in the same room make up stamp books, handling covers, waxed paper and stamps with skilled movements that make their hands seem almost like machines.

It takes three days to finish a stamp, as a general rule. The average output of the bureau is 90,000,000 stamps daily.

On October 31 an experimental flight is scheduled to start from Amsterdam to Batavia, Dutch Indies. Two of the best known Dutch flyers, Ayes and Geysendorfer, will pilot a special plane in an attempt to make the flight in three and a half days going east and two and a half days returning westward.

The present normal air mail time is about eight or ten days. Two special 30 cent air mail stamps will be issued, one for the flight from Amsterdam and one for the return flight from Batavia.

In the Indian Ocean, about 400 miles east of the Island of Madagascar, lies the French colony of Reunion. Formerly variously known as Mascarenhas, Bourbon and Ile Bonaparte, its present name was made official in 1848 and the first stamps appeared four years later.

---

A new pictorial series will be issued next year, dealing with the Philippine Herald. The set will consist of 14 values and replace the regular series which have been in use for many years. Upon the 2 cents will be the portrait of Dr. Jose Rizal. The statuesque figure of a woman carrying palay cuttings standing by a carabao represents Philippine agriculture upon the 4 cents. Upon the 6 cents a charming Filipino girl is carrying flowers, while upon the 8 cents is an interesting native group of pearl fishers.

Fort Santiago is pictured upon the 10 cents and the Salt Spring in Salinas, Nueva Vizcaya, is upon the 12 cents. The 16 cents shows the historical scene of Magellan's landing and upon the 20 cents is Juan de la Cruz.

Rice terraces are upon the 28 cents, and the historical Blood Compact is commemorated upon the 30 cents. The 1p. shows the interesting old Barasoain Church in a setting of huge trees, and the Battle of Manila Bay will bring a thrill upon the 2p. Probably the most beautiful design of the series is the Montalbin Gorge which will be upon the 4p.

For the first time there is to be a 5p. stamp, and this is to carry a picture of Washington on his famous white horse. The stamps will be large and have been designed by four of the best known Filipino artists.

The new stamp, which depicts various Byrd flights, was suggested and directed by President Roosevelt. First Assistant Postmaster General Joseph C. O'Mahoney stated that Mr. Roosevelt rejected the first design submitted to him, owing to an error in the point depicted as the landing spot of Byrd's transatlantic flight. The original design had Byrd landing on the Bay of Biscay, rather than in the English Channel, off France, as now correctly illustrated on the new stamp.

"To me the most interesting thing about the whole affair is the establishing of a postoffice in the Ice Age for the first time in history," said Admiral Byrd. A few days after these ceremonies had taken place, John Oliver LaGorce received his commission as postmaster at the Little America office, near the South Pole.

Our Own Team

Just this past year a certain young man, one whom every man, woman and child admired and respects, was called upon to manage a group of ball players. This boy had dreams, hopes and ambitions like any other man of his years might have, and almost immediately these dreams came true. The one name that comes to your mind in a flash is Joe Cronin.

People, renowned writers of the sports' world, said Joe would not make good, but he has. I know that every Washingtonian is truly proud of the "boy manager." And he deserves credit.

Few really know of the trials and cares that have presented themselves to Joe Cronin. The task as manager of a baseball team is not an easy one. At every turn someone waits, encouraging little, criticizing freely.

And then the players must be urged on in their work and encouraged to do their best.

But Joe Cronin placed himself on an equal level with his teammates. Others said that perhaps he would change with his higher position. But no, our Joe Cronin remained the same eager and determined young shortstop. He kept the same attitude toward his fellow players.

By sheer grit he encouraged the Nats and urged them on to victory and the American League Pennant.

With the world series, the struggle for the world's championship became more intense with every game played. But Lady Luck chanced to favor the New York Giants with her winning smile, and the Senators, the best of sports, took the defeat with a broad grin.

Now the baseball season has ended and we must wait until next year when the battle is renewed. But let us give a cheer for the courageous spirit and good sportsmanship of the Washington Nationals. Hurrah!

The Yellow Bird.

I like the yellow bird because of his pretty feathers;
I am sure they are much prettier than any of the others.
Oh, such a pretty little fellow,
Feathers all so smooth and yellow.

I think the yellow bird's awful sweet
Because he eats insects that would destroy corn and wheat.
I have heard a robin or a mockingbird sing all day long,
But no bird sings as sweet music as the yellow bird's song.

I've often watched them take a bath
Just beside the garden path.
Their feathers are so soft like down
That they look like a queen without a crown.

I love to sit out under the pine tree
And listen to them singing to you and me.
Of course, there are bluebirds, tiny and small,
But I love the yellow bird best of all.

On a pretty, sunshiny day
They'd perch on a bush from me a little way
And greet me with their happy song
That they sing to me all day long.

Of course, bluebirds and robins and sparrows' songs I've heard,
But no song is as pretty as the little yellow bird's.
Oh, pretty little yellow bird,
Your sweet, sweet song I've often heard.

A Little Dog and Cat

One day a little dog and cat,
On a little window sat.
They talked about their masters kind,
About the pups who always whined.
"We'll both go back and see them,"
Said the little dog and cat,
"And again we'll have a softer place,
Right on the old floor mat.
We'll always have our food on time,
And never be guilty of any crime."

They journeyed far; looked left and right.
And what do you think was barely in sight?
Their master true, with presents new!

The next morning the little dog and cat,
On their little carpets sat,
They were very happy as you could see
For again with their masters they could be."

The name of a country is concealed in each sentence, but it is spelled backward.

1. I hope Alma is going to the party.
2. Persia is surrounded by hostile armies.
3. The caribou repeated his hoarse call.
4. I took some ham, an apple and some bread.
5. America finally came to aid Nicaragua.

Stars.

I like stars.
They see everything,
And hear everything,
And know everything,
But they don't tell anything—
They just wink at you.
They know just when to come out,
And when to go in,
And when to hide behind the clouds
When it is raining,
And they don't say a word.
I like stars. Don't you?

VIRGINIA FRENCH (age 13).

Mosquitoes

One of man's deadliest insect foes is the mosquito. There are many varieties of mosquitoes in America, all troublesome and some dangerous. The female mosquito is the one that sings and bites. The male is said to feed on the sweets of flowers.

On this continent thousands of people have died of malaria and yellow fever, both carried by the mosquito. But this is as nothing compared to the havoc they have wrought in India, where in a single year the death toll from malaria alone reached the 5,000,000 mark.

People first noticed that malaria and yellow fever were most common in low-lying, swampy places and it was first thought that they came from breathing poisonous fumes that rose from the ground. Later scientists began to doubt this and brave men devoted their lives to solve the problem.

Dr. Ross spent many months of study in India. He examined hundreds of mosquitoes and after meeting with many disappointments found in a single anopheles mosquito the tiny organism that caused the trouble. He made a study of that species of mosquito and was soon able to tell the story of the mischief that it does.

When the anopheles mosquito bites a person who is ill with malaria, along with the blood it sucks up the germs, which multiply rapidly and spread through its veins and tissues. Numbers of them gather in the poison gland of the mosquito so that when it bites another person the parasites are forced into the wound and reach the blood, where they create a poison and cause malaria.

A few years after Dr. Ross began his work in India, Maj. Reed went to Cuba to study the cause of yellow fever. Dr. Reed and his assistants allowed themselves to be bitten, and some of them died, but they proved without doubt that yellow fever is carried from one person to another by the stegomyia mosquito.

After discovering the cause of these diseases, these great men set to work to find a remedy. They found if the lives of men, women and children were to be saved that the spread of these diseases had to be prevented and to do this it was very necessary to get the mosquito under control.

Various means of combating them have been adopted, such as draining marshy lands, introducing fish into the water that feed upon the "wrigglers" and covering the surface of standing water with kerosene. The kerosene method has proved the most effective. When the "wrigglers" come to the surface to breathe the oil gets into their breathing tubes and they are killed.

Gen. William C. Gorgas, as chief sanitary officer of Havana, Cuba, by his efficient method of direction and control in the fight against yellow fever, finally accomplished the practical elimination of that disease from the port of Havana.

When we consider that the female mosquito can lay two or three hundred eggs at a time and then figure the number of living pests we have seen in one evening it can readily be seen how rapidly they can develop and in what numbers increase if their breeding places are allowed to remain. Mosquitoes lay their eggs in standing water. In from a few hours to a day, depending upon the temperature and surrounding conditions, the eggs open and what we call "wrigglers" come out and can be seen in the water in which the eggs have developed, as tiny, slender living bodies one-eighth inch in length.

In five to seven more days the "wrigglers" become "tumblers." In another five to seven days the covering of the head of the "tumblers" cracks and the fully developed adult winged mosquito comes out, and in the case of the female of the species flies off ready to annoy and bite.

Mosquitoes will breed indoors as well as outside. If you are careless large crops of mosquitoes develop and annoy you and your neighbor by bites, disturbing your comfort, preventing rest and sleep and subjecting you to malaria and yellow fever if you are in a district where these diseases are known to exist.

It is most important then if our health as well as the health of our neighbor is to be safeguarded that we must be clean in our habits and allow no place for these mischievous little insects to breed.

Mysterious Island

"Mysterious Island," by Jules Verne, is not a new book, but readers will get as many thrills out of it as out of any recent book.

The title is a good one. There is an island (in the South Seas), and the unexpected happenings to five castaways will keep your nose in the book until it is read. (Now, Mr. Printer, please don't make that "red.")

There is a mysterious being (who, I won't tell) who guides and helps the castaways, destroys a shipload of blood-thirsty pirates just in the nick of time, and finally reveals itself.

You will learn a lot of natural history, science and geography from the book, too.

I think one can get this lesson from the story of "Mysterious Island"—that the persons who are in bad circumstances, but who try earnestly and hard to improve their lot, will be more apt to find those to help them than persons who sit and whine about their poor lot.

THE GUMPS
RIGHT, PARDNER- FOLKS'LL THINK WE'RE MOVIN' THE U.S. MINT WHEN WE HAUL THIS LOAD INTO TOWN-
IT'S ALL HERE- SHERIFF- A REGULAR BONANZA- YOU'D BETTER RIDE BACK TO TOWN FOR A WAGON- WE'VE GOT A REAL LOAD HERE-
SIDNEY SMITH
AND SO SHERIFF WATTS LEAPS INTO THE SADDLE AND GALLOPS OFF TO TOWN- THE HUGE GOLD SHIPMENT STOLEN BY RED RIGGLES' BAND IN THE TRAIN ROBBERY HAS BEEN LOCATED AT LAST- WITH THE AID OF THE TREASURE CHART WHICH CHESTER AND JERRY SNATCHED FROM THE HAT-BANDS OF THE BANDIT GANG- THE TWO BOYS FINALLY LOCATED THE SECRET HIDING PLACE OF THE ROBBERS' LOOT- AND HERE TOO IS THE MONEY STOLEN IN A DOZEN OTHER ROBBERIES-I CAN'T WAIT TILL MY FATHER HEARS ABOUT THIS-
A REAL GUMP, MY BOY!
AND IS COUSIN CHARLEY TICKLED WITH CHESTER? YOU BET HE IS- THE LITTLE TENDERFOOT FROM BACK EAST HAS SUCCEEDED WHERE HALF A DOZEN SHERIFFS' POSSES AND A TROUP OF RANGERS HAVE FAILED-
$10,000.00 REWARD FOR THE CAPTURE OF RED RIGGLES AND HIS GANG- DEAD OR ALIVE- $5,000.00 REWARD FOR INFORMATION LEADING TO THE ARREST OF RED RIGGLES
THE BIG REWARD- HERE IS THE NOTICE THAT CHESTER AND JERRY SAW NAILED TO A TREE- WITH THE ROBBERS CAPTURED AND THE LOOT RECOVERED- THE BOYS HAVE A CHANCE TO SHARE IN ALL THIS MONEY-
WHOOPEE! WHAT A HAUL! HATS OFF TO CHESTER AND JERRY-
MEANWHILE- SHERIFF WATTS IS GALLOPING OVER GULLEY AND GULCH AT BREAKNECK SPEED- WHOOPING WITH JOY AT THE THOUGHT OF SENDING RED RIGGLES TO JAIL AND RESTORING ALL THAT CASH TO THE RIGHTFUL OWNERS-
EVERY STROKE OF THE SHOVEL SENDS A SHOWER OF GOLD PIECES FLYING, AS OLD COUSIN CHARLEY DIGS TO THE BOTTOM OF THE BIG GOLD CACHE- CHESTER AND JERRY ARE KEPT BUSY AS TWO LITTLE ANTS, SCURRYING AFTER THE COINS, SO THAT NOT A SINGLE CENT OF THE PRECIOUS METAL WILL BE LOST-
THEY CERTAINLY WERE RECKLESS WITH THEIR LOOSE CHANGE- THEY SCATTERED THIS MONEY LIKE RAISINS IN A PIE-
I'D LIKE TO HAVE A PILE OF THIS IN MY BACK YARD JUST TO PLAY WITH-THE OLD FORTY-NINERS WOULD BLUSH IF THEY SAW THIS- CHARLEY-
I WOULDN'T MIND JUST HAVING THIS SACK FULL FOR A RAINY DAY-
GENTLY THERE- CERTAINLY FEELS LIKE THIS CHEST IS FULL OF HARD CASH-
LET HER COME- UNCLE SAM IS SURE GOING TO BE GLAD TO SEE ALL THIS HOARDED MONEY BACK OUT IN CIRCULATION-
LOOK HERE! THIS MUST BE THE MONEY THEY GOT IN THE BIG PAY-ROLL STICK-UP LAST SPRING-
AND TAKE A SQUINT AT THOSE STOCKS AND BONDS! THOSE ARE THE SECURITIES THEY STOLE WHEN THEY HELD UP THE STATE BANK-
WELL, BOYS- HERE SHE IS- THE OLD STAGE COACH IS READY FOR ONE MORE TRIP, WITH THE BIGGEST LOAD OF GOLD THAT'S EVER BEEN HAULED OVER THESE MOUNTAINS- PILE IT IN, SHE'S ALL READY-
YOU CAN TAKE A VACATION NOW, SHERIFF- WE'VE SOLVED ALL THE ROBBERIES FOR THE LAST FIVE YEARS-
FAME, FORTUNE AND GLORY
CHESTER CAN SCARCELY WAIT TO GET BACK TO SILVER CREEK- TO GET BACK TO HIS MAMA AND PAPA AGAIN- AND TO TELL THE BOYS BACK HOME ABOUT HIS EXCITING ADVENTURES- IT WON'T BE LONG NOW FOR THE PROUDEST LITTLE BOY IN THE WORLD-
AND ALL THE TIME- WHAT OF RED RIGGLES AND HIS BAND OF ROBBERS?
WITH COUSIN CHARLEY'S LONG RIFLE SLUNG OVER THE TOP OF THE OLD STAGE COACH AND SHERIFF WATTS BESIDE HIM, CRACKING THAT BIG WHIP, WHAT A THRILL IT WAS FOR CHESTER TO DRIVE THOSE FOUR SPIRITED HORSES BACK TOWARD SILVER CREEK- JUST LIKE THE THRILLING DAYS OF THE OLD WILD WEST, COME TO LIFE AGAIN

Gasoline Alley

I'M GOIN ON A HIKE WITH UNCLE WALT.
TOO BAD.
BUT YOU'VE GOT TO HUMOR 'EM ONCE IN A WHILE.
SKEEZIX, IT'S TIME FOR OUR ANNUAL TRIP THROUGH THE AUTUMN WOODS. I HATE TO MISS IT.
SO WOULD I BUT WE HAVE TO GO FURTHER EVERY TIME, UNCLE WALT, TO FIND THE WOODS.
YES, MAN SEEMS TO HAVE AN IRRESISTIBLE DESIRE TO CHANGE THE FACE OF NATURE— LIFT IT, AS IT WERE.
ISN'T THE SUN GLORIOUS! THERE IS CERTAINLY SOME EXCUSE FOR THE OLD SUN WORSHIPPERS.
SURE
WHY NOT, WHEN HE FURNISHES ALL WE GET TO EAT AND WEAR— AND ALL THIS GORGEOUS COLOR.
I THOUGHT THE FROST MADE THE COLOR.
YOU'RE PARTLY RIGHT BUT I THINK THEY WORK TOGETHER
I THINK THE SUN WANTS TO KEEP THE LEAVES GREEN AN' THE FROST WANTS TO TURN 'EM RED.
HOWEVER, WITHOUT THE SUN WE'D NEVER SEE THE COLOR.
WE COULD SEE IT IN THE MOONLIGHT.
MOONLIGHT HAS IT'S OWN BEAUTY, BUT IT ISN'T THE BEAUTY OF RIOTOUS COLOR.
BESIDES THERE WOULDN'T BE MOONLIGHT WITHOUT THE SUN.
IF ANYTHING IS RED IN THE SUNLIGHT, IS IT RED WHEN IT'S PITCH DARK TOO?
THAT'S GETTING A BIT TOO DEEP FOR ME BUT I'D SAY NO.
THEN WHEN YOU TURN OFF THE LIGHT DO RED AN' BLUE AN' GREEN ALL GET BLACK?
I SUPPOSE THEY DO, SKEEZIX
I'M GOIN' TO LIGHT A MATCH REAL FAST IN THE DARK AN' FIND OUT.
COLOR DEPENDS ON LIGHT. THAT BLUE OCEAN MAY BE GREEN TOMORROW— OR PURPLE.
BUT OUR CAR IS ALWAYS DIRT COLOR ISN'T IT, UNCLE WALT?

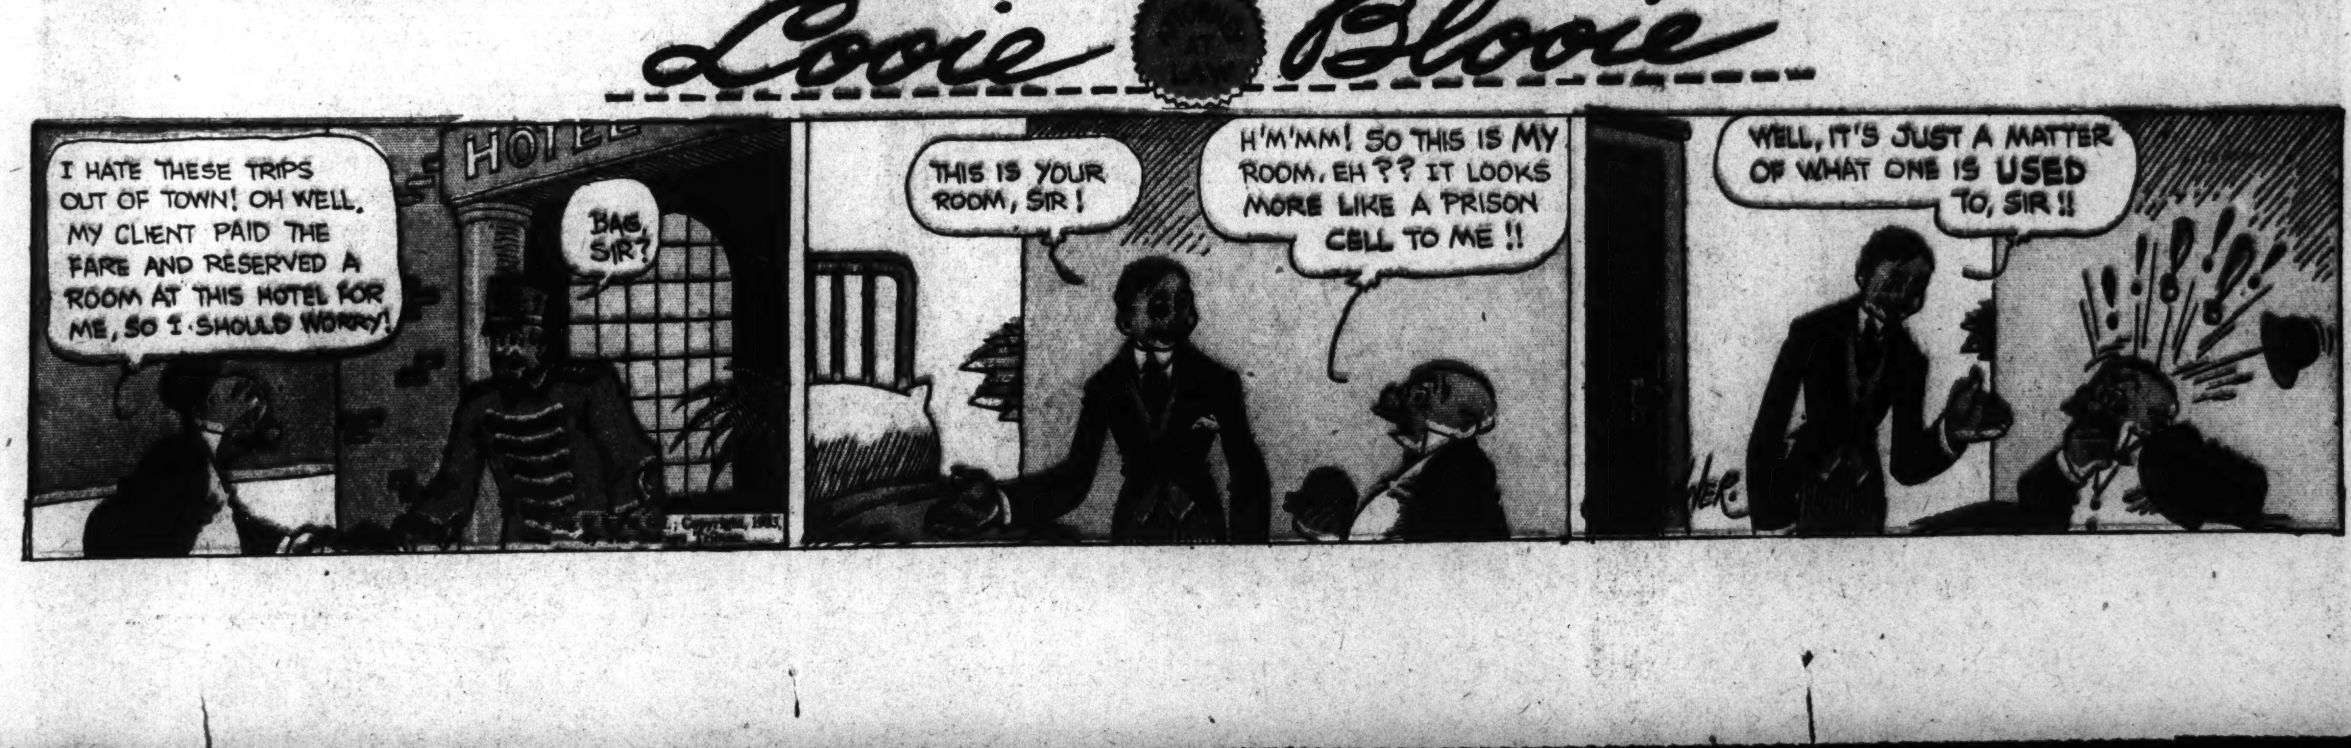
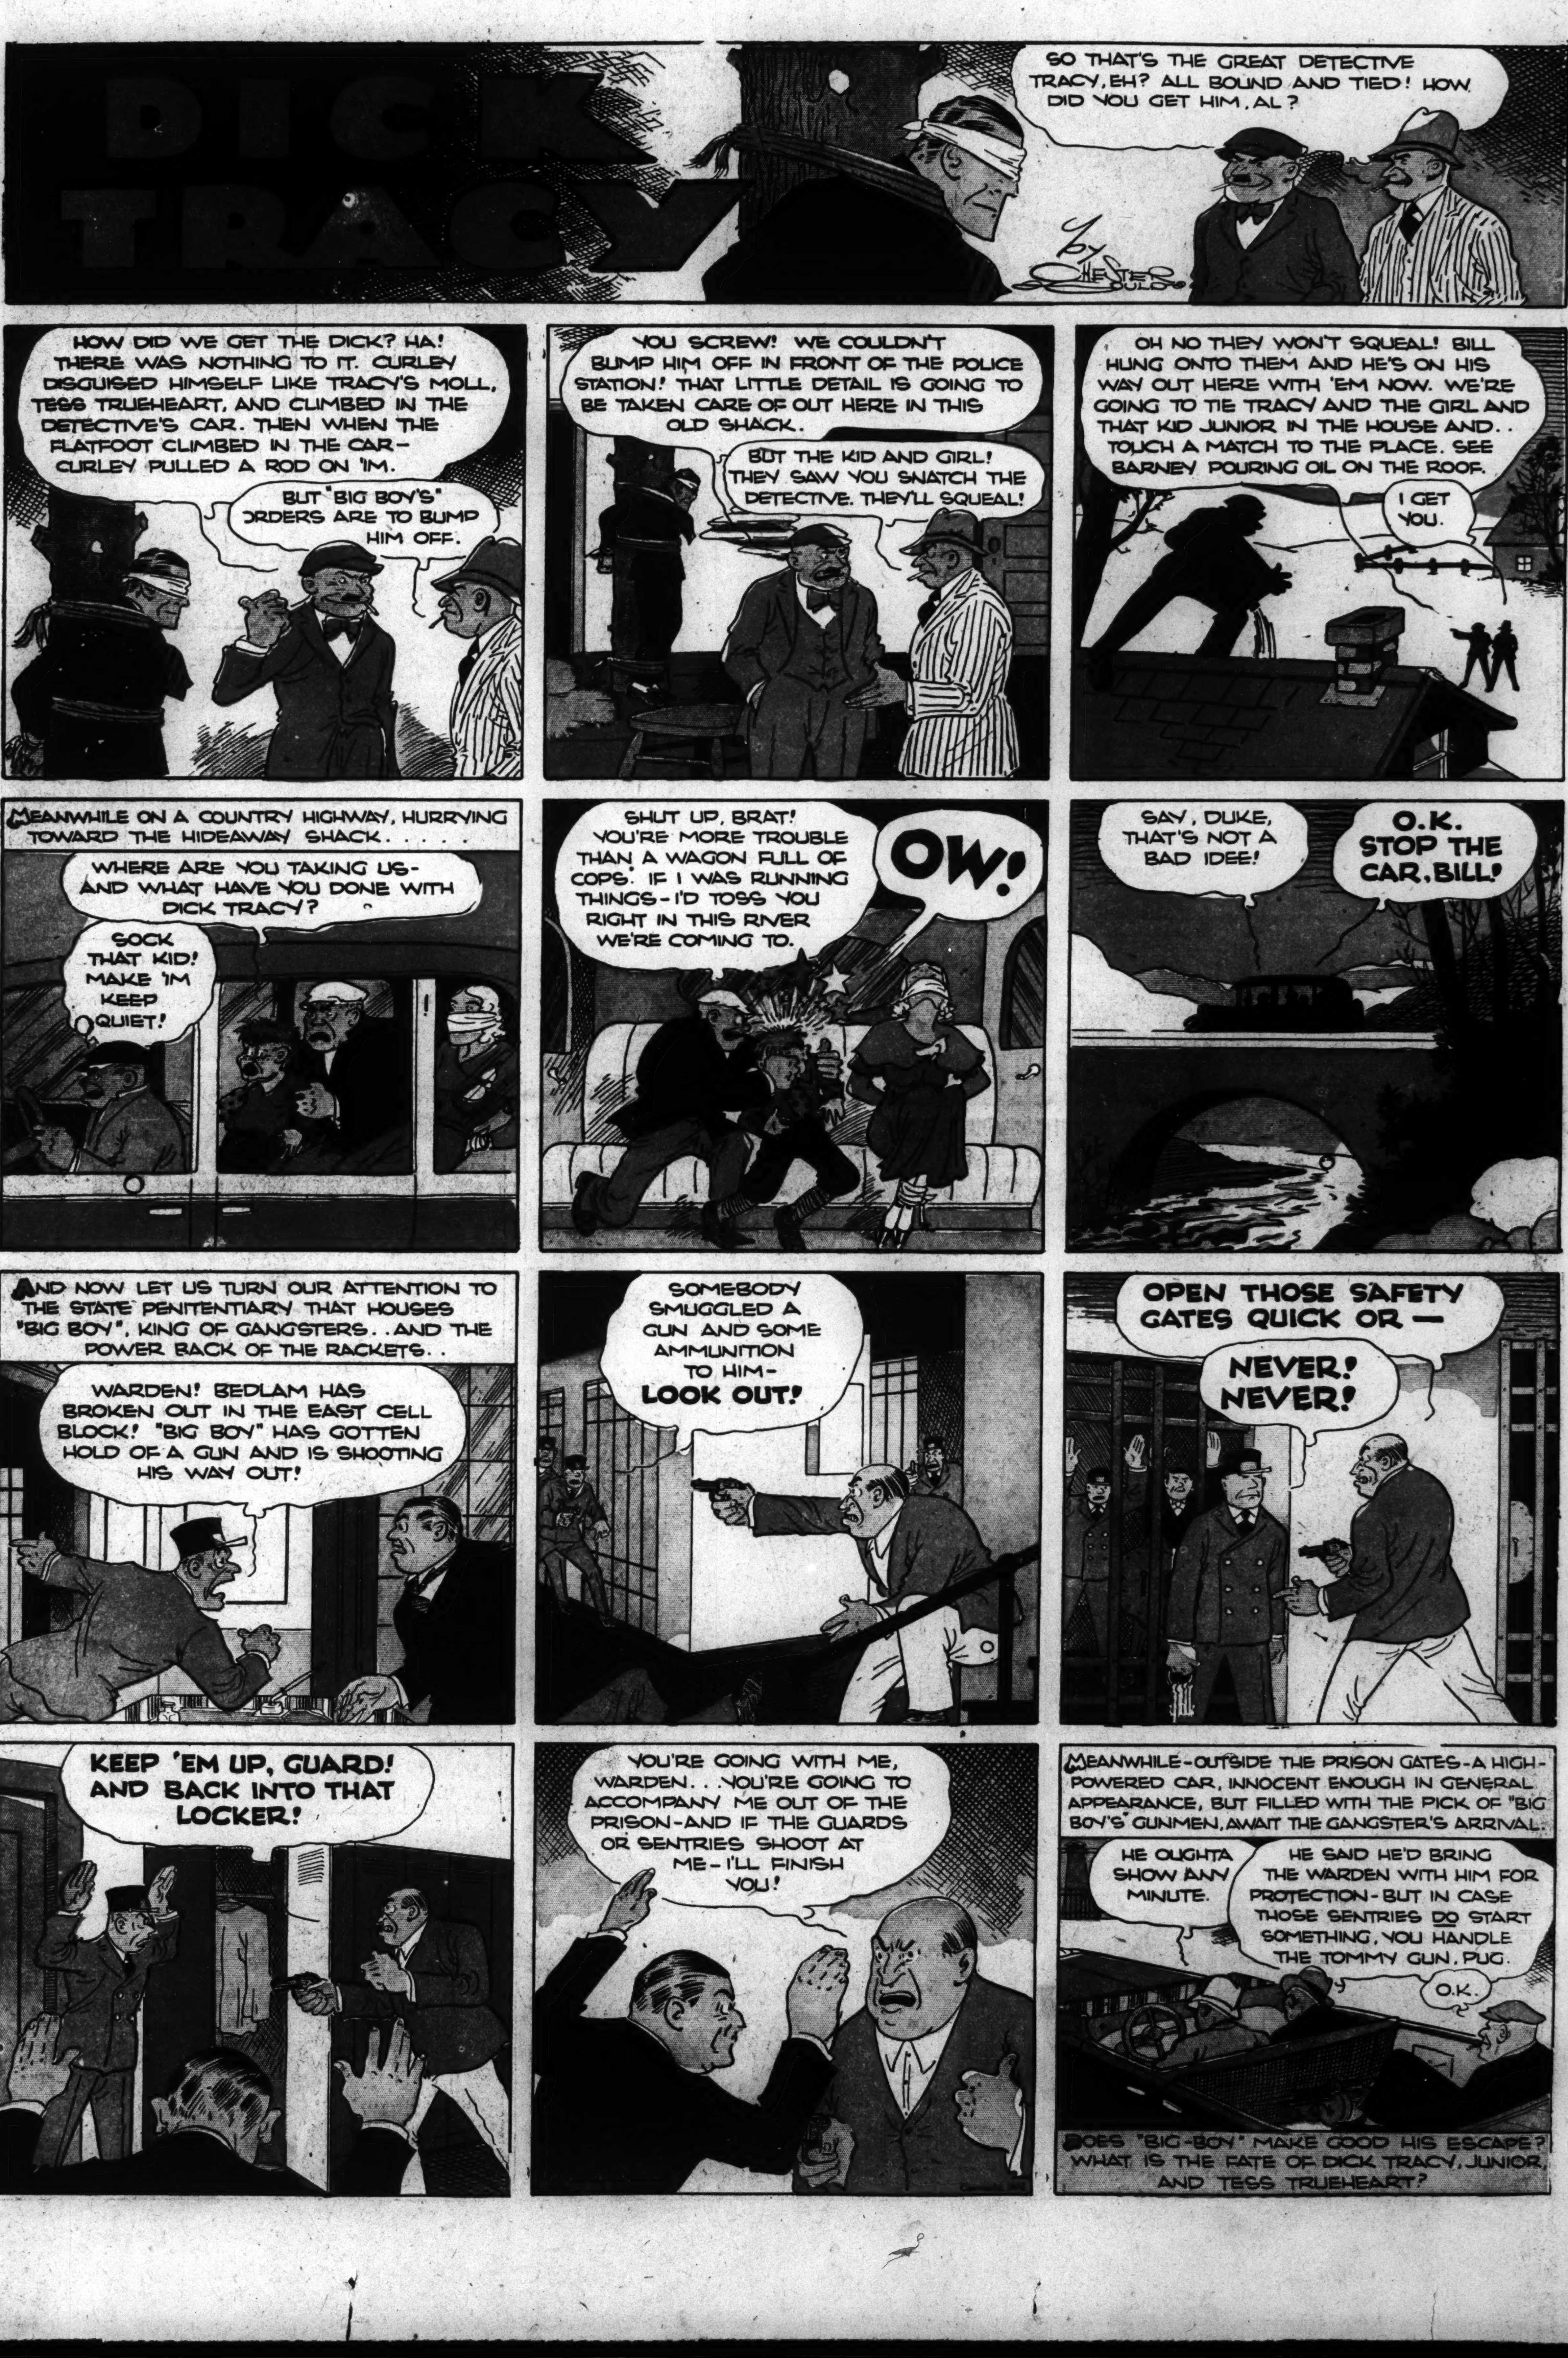
WELL, THAT'S WHAT Y'GET FER LENDIN' OTHER PEOPLE THINGS!! Y'NEVER GET 'EM BACK !!
AN' THAT WAS A GOOD RAKE, TOO !!
I'M AFRAID WE'LL NEVER SEE IT AGAIN! S'TOO BAD PEOPLE CAN'T RETURN THINGS THEY BORROW!
HEY, MOM, I'LL GET OUR RAKE BACK FROM MRS. GRUMPY!
WELL, PAW, AN' ME AN' WINNIE HAS BEEN OVER TO MRS. GRUMPY'S EVER SO OFTEN AN' WE COULDN'T GET IT BACK, PERRY !!
NO WONDER THEY CAN'T GET OUR RAKE BACK! MRS. GRUMPY'S A CRANKY OL' LADY! Y'GOTTA KNOW HOW TO HANDLE HER !!
HELLO, MRS. GRUMPY! GOSH, Y'LOOK SWELL TODAY! I JUST DROPPED IN TO SEE HOW YOU FEEL ??
FINE, PERRY! IT'S SWEET OF YOU TO ASK AFTER MY HEALTH!
OH, BY TH' WAY, MRS. GRUMPY, I WAS WONDERIN' IF BY CHANCE, I MIGHT BORROW BACK OUR RAKE?
WHY YES, PERRY! GOOD LAN'S I'D PLUMB FORGOT ABOUT THAT RAKE!
BUT FIRST WOULD YOU RUN AN ERRAND FOR ME TO TH' BUTCHER AN' TH' GROCER?
SURE! I'LL BE GLAD TO!
GEE WHIZ! THAT OL' LADY'S GOT A NERVE! MAKIN' ME WORK LIKE THIS TO GET MY OWN PROPERTY BACK!! WHEW!!!
YOUR RAKE IS DOWN THERE IN TH' CELLAR, PERRY!
YES MA'M! I GOT IT !!
WELL, HERE'S YER RAKE, MOM! I TOLD YOU I'D GET IT FOR YOU, DIDN'T I ??
PERRY!! THAT'S WONDERFUL OF YOU, DEAR!
NOW YOU CAN TAKE IT RIGHT OUTDOORS AN' RAKE UP ALL TH' LEAVES IN TH' YARD !!
OW!



Looie Blooie
I HATE THESE TRIPS OUT OF TOWN! OH WELL. MY CLIENT PAID THE FARE AND RESERVED A ROOM AT THIS HOTEL FOR ME, SO I SHOULD WORRY!
HOTEL
BAG, SIR?
THIS IS YOUR ROOM, SIR!
H'M'MM! SO THIS IS MY ROOM, EH ?? IT LOOKS MORE LIKE A PRISON CELL TO ME !!
WELL, IT'S JUST A MATTER OF WHAT ONE IS USED TO, SIR !!



DICK TRACY
SO THAT'S THE GREAT DETECTIVE TRACY, EH? ALL BOUND AND TIED! HOW DID YOU GET HIM, AL?
by CHESTER GOULD
HOW DID WE GET THE DICK? HA! THERE WAS NOTHING TO IT. CURLEY DISGUISED HIMSELF LIKE TRACY'S MOLL, TESS TRUEHEART, AND CLIMBED IN THE DETECTIVE'S CAR. THEN WHEN THE FLATFOOT CLIMBED IN THE CAR- CURLEY PULLED A ROD ON 'IM.
BUT "BIG BOY'S" ORDERS ARE TO BUMP HIM OFF.
YOU SCREW! WE COULDN'T BUMP HIM OFF IN FRONT OF THE POLICE STATION! THAT LITTLE DETAIL IS GOING TO BE TAKEN CARE OF OUT HERE IN THIS OLD SHACK.
BUT THE KID AND GIRL! THEY SAW YOU SNATCH THE DETECTIVE. THEY'LL SQUEAL!
OH NO THEY WON'T SQUEAL! BILL HUNG ONTO THEM AND HE'S ON HIS WAY OUT HERE WITH 'EM NOW. WE'RE GOING TO TIE TRACY AND THE GIRL AND THAT KID JUNIOR IN THE HOUSE AND.. TOUCH A MATCH TO THE PLACE. SEE BARNEY POURING OIL ON THE ROOF.
I GET YOU.
MEANWHILE ON A COUNTRY HIGHWAY, HURRYING TOWARD THE HIDEAWAY SHACK.....
WHERE ARE YOU TAKING US- AND WHAT HAVE YOU DONE WITH DICK TRACY?
SOCK THAT KID! MAKE 'IM KEEP QUIET!
SHUT UP, BRAT! YOU'RE MORE TROUBLE THAN A WAGON FULL OF COPS. IF I WAS RUNNING THINGS- I'D TOSS YOU RIGHT IN THIS RIVER WE'RE COMING TO.
OW!
SAY, DUKE, THAT'S NOT A BAD IDEE!
O.K. STOP THE CAR, BILL!
AND NOW LET US TURN OUR ATTENTION TO THE STATE PENITENTIARY THAT HOUSES "BIG BOY", KING OF GANGSTERS.. AND THE POWER BACK OF THE RACKETS..
WARDEN! BEDLAM HAS BROKEN OUT IN THE EAST CELL BLOCK! "BIG BOY" HAS GOTTEN HOLD OF A GUN AND IS SHOOTING HIS WAY OUT!
SOMEBODY SMUGGLED A GUN AND SOME AMMUNITION TO HIM- LOOK OUT!
OPEN THOSE SAFETY GATES QUICK OR — NEVER! NEVER!
KEEP 'EM UP, GUARD! AND BACK INTO THAT LOCKER!
YOU'RE GOING WITH ME, WARDEN... YOU'RE GOING TO ACCOMPANY ME OUT OF THE PRISON- AND IF THE GUARDS OR SENTRIES SHOOT AT ME- I'LL FINISH YOU!
MEANWHILE- OUTSIDE THE PRISON GATES- A HIGH-POWERED CAR, INNOCENT ENOUGH IN GENERAL APPEARANCE, BUT FILLED WITH THE PICK OF "BIG BOY'S" GUNMEN, AWAIT THE GANGSTER'S ARRIVAL.
HE OUGHTA SHOW ANY MINUTE.
HE SAID HE'D BRING THE WARDEN WITH HIM FOR PROTECTION- BUT IN CASE THOSE SENTRIES DO START SOMETHING, YOU HANDLE THE TOMMY GUN, PUG.
O.K.
DOES "BIG-BOY" MAKE GOOD HIS ESCAPE? WHAT IS THE FATE OF DICK TRACY, JUNIOR, AND TESS TRUEHEART?

FISHER'S HISTORY OF BOXING
10-22.
THE EARLY ROMAN CESTUS FIGHTING WAS NOT A TEST OF SKILL BUT RATHER BRUTALITY.
BUT IN THE EARLY PART OF THE EIGHTEENTH CENTURY A YOUNG ENGLISH LAD NAMED JAMES FIGG ESTABLISHED THE FIRST SCIENTIFIC BOXING AS A MEANS OF SELF-DEFENSE.
HIS BOXING WAS A COMBINATION OF PUNCHING AND WRESTLING. HE PRACTISED CONSTANTLY AND SOON HAD WHIPPED ALL THE YOUNG LOCALS WHO DARED SQUARE OFF WITH HIM.
THOU'RT A FOOL! DO YE THINK YE WILL BE A MATCH FOR THE BUTCHER'S BOY WHO CAN BEND AN IRON BAR EASILY?
VERILY THOU HAST BLACK MAGIC JAMES!
I DID NOT SEE THY BLOWS! YE FOUGHT SO FAST 'TWAS LIKE LIGHT STREAKS I VOW!
BRING ON THY HUSKIES ONE AND ALL!
HOW DID YE TROUNCE HIM SO THOROUGHLY, JIM?

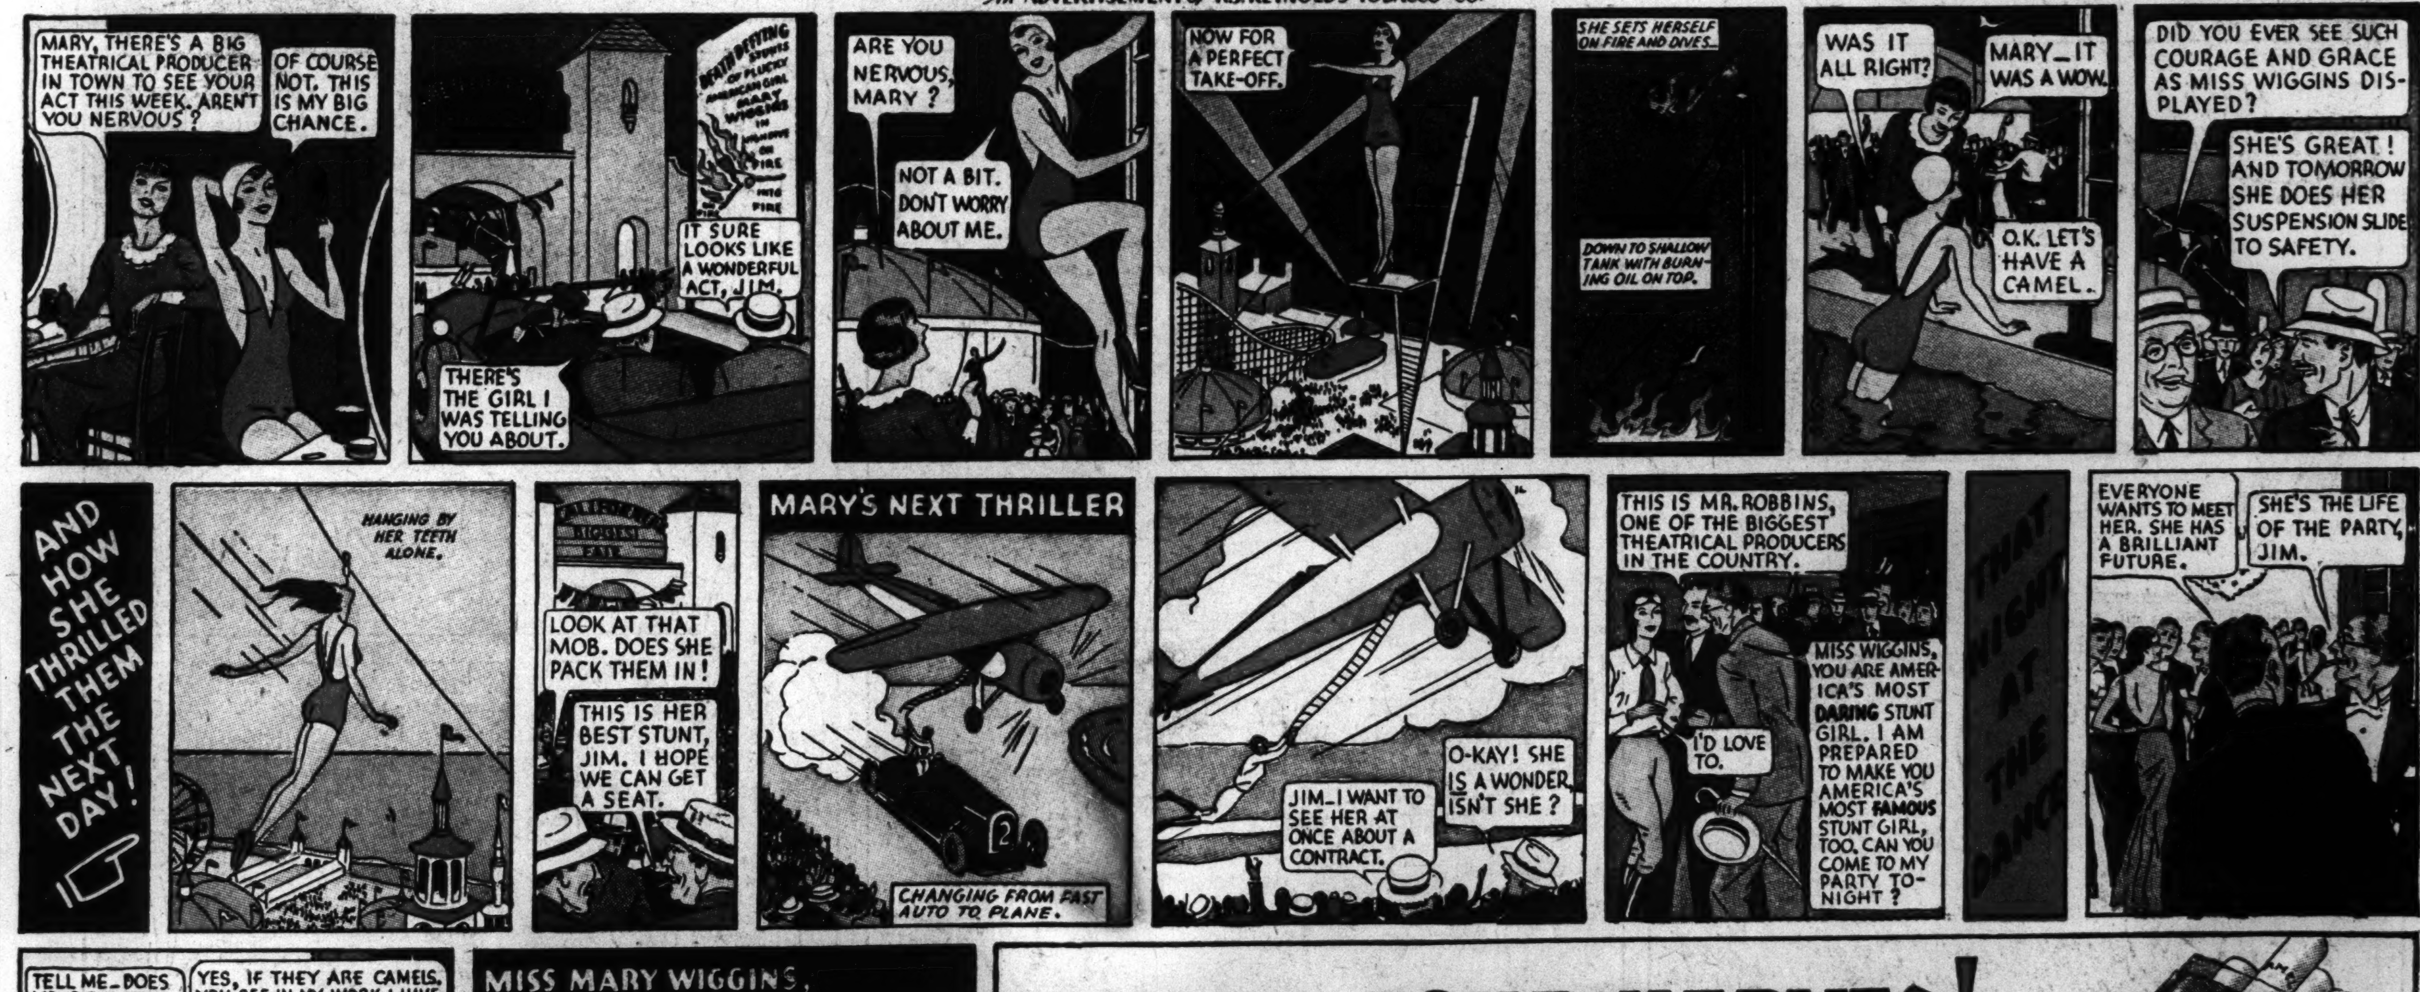
IT TAKES HEALTHY NERVES FOR MARY WIGGINS TO BE AMERICA'S GREATEST STUNT GIRL

HOW ARE YOUR NERVES?

An ADVERTISEMENT of R.J. REYNOLDS TOBACCO CO.

Copyright, 1933, R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Company



MARY, THERE'S A BIG THEATRICAL PRODUCER IN TOWN TO SEE YOUR ACT THIS WEEK. AREN'T YOU NERVOUS?
OF COURSE NOT. THIS IS MY BIG CHANCE.
DEATH DEFYING STUNTS OF PLUCKY AMERICAN GIRL MARY WIGGINS
IT SURE LOOKS LIKE A WONDERFUL ACT, JIM.
THERE'S THE GIRL I WAS TELLING YOU ABOUT.
ARE YOU NERVOUS, MARY?
NOT A BIT. DON'T WORRY ABOUT ME.
NOW FOR A PERFECT TAKE-OFF.
SHE SETS HERSELF ON FIRE AND DIVES...
DOWN TO SHALLOW TANK WITH BURNING OIL ON TOP.
WAS IT ALL RIGHT?
MARY—IT WAS A WOW.
O.K. LET'S HAVE A CAMEL.
DID YOU EVER SEE SUCH COURAGE AND GRACE AS MISS WIGGINS DISPLAYED?
SHE'S GREAT! AND TOMORROW SHE DOES HER SUSPENSION SLIDE TO SAFETY.
AND HOW SHE THRILLED THEM THE NEXT DAY!
HANGING BY HER TEETH ALONE.
LOOK AT THAT MOB. DOES SHE PACK THEM IN!
THIS IS HER BEST STUNT, JIM. I HOPE WE CAN GET A SEAT.
MARY'S NEXT THRILLER
CHANGING FROM FAST AUTO TO PLANE.
JIM—I WANT TO SEE HER AT ONCE ABOUT A CONTRACT.
O-KAY! SHE IS A WONDER, ISN'T SHE?
THIS IS MR. ROBBINS, ONE OF THE BIGGEST THEATRICAL PRODUCERS IN THE COUNTRY.
MISS WIGGINS, YOU ARE AMERICA'S MOST DARING STUNT GIRL. I AM PREPARED TO MAKE YOU AMERICA'S MOST FAMOUS STUNT GIRL, TOO. CAN YOU COME TO MY PARTY TONIGHT?
I'D LOVE TO.
THAT NIGHT AT THE DANCE
EVERYONE WANTS TO MEET HER. SHE HAS A BRILLIANT FUTURE.
SHE'S THE LIFE OF THE PARTY, JIM.

TELL ME—DOES YOUR EXACTING WORK PERMIT YOU TO SMOKE MANY CIGARETTES?
YES, IF THEY ARE CAMELS. YOU SEE IN MY WORK I HAVE TO CHOOSE MY CIGARETTES CAREFULLY. MY EXPERIENCE WITH CIGARETTES HAS BEEN THIS—
MISS MARY WIGGINS, AMERICA'S GREATEST STUNT GIRL, says—
I'VE TRIED ALL THE BRANDS AND I KNOW THAT CAMELS ARE MILDER AND BETTER IN FLAVOR. THEY DO NOT GIVE ME EDGY NERVES EVEN WHEN I AM SMOKING A LOT AND WORKING HARD.

WATCH YOUR NERVES!

THIS MILDER CIGARETTE IS MADE FROM FINER, MORE EXPENSIVE TOBACCOS THAN ANY OTHER POPULAR BRAND. CAMEL PAYS MILLIONS MORE—FOR YOUR ENJOYMENT. CHANGE TO CAMELS. YOU WILL LIKE THEM BETTER... AND FIND THAT CAMELS DO NOT INTERFERE WITH HEALTHY NERVES.

CAMEL
TURKISH & DOMESTIC BLEND CIGARETTES

I'M GONNA MAKE A POET OUT OF YOU— PUT A FLAME IN YOUR HEAD
THERE'S LOTS OF HEADS THAT WOULD BE IMPROVED BY REMOVING THE BRAINS AND STUFFING THEM WITH PUNKIN... MINE'S LIKE THAT... I'D MAKE A SWELL PIE...
BREAKS MY HEART TO THINK OF ALL THAT PUNKIN PIE GOING TO WASTE.
AW, SHUT UP!
I'VE BEEN WATCHIN' THAT PUNKIN GROW FROM CHILDHOOD. BOY! WHAT A LANTERN IT'LL MAKE!

BELINDA! WHAT BRINGS YOU TO HAITI, THIS LAND OF BLACK SORCERY ?!
JUST THE USUAL THING - A BOAT TRIP! BUT, YOU ... ??
OH, A PAINT MANUFACTURER'S WILD DREAM THAT SOME RARE PIGMENTS ARE HIDDEN HEREABOUT! IT INVOLVES OLD FRENCH SECRET FORMULAS AND PIRACY - A PLAIN MYTH, I SUSPECT!
PIGMENTS!? ISN'T THAT WHAT WE CALL FOOTBALLS BACK HOME ?
PIG-SKINS, MY DEAR! PIGMENTS ARE WHAT PAINT IS MADE FROM! AND BY THE WAY - IF WE WERE BACK HOME, I'LL BET WE'D BE IN THE MIDST OF A GOOD OL' FOOTBALL GAME ABOUT NOW!!
I CAN SEE ONE OF THOSE DUCKY CHEER LEADERS CARRYING THE PIG-STY THIS MINUTE
T'ARRETTES TU!! STOP!! A BOMB IS SO CRUDE! IF YOU MUST DESTROY THOSE TWO, WHY NOT EMPLOY BLACK MAGIC?
THAT COLLAR-AD AND HIS SWEETIE ARE DOWN HERE SEEKING THE SAME PRIZE I SEEK! WILL YOUR BLACK MAGIC REALLY BUMP 'EM OFF?
LOOK! HEREIN IS A CROW'S CLAW - A FRIED SOAP BUBBLE - SOME THREAD FROM A HANGMAN'S SOCK, AND A WART FROM A CROSS EYED TOAD! IT IS THE MURDER OUANGA - OR DEATH CHARM!
HOT DAWG! HOW MUCH DOES THAT MISCHIEVOUS MIXTURE COST?
I SHALL STREW THE CHARM ACROSS THEIR PATHS FOR 100 FRANCS -
HERE'S 500 FRANCS!! MAKE THAT SORCERY AN A1 GUARANTEED JOB!!
SO THE VOODOO SIGN IS ON HARRY AND BELINDA! AND TO MAKE SURE IT WORKS, RUDY'S SORCERER HAS HIRED A FEW LOCAL HOODLUMS TO GIVE 'EM THE BUM'S RUSH!
HARRY! THOSE NATIVES! THEY'RE WIELDING KNIVES AND HEADING STRAIGHT FOR US!!
I DON'T UNDERSTAND IT, BUT IT'S US THEY'RE AFTER, ALL RIGHT!
COME ON, WE'LL GIVE 'EM A SCRIMMAGE! FOLLOW YOUR INTERFERENCE AND USE THE OL' STRAIGHT ARM!!
I GET IT! JUST LIKE IN BASEBALL! RICKETY RATZ! KICK THEIR SLATS! EAST HIGH!! RAH-RAH-RAH!
NOW! GRAB A COCOANUT! WATCH THIS FORWARD!! WHEE!! IT KNOCKED 'IM FOR A TEN YARD LOSS!
HECK! THAT BLACK MAGIC IS A LOT OF BOLONEY!!
HARRY! HIT THE GROUND! IT'S A BOMB!!
WHAM!!
Copyright, [illegible], by Public Ledger
YOU WARNED ME JUST IN TIME, BELINDA! GREAT SCOTT!! LOOK AT THE OLD CASKS IN THAT HOLE THE BOMB MADE!!??
DID YOU EVER SEE SUCH PRETTY COLORED DUST!!? WHY - IT'S THAT PIGSKIN PAINT YOU WERE SEARCHING FOR!! - MAYBE THE BLACK MAGIC DIDN'T WORK BECAUSE THE WHITE MAGIC IS NO GOOD!
WHAT D'YA MEAN?
HE MEANS THOSE FRANC NOTES YOU GAVE HIM ARE PHONEY! YOU'RE PINCHED!
THIS FIND IS WORTH $50,000 TO MY FIRM! I MAY GET A $5 RAISE, DEAR -
YOU WON'T LET SUCCESS TURN YOUR HEAD, HARRY! PROMISE?

AH--HA! I THOUGHT SO! YOUNG TUBBY HAS BEEN HERE - ONE PIE GONE - JUST WAIT 'TILL I CATCH HIM!
DON'T TRY TO EXPLAIN! YOU GO RIGHT TO YOUR ROOM AND STAY THERE -
BUT MOM -
MOM MAKES ME STAY HERE IN MY ROOM AND WON'T TELL ME WHY OR ANYTHING -- I DIDN'T DO ANYTHING -
MOM! I JUST SAW A TRAMP IN OUR ALLEY - AND HE WAS EATING A WHOLE PIE -
WHAAAT? - THEN HE -- THEN - TUBBY DIDN'T - OH - DEAR -- - TELL TUBBY TO COME DOWN STAIRS - I WANT TO SEE HIM -
CAN'T YOU EAT ANOTHER SODA, TUBBY? I'LL GET YOU A BOX OF CANDY BEFORE WE GO TO THE MOVIES -

In Deed Book, Volume 7, Page 25, of the records of the county Sullivan, state of Pennsylvania, may be found recorded one of the strangest indentures ever written. It is the instrument by which Peter E. Armstrong, and his wife, Hannah, conveyed title of their lands to Almighty God.

Written into the deed is this strangely moving, yet simple statement of the faith of Peter Armstrong and his wife:

"Whereas, in consideration of the kind, protecting cure of Almighty God in the past and present, which we do hereby acknowledge, and for the exceeding great and precious promise of unending life to those who in holy faith and patience wait for the coming of His anointed Son to judge the world, which promises we have received from Him who is creator and original grantor of earth's territory to the children of men, we do, by these presents, deed, grant and convey to Almighty God, who inhabiteth Eternity, and to His heirs in Jesus Messiah, to the intent that it shall be subject to bargain and sale by man's cupidity no more forever, all our right and title (by human law), interest and claim of any nature soever in or to, of that certain tract of land and improvements thereof lying and being in the county of Sullivan and state of Pennsylvania . . . ." Following this is a legal description of the property.

Ironically enough the land was not long to remain a legal possession of the Deity. Taxes being left unpaid, the land was taken over by the authorities and sold for the delinquency. Strange as it seems, today part of the land is owned by Taylor Armstrong, a descendant of Peter Armstrong.
